Your King and Country Need You. What Reason Can You Give for Not Enlisting in the Bruce Battalion?

Communication

Nipigon, Ont., Dec 22, 1915.
Editor The Echo
Wiarton, Ontario.

Dear Sir.—When I was leaving Wiarton to come to Nipigon you asked me to write you a letter telling about some of the interesting things to be found here. This is the letter.

Nipigon is about the size of Hepworth, and is located about five miles up from the mouth of Nipigon River, which is the main "feeder" of L. Superior. It is at the mouth of the river that the famous "Pictured Rocks" are found. Vessels drawing over nine feet of water can come up to our wharfs here, but further up the river are rapids, rocks and falls interspersed of course with long stretches of beautiful water, sometimes called lakes. If you can imagine Colpoy's Bay made narrower and a large river in place of the bay, you will have a good idea of the scenery. The rocks instead of being limestone are of granite—dark in some places and red in others. It makes the Glacial Period seem real to me, for here are the rocks from which the "hard-heads" in the fields around Wiarton come. Of course the trees are all spruce, pine or birch, and the children here have never seen maple or beech trees.

In the summer and fall this is a veritable Sportsman's Paradise. The rivers and lakes teem with fish and in the forest are bears, wolves, caribou, moose, red deer and even beavers. The latter are protected at present but they have increased in such numbers that I believe the protective law is to be repealed for a time anyway. In the summer we have tourists from all over the world and the river is gay with the canoes (some of the Indian ones of birch bark) gasoline launches, sail boats, pulp-wood tugs and other craft.

The largest brook trout ever caught (or at least certified to by good authority) was caught in Nipigon River last summer by Dr. Cook, of Fort William. It weighed 14½ lbs and was 31½ inches long. The skin was mounted on birch bark by the Indian guides, and I believe was forwarded to Ottawa. They reported there that the former worlds record belonged to Maine but this established a new one. When the Duke of Connaught went through a few months ago, he asked for more details and was very much disappointed when he found that the fish had not put up much of a 'fight'. The sportsmen here say that those fish weighing from four to five pounds put up the best fight. I enclose a picture of the fish as it is held up by one of my fourth-book pupils. Please return the photo as it is the only one left here.

This is a real Hudson Bay Post, and nearly everyone has a dog team. It is very interesting to me to see the Indians come flying in with their long low sleds piled with furs. Four dogs make a team and they are hitched in single file. They can go fast too, but run-aways are both frequent and serious. I saw an Indian yesterday who had come down from the head of L. Nipigon with his dog-team, just imagine, a distance of about one hundred miles.

In the town we have water-works, sewer system, telephone, pool rooms restaurants, chinese laundry etc., but as soon as you step out of the town it is like a new country.

Yours truly.

Robert Gatis.

At Hymen's Altar

HYATT—HILL

An extremely pretty wedding with a very pretty bride was solemnized at the home of Mr and Mrs John Hill, Mar. Wednesday Dec 29, when their only daughter, Mabel, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr Wm. J. Hyatt of this place.

As the clock chimed the hour of seven to the strains of, Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss B. Kay, the bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father and took her place beneath an arch of pines and white roses. She was elaborately dressed in pale blue silk chiffon over satin and wore a wreath of white flowers in her hair.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Geo. Robertson of the Presbyterian church in the presence of a large number of guests. While the registor was being signed Miss B. Kay sang the accustomed selection

After congratulations had been received the bride led the way to the prettily decorated dining-room where a sumptuous repast was served; the guests being waited on by the members of the Presbyterian choir. The evening was spent in music and games.

Among the numerous presents that the bride received were a gold locket set with pearls and amethyst and chain from the groom also a beautiful large mantle clock, presented by the choir of which she has been a valued member for several years.

The bride and groom left early for Wiarton where they took the train for points south, the bride travelling in a navy suit with hat to match. On their return they will take up their residence on Mr Hyatt's farm. The best wishes of their many friends here will go with them all through life.

WALKER—LITSTER

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr and Mrs. James Litster, "Maplehurst Farm" North Keppel, on Wednesday, Dec. 29th, when their elder daughter Mary B. (May) was married to James S. Walker, of Owen Sound. The Rev Geo. Young, of St Pauls Presbyterian Church, Kemble, officiated assisted by A. H. Wallis. The bride was given away by her father and carried a boquet of cream roses and romans and wore a gown of ashes of roses satin messaline. She was unattended and the guests were limited to the immediate relatives. Mrs. Geo, H. Musgrove, of Hanover, the bride's sister played the wedding march and after the ceremony Mrs. P. C. Litster sang "Because". The house was tastefully decorated with roses, carnations and ferns. After dinner Mr and Mrs. Walker left on a short wedding trip and will reside at 1735 Seventh Ave West Owen Sound where Mrs Walker will be at home to her friends after Feb. 1st. The brides going away suit was bronze broadcloth with hat and furs to match,

Who's Who In Wiarton

Mayor Baines has entered upon his second year of municipal life for no matter how much qualification a man may possess municipal life is a thing by itself. He was a very successful High School Principal and is now an Insurance Agent with a large business. In last years council, as Chairman of Finance, he became thoroughly familiar with the towns position. He forms his own opinion, and once that he has come to a conclusion and is convinced that he is right, he sticks to it. As the position of Mayor demands of the official lots of hard work, he is the man for the job. He is a native of Markdale, but has been a resident of Wiarton for many years.

Reeve Kastner's father came from Alsace, France. His grandfather was George Kastner an old soldier in the grand army of Napoleon. They came to Canada in 1832 and settled in Elliot Township. Mr. John Kastner father of Reeve Kastner, became a leading man in his district, was Reeve of the Township several times, and was a Captain of a Volunteer Corps during the rebellion of 1837. Reeve Kastner, like his father, has a fondness for Municipal life, and the Military blood of his sires is now showing in his veins. He is making a bee line for the Wardens chair and he will get there.

Dick Crane, who ran the towns bush for last year was a poor collector but will be promoted this year to the position of Minister of Finance. Dick is a drover, always gives the farmer a few dollars more than the animal is worth, but always sells well so he can stay with the game.

Alf Hurlbut, builder and contractor got there with two feet although there were some who refused to throw any boquets his way. One of his qualifications for the office is his independence. He intends to make a big improvement in the lights and the big are light will disappear as soon as possible. If he puts a light at the end of Berford street south this year he will atone for his sin of omission last year.

Without any slur to answer for George Kempt, merchant, headed the poll, and George Kempt is a good merchant. It is always bargain day on Frank street, and when he wants a holiday he just closes up the shop, pulls down the curtains and goes off. He is the only merchant in Canada who can do this and come back to his business.

John McVannel, liverymon, is a splendid a dditon to any Council. He is a worker, has been Street Commissioner for the past two years and he attends to his job. Just as long as he runs for the Council he should be elected.

F. W. Plante is the kind of a man who will instantly object to a thing if it does not suit him. He is a decorator with a fondness for Municipal life. He thought one year not long enough so he has taken two.

The best shot in the whole Council is Stephen Pope, he can get a partridge on the wing, or a rabbit going faster than 2-40. He, too, is a decorator, which shows that these gentlemen are well represented in the Council. He is always at the Council meeting and thinks for himself.

The vote Monday was as follows

| | North Ward | South Ward | East Ward | West Ward | Total |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Ashcroft | 48 | 30 | 28 | 34 | 140 |
| Crane | 26 | 36 | 42 | 42 | 146 |
| Hurlbut | 29 | 46 | 49 | 44 | 168 |
| Kempt | 28 | 60 | 62 | 46 | 196 |
| McVannel | 31 | 49 | 61 | 39 | 180 |
| Pope | 30 | 43 | 39 | 44 | 156 |
| Plante | 30 | 44 | 55 | 46 | 175 |

Council elected—Mayor Baines, Reeve Kastner, Messrs. Crane, Hurlbut, Kempt, McVannel, Pope, Plante. The vote was not one half so large as last year.

Who's Who In Albemarle

Reeve Whicher has fought two battles this year. In the first battle he smote the Bruce County Council hip and thigh and forced them to surrender, his terms of peace being a 40 per cent reduction of the County rate. The last big battle he fought was in his own Township Monday in order to hold down his job and many in their innocence said that he would be defeated and that the thermometer would register about 40 degrees below zero in Colpoys that night, but it didn't. Reeve Whicher did not stay at home and try to win the election the way Tarte said it couldn't be won. He held public meetings in every school house, he saw every voter, and saw that they all got to the polls. The fight against him was the fiercest in the history of Albemarle, and so it is likely from this out the enemy will regard the fortifications as impregnable, Reeve Whicher is a busy man, he has a large general store at Colpoys, operates a large saw mill and is one of the most successful business men in this district. It is because he has large holdings in Albemarle that he gives so much time to Municipal matters.

Sam Adams who heads the poll for the position as Councillor has been on the job before and he can get there again about any time that he wants to. He is a farmer at Adamsville, is popular with the people and all that he has to do is to come out and he is a sure winner. It is probable that he is opposed to the present system of road work in Albemark and if so, while Reeve Whicher is elected the road work system will be defeated.

Dougald Couch made an excellent run, and he deserves to get there because he is a good Councillor. He is one of the progressive farmers of the Township and he is the kind of stuff that Reeves are made of.

Will Weir got there, sure he did, he was another kicker and was not asked to get in the band waggon, and had to hoof it all by himself, but Will has always a smile and "the boys" will always give him a lift. His father, the late Andrew Weir, was Reeve of Albemarle for many years and his son has many of his qualities.

Charlie Craig, Purple Valley, takes his old seat again at the Council board. Of course this is not quite according to program. It was intended that he should stop at home and saw wood this winter and hoe corn next summer, but the ratepayers said no and so he is back at his old job. He was a kicker, but kicking pays.

The returns on Monday were as follows

| For Reeve | Purple Valley | Adamsville | Colpoys | Mar | Red Bay | Total |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Given | 30 | 16 | 30 | 40 | 9 | 125 |
| Whicher | 32 | 30 | 80 | 18 | 25 | 186 |
| For Councillor | | | | | | |
| Adams | 28 | 34 | 40 | 27 | 10 | 139 |
| Ashcroft | 12 | 2 | 28 | 11 | 15 | 68 |
| Couch | 28 | 24 | 60 | 14 | 10 | 136 |
| Craig | 12 | 18 | 41 | 37 | 12 | 130 |
| Lemcke | 11 | 10 | 62 | 7 | 10 | 100 |
| McGarvey | 6 | 7 | 22 | 37 | 19 | 91 |
| Weir | 21 | 28 | 34 | 37 | 17 | 139 |
| White | 4 | 8 | 23 | 7 | 1 | 37 |

Council elect—Reeve Whicher and Messrs Adams, Couch, Weir and Craig.

The name of M. White appeared on the ballot through an error; he was not a candidate.

Dear Miss Litster

We the Pastor and members desire to ask your acceptance of this accompanying purse of money as a token of esteem and appreciation of the services so willingly and unselfishly rendered to North Keppel Church. We do desire to express upon this the occasion of your marriage, that you may be long spared to enjoy God's most precious gifts throughout your married life. Your association with us will ever be one of life's richest memories, as we are sure your labor in this corner of the Master's vineyard will be one of your happiest thoughts.

We sincerely trust that the new sphere to which you are called may benefit by your labors and interest as we have done, and that their appreciation will be as sincere as ours is.

Owen Sound

There are nearly 150 recruits in the different towns in the southern part of the county, ready to join the 147th (Grey) Battalion, and this morning arrangements were completed by military authorities for a for a special train to bring these men to Owen Sound. The special will be run Wednesday next, January 5th and will leave Hanover at 12.15 o'clock, and Durham a half hour later. The train will go south as far as Dundalk and stop at Markdale. At each of these towns quit a number of men have enlisted and will boards the train. At Durham especially is there quite a large number. At each place the citizens are preparing to give the boys a send-off. The total number in the Grey county Battalion is now over 600 men, considerable over half the number required.

Three cases of whiskey consigned to persons in Owen Sound were seized recently by Inspector Beckett at the Canadian Express office and if there are owners for the wet goods they will have an opportunity of making good their claims at the police cort this (Friday) afternoon at 2.30. One of the cases is addressed to Mrs. Bolton, one to Dr. Sutherland, and the third to W. C. Meyers. There is no person by the name of Dr. Sutherland at present residing in Owen Sound so far as is known and it will be interesting to learn whether anyone is willing to stand sponsor for a professional man of that name.

Reports from Mr. F. W. Harrison this morning are that he spent a restful night and that he is much easier than he has been for some days. Dr. Caven of Toronto, came up on Wednesday and was in consultation with Dr. T. H. Middlebro, the patient's physician. The opinio was expressed that while conditions were about as critical as they could be, Mr. Harrison still has a fighting chance. The greatest care is being taken to admit of absolute quiet

For the first time this season wheat reached the high water mark on the Owen Sound market Wednesday afternoon when one dollar was paid for two loads of No. 1 quality. This was quit a break from 90 to 96c. the ruling figure in the earlier part of the day. A considerable quantity of the wheat brought to market this season shows signs of sprouting in consequence of the wet weather that set in before the crop was harvested. The two loads in question, however, was free from spot or blemish of any kind and was therefore bid up to the dollar notch.

Other grain show a tendency to remain a normal price, bu ley going at 54c to 55c and oats at 34c to 35c. Dairy roll butter has dropped a cent or two within the last few days, 29 cents being the ruling figure yesterday. Eggs are still keeping up in price though a week or so of milb weather just now may cause a drop. Local offerings are scarce and price remaining firm at from 35c to 36c.

Walkerton

Capt. Arthur McNally, who has come home from England to accept the adjutancy of the new 160th Bruce Regiment, arrived home on the noon train Wednesday. A large crowd of citizens were present at the station to give the Captain a hearty welcome home. Capt. McNally's second wound is almost better, and he to pitch in right away in his new duties.

The appointment of Quartermaster of the 160th Regiment has gone to Mr. Allan Todd, an old Walkerton boy, who was one of the first of the old Bruce Boys to hurry home to join the County Regiment. Mr. Todd has been travelling for a Winnipeg firm out of Saskatoon, and has the ability and business experience which would thoroughly equip him for his new duties. Allan Todd was one of the two representatives of the 32nd Regiment to attend the Coronation of King Edward VII in Old London in 1902. He is well thought of in the old town and the appointment is a popular one.

Capt. Ross Clark, who was in command of the Wireless Guard at Tobermory, and who has now enlisted with the Bruce Battalion, left here on Tuesday for the Peninsula to release the defenders and close up the station for the winter. This is the first time the wireless works have been shut down since the war started, and by closing it out some fourteen men will be released for service elsewhere. Of this number Corp. Jack Clark is signing up with the military band, while Sergt Joseph Reichenbach and Pte Walter Eidt will likely enroll in the 160th Bruce Battalion. The rest of the crew are Northern men and will likely be booked for overseas service by the recruiting staff at Wiarton.

When a certain G.T.R. car left Walkerton, the load sealed in it, according to the shipper, Andrew Ditner, consisted of 76 hogs. When it reached the Union Station, Toronto, it contained, according to the police, 76 hogs plus one 150 lb calf that had been smothered to death. How did the calf get in the car? This was the question which puzzled Magistrate Kingsford at the Toronto Police Court, and which resulted in Mr. Ditner being summoned on the cruelty charge of loading the calf in the car without giving it proper accommodation and which resulted in its death. As Mr. Ditner swore that there was no calf in the car when it left Walkerton and that he knew nothing whatever about the animal, the Toronto magistrate gave up the riddle and marked the case dismissed. The Bruce County shipper, who is a brother of Mrs. Gill of town, believes that the dead calf was slipped into the car at the other end and that someone here tried to bunco him into paying a fine,

When a fellow is convicted of theft or some other crime it is a common practise in various parts of Canada these days for the culprit's lawyer to suggest that the prisoner be let off on condition that he enlist for the front. And now that Bruce County is recruiting a battalion it is a scheme of escape for the prisoners that will no doubt be attempted in many Walkerton courts in the future. Turning convicted criminals in among the splendid young fellow who enlist is, we hope, a stunt that will never be pulled off in Bruce. That such a ruse is detrimental to recruiting there can be no doubt, for one known jail-bird in their midst is enough to keep all hands uneasy about the safety of their possessions, and is a small inducement to hold out to young men to come and reside in the same tent where the light-fingered one is prowling about. The Bruce Battalion is so far free from this species of recruits, and we hope our local courts won't make the mistake of thinking they are aiding the Old Flag by turning convicts into the fold, for the advertisement that one has gone in is enough to keep scores of better fellows out.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

TO DOUBLE ARMY.

Canada's Overseas Forces Will Be Increased to 500,000 Men.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—The Dominion of Canada will double its overseas army. An increase of 100 per cent. in the authorized total for overseas service was announced by Sir Robert Borden in a notable New Year message to the Canadian people. "Yesterday," he said, "the authorized forces of Canada numbered 250,000, and the number enlisted was rapidly approaching that limit. To-day, the first day of the new year, our authorized force will be 500,000. This announcement is made in token of Canada's unflinching resolve to crown the justice of our cause and an abiding peace."

Only a little over a month ago announcement was made of the Government's authorization of 250,000 men as Canada's total force. Now, almost on its heels, comes the doubling of this number of fighting men. It will be a big task for the military organization of the Dominion, for its means that what has been done in the way of enlistment will have to be duplicated.

STEAMER PERSIA SUNK

Passenger Liner Destroyed by Submarine in Mediterranean

Nearly 250 Passengers Were Drowned as a Result of Outrage Committed Without Warning—U. S. Consul General McNeely Drowned on Way to Aden, Arabia—Big Ship Went Down in Five Minutes.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The British steamer Persia, of the Peninsula and Oriental Line, was sunk in the Mediterranean by a submarine on Thursday at 1 p.m. The Persia was torpedoed without warning, and sank in five minutes.

No warning was given the Persia before the torpedo was launched, according to authoritative information which it is reliably understood Robert P. Skinner, American Consul-General here, has in his possession.

Out of a total of 400 passengers and crew on the steamer only 153 were saved. This number of survivors have arrived at Alexandria, Egypt. It is possible that a few more may be added.

The number of lives lost was therefore 247 or a number very close to that, making the disaster of the Persia second only to the Lusitania loss among the list of passenger steamers sunk by German and Austrian submarines. When the Italian steamship Ancona, which ranks in the third place, was sunk 209 lives were lost.

Of the 153 persons saved only 54 were passengers, the other 99 being of the crew, and 59 of these being Lascars. There were 241 passengers on board and 159 crew.

There were 87 women among the passengers. Of these only 17 are known to have been picked up. In addition there were 30 children. It is feared that all of the latter lost their lives.

Among those who perished was United States Consul-General Robert N. McNeely, on his way to his new post at Aden, Arabia.

Charles H. Grant, of Boston, the second American positively known to have been on the Persia, was saved. His name came among the first list of survivors.

The survivors include ten military officers and eight persons who are not British subjects.

"The ship was struck amidships on the port side at 1.10 p.m.," says Reuter's correspondent at Cairo. "She had disappeared completely by 1.15.

"Survivors say it was little short of a miracle that anyone was saved. There was no panic. Four boats were launched with the utmost promptitude.

"The captain was drowned. When last seen he was swimming, after the liner had plunged beneath the surface."

The Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company last night received the following telegram from Col. C. C. Bigham, who was among the survivors of the Persia disaster:

"A torpedo struck the ship on the port bow at 1.05 o'clock in the afternoon when about 40 miles south of the east-end of the Island of Crete. No warning was given, nor any attempt made to assist. Within five minutes the ship had sunk. It was impossible to lower the starboard boats owing to the heavy list. Five or six boats were lowered on the portside. I didn't see this myself, as I was washed overboard when the boat capsized.

"The conduct of the passengers and crew was splendid; there was no struggling and no panic. Four boats, after 30 hours at sea, were picked up by a warship."

A despatch to The Times from Cairo says that two boatloads of people were drawn down with the steamer Persia when she sank as there was no time to cut the ropes. Four boats got away, but it was thirty hours before a trawler picked them up. Several ships passed by without assisting the refugees, being afraid, presumably, of decoys. Many passengers were thrown into the water when the vessel heeled over.

OFFENSIVE AT GALLIPOLI.

Allied Troops Aided by Battleships Vigorously Attack the Enemy.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 3, via Amsterdam and London.—There was heavy fighting on Saturday along the Dardanelles front, still held by the Allies. An engagement in which the land and sea forces of the invaders took part, is reported by the War Office, in the following statement:

"Near Seddul Bahr, on the night of Dec. 30-31, there was active bomb fighting. On our right wing and in the centre violent fighting with artillery and bombs lasted until morning.

"On the afternoon of Dec. 31 we exploded two mines on our right wing. The enemy's artillery, assisted by two cruisers, bombarded our trenches in the centre of our front. We replied effectively.

"Our batteries at the Narrows bombarded the landing place at Seddul Bahr and the neighboring camp.

"Our aeroplanes attacked and repulsed a hostile aeroplane, which was making a reconnaissance."

Simon is First to Resign.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Chronicle announces definitely that Sir John A. Simon, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, retires from the Cabinet, "thus breaking his brilliant ministerial career for conscience sake."

It has been rumored for several days that he would resign because of the conscription bill.

Factory Burned at Quebec.

QUEBEC, Jan. 3.—The building of the Rocks-Hoe Manufacturing Company, Limited, was destroyed by fire Saturday night. The blaze started in the boiler room and had gained considerable headway before it was discovered. The loss is estimated at $75,000, with insurance of $33,000.

PREPARING FOR ATTACK.

Enemy Forces Are Threatening Allied Base at Salonica.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—There are signs of renewed activity in Macedonia, where it is reported unofficially that Germans and Austrian forces are gathering at Monastir, in South-western Serbia, near the Greek border. Conflicting reports are received concerning the intention of the Bulgarians, but Premier Radoslavoff is quoted as having said they would soon begin an advance into Greek territory to attack the French and British at Salonica.

Another despatch from Berlin, however, says that, according to the Bulgarian commander-in-chief, Gen. Jecoff, no decision on this point had been reached a week ago.

The Allies continue their expectant attitude toward a threatened attack, although Greece seems mainly occupied in making various diplomatic protests, having followed up her polite protest to the Entente against the arrest of the Consuls by an equally polite protest to the central powers against their aeroplanes flying across Greek territory in a raid which killed a Greek shepherd and a few sheep.

The Berlin Morgen Post publishes a report that orders have been given to the German and Austrian troops in Serbia to advance into Greece and attack the French and British. A Bucharest despatch to the Morgen Post credits this statement to the Outre of Sofia. It is said Germany has communicated to Greece her desire to clear Grecian territory of the Allied forces. The German Minister at Athens, the despatch says, told Premier Skouloudis the best interests of Greece demanded the removal of the French and British, inasmuch as in the existing circumstances Greece would be exposed to danger from the troops of the Central powers, which have been ordered to pursue the Allies on Greek territory.

HYDRO-RADIALS POPULAR.

Toronto, London, Berlin, and Guelph Give Scheme Sweeping Majorities.

TORONTO, Jan. 3.—The Hydro-radial by-laws were carried by a sweeping majority of 15,395 in Toronto yesterday, and by substantial majorities in London, Berlin, and Guelph. In Toronto the vote was four to one in favor of the by-law. The vote was three to one for the radials in Guelph and in Berlin. Though the total vote was comparatively small the majority surpassed the expectations of the supporters. The vote in London was about 57 per cent. of the city. Similarly, the actual majority for the by-law in each of these cities was between 630 and 680. Though the majority for the by-law in London was substantial, 676, the vote was small when compared with the tremendous majorities in Toronto, Berlin, and Guelph. There were 2,763 votes for and 2,087 against. Although the vote in Berlin was comparatively small, there was a majority of 665 in favor of the by-law guaranteeing the bonds of the scheme to the amount of $774,000. The large majority surpassed the confident expectations of the most ardent supporter.

In Guelph it was conceded from the start that the by-law would carry, although there was considerable silent opposition to it. Sir Adam Beck's appearance here a week ago and his explanation in detail of the scheme did much to clear the air. The vote stood: For, 939; against, 307; majority for, 632.

Mimico and New Toronto also went into the fight for the system of Hydro-radials and came out overwhelmingly for the by-law in both municipalities.

RUSSIANS CROSS STYR

Have Also Captured Important Heights Near Cernowitz.

Russia's Huge Drive in Bessarabia is Showing Marked Results—It is Believed to Be an Effort to Break the Backbone of the Entente Tentonic Line Across the Balkans—Successes in Front of Pripet.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Russians have captured the heights northeast of Czernowitz, Bukowina, according to a despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Petrograd. Eight hundred and seventy prisoners fell into the hands of the Russians.

Russia's campaign in Bessarabia continues to be the most important visible war activity. From the Pripet to the Roumanian frontier, over a front of at least 300 miles, a huge Russian force with a great appearance of confidence is hurling sledge-hammer blows at the opposing force, which, according to all accounts, totals at least a million and a half men.

Petrograd reports considerable successes in the early stages of the campaign, and despatches emphasize the excellent equipment, supplies, and munitions which Russia laid up for this purpose during a period of comparative passivity.

Some London observers speculating on the meaning of the Bessarabia move, half it as one of the most ambitious strategic plans since the beginning of hostilities, and predict that it will prove a colossal attempt to break the backbone of the Germanic allies' whole line across the Balkans.

Thus one critic says:

"The plan is that Russia and the other allies, moving from different sides, shall meet in the Balkans and gain complete mastery of that peninsula. If they succeed, Turkey will be subdued and the vitals of Austria-Hungary menaced."

So long as Russia keeps up her present activity just north of the Roumanian border, the attitude of Roumania will continue to grow in importance.

The Russian official statement of Saturday reports the gaining of preliminary successes by the Russians on the front south of Pripet, and the bursting through of the German and Austrian wire entanglements on the section between the Dniester front and Roumanian border, and the successful consolidation of the new positions there.

The Russians crossed over the Styr River and took the Village of Khrisai by storm. This point lies between the Kovel-Sarny Railway and Czartoryak. The enemy failed to drive the Russians across the river again by desperate counter-attacks, and his attacks on the Russians in the Milashoff region, south-east of Kolki, also broke down. The Russians also made a successful advance north of Olykz Station and consolidated the position which they seized. Two lines of the enemy's trenches were also occupied on the Stripa front, and the enemy was driven back to the right bank of the Dniester in Uscioczko region.

POINCARE'S MESSAGE.

Nineteen Sixteen Will Be Year of Victory, Says President.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—"Nineteen hundred and sixteen will be our year of victory," says President Poincare in a message to "the officers and soldiers of France," which has been distributed along the whole front.

The message, which is one of great simplicity, expresses the confidence of the entire nation in its defenders.

The letter follows:

"Like you, my noble friends, I have read with emotion in the army bulletin messages addressed to you on the eve of the New Year by the mayors of our large cities. The same language is used by all these French cities, and it is easy to-day to draw from these numerous expressions the unanimous sentiment of the country.

"Everywhere you have seen maintained without effort this sacred union spontaneously established seventeen months ago under the menace of the enemy. Why would not the civil population follow the example of agreement and harmony which you give it? In the trenches and on the battlefields you hardly think of considering your personal opinions.

Greek King Gravely Ill.

ROME, Jan. 3.—The condition of King Constantine of Greece has rapidly become so grave that it is believed that Prince George, the King's eldest son and heir to the throne, will soon be made regent. Prince George is 25 years old.

This news is contained in a despatch from Athens, which adds that Queen Sophia, who is the Kaiser's sister, is seriously alarmed and has summoned the most noted German specialists to Athens. It is recalled that during King Constantine's recent illness, when he was in a grave condition, no such measure as the appointment of a regent was considered necessary.

Oriental Road Complete.

AMSTERDAM, Jan 3.—The bridge across the River Save, near Belgrade, was opened Thursday, according to a telegram from Vienna, and direct railway communication was thus re-established between the Central Powers and Bulgaria and Turkey. Archduke Frederic, Commander-in-Chief of the Austrian army, assisted at the opening ceremony and afterward visited Belgrade, where the normal life of the city has been resumed, most of the inhabitants having returned. The Archduke later visited King Ferdinand of Bulgaria at Semendria.

Conscription Bill Includes Ireland.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—According to an announcement made by the Press Association, Ireland is not to be excepted from the new compulsory recruiting bill.

CANADA will raise an army of 500,000 men, how figures like these would have staggered us a few years ago.

THE Durham. Cement plant is booming the Owen Sound cement plant is booming with an order for 100.000 barrels, and the Wiarton plant is idle, in fact it will be sold bit by bit to meet expenses. Why on earth cannot the bonholders get busy?

The Young Man's Duty.

Last Sunday recruiting sermons were preached from Tobermory to Hepworth. If the young men between these two points were at church they heard that their King and Country needed their servi s. They know that Britain is engaged in a life or death struggle and that it is only by the sacrifice of lives that our liberties can be saved Married men with children dependent upon them for support have enlisted and they will continue to do, but it is a young mans job. And the young men of Bruce should not wait until they are asked. They should volunteer. Supposing conscription should become law in Britain it will then not be long until it is law here Would the young men of Bruce like the idea of being compelled to serve, would they not rather go of their own accord? Few ever thought that it would fall to the lot of this generation to bear arms for the liberties we have long enjoyed, but this generation has to save the next, and it is your duty to save posterity. If Canada can raise an army of 500.000 it will mean the pressing into service of practically all the available men. In future years when the story of this war will be told, when the historian will tell of the loyal response of Canada, of the sacrifice made by her sons and daughters. what part will you have played in this great struggle? What reason can you have for not enlisting?

AROUND THE DAIRY.

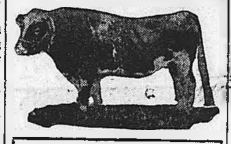
The cow is the unit of the dairy industry. Upon her quality its success depends.

One way to improve dairy quality is to have better and more sanitary barns.

Change of feed is necessary for the general health of the cow and also for the largest production. That's one reason why green pastures improve the cattle.

The dairy cow that makes a large yield usually makes it at the least cost—that is, the extra pounds of butter cut down the cost of production.



The introduction of co-operative testing associations would be a source of education and stimulus to all dairymen and farmers.

EXERCISE AND FEED FOR DAIRY BULLS

Discussing the need of exercise for dairy bulls, I. M. Avery writes in the Holstein-Friesian Register. Our bulls are kept in the main calf barn, and every morning that the weather will possibly permit, while the regular work is in progress, they take turns exercising upon an endless belt tread power provided solely for the purpose. Possibly the power thus generated might on many farms be used to some advantage—we are content to merely keep our bulls in tiptop breeding condition by its daily use.

The power is equipped with a governor which controls the speed and a brake for use in case of emergency and when starting and stopping. Each service bull is given not less than an hour's continuous exercise every day at a pace approximating three miles per hour. In the regular breeding season, commencing with us Dec. 15, the period is shortened somewhat, and when the bulls are not in use—namely, from about Aug. 15 until Dec. 15—it is lengthened as much as possible.

During extremely hot weather the exercise time is divided—half in the morning before the sun becomes too hot and the balance late in the afternoon. We never leave a bull entirely to himself without any one near at hand, as it is hardly safe, especially in the case of a mature animal, but while there is always somebody within sight the regular work is not interfered with in the least, as the bull requires no attention or supervision.

The use of pure bred sires in dairy herds has come to be such a universal practice that large grade herds of almost any of the dairy breeds are to be found. Such herds quickly take on the characteristics of the breed of the sire. This is especially true of Guernseys, the prepotency of the blood showing very plainly in the characteristics of all the stock, so that even in the first generation we have a herd which very closely approaches in characteristics the pure bred type. The bull shown is a pure bred Guernsey.

In connection with this system of exercise we feed the bulls a regular breeding ration, consisting of alfalfa hay, almost exclusively for roughage, with very little ensilage, and this fodder is supplemented by a grain mixture made up largely of crushed oats with bran and including small proportions of wheat middlings and oil meal. The amount fed is varied according to the general condition of the animal, being considerably increased during seasons of frequent service and reduced to a minimum during the "vacation" period extending through the fall.

COST OF A HEIFER.

A Convincing Argument in Favor of Pure Bred Cattle.

It has been figured that the average net cost of raising a yearling dairy heifer on a Wisconsin farm is $39.52. says Rural New Yorker. A two-year-old heifer costs $61.41. These figures are probably fair, as they represent the average of 117 calves. Probably these figures will apply to most other dairy districts in the north and east. It costs about as much to raise a scrub heifer as one that contains a good share of pure blood. A scrub heifer would rarely sell for more than $40, a clear loss of $20 or more. In fact, a heifer has to be good enough to bring $60 when two years of age in order to give an even return for what she has cost.

But there is no business that could prosper in producing a thing for just about what it cost, and if you produce a heifer at all and pay out $40 in labor and feed you ought to produce a good one rather than a scrub.

Salting the Butter.

In some Ontario experiments it was found that salt added to butter in a wet condition was better distributed and more in solution than were the dry salt lots. The average percentage of moisture retained in the finished butter was practically the same with both settings.

FOR BETTER POTATOES.

It is not generally known that best potatoes come from seed obtained from a far distant point. W. A. Orton, a United States department of agriculture pathologist, says that a large part of the territory of southern, south central and western states obtains better results from seed potatoes grown near the northern border of Maine, New York, Minnesota and other northern states.

Replanting diseased seed potatoes in the same localities merely brings poor stock. Fresh potatoes from distant points, minus blemishes, will cure the evil. The fact that newly irrigated or recently deforested portions of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan are being planted to potatoes makes the information more valuable. Seeding these new patches with sick or blemished potatoes spells failure for new growers.

The essential thing here as elsewhere is healthy seed potatoes, preferably obtained from distant points. Thus if a garden has been blighted with bad seed potatoes, it may eventually be purified by better stock, cultivation and fertilization.

TO USE SURPLUS POTASH.

Chemists Report That Crops Are In No Immediate Danger.

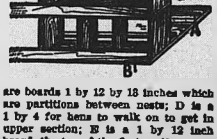
Because of the action of the German government in prohibiting the exportation of concentrated potash salts reports have been made indicating that farmers were becoming alarmed over the consequences of a possible restriction in the supply of commercial fertilizers. Manufacturing chemists say, however, that there is no danger of a failure of a reasonable crop production on this account.

One of these chemists has given his views as follows:

Potash is one of the three elements most essential to plant growth. Practically all soils suitable for farming contain potash in available and also in unavailable form. As plant life takes potash only to the extent of its needs, if there is any excess in the soil it will remain until used, as potash does not leach out of the ground. Fortunately many farmers have been using potash in increased amounts each year, so that the soil is better supplied with available potash than was the case a few years ago, and there probably remains in the soil a supply which has not been assimilated.

The problem of the individual farmer is to conserve his potash, which can be done in the following way: Green manuring or turning under a cover crop, dressing heavily with barnyard manure, balancing chicken manure with nitrate of soda and acid phosphate, saving wood ashes to mix with nitrate of soda and acid phosphate and rendering inert soil potash available.



Nitrate of soda will do more than any other agent to render soil potash available. The potash that can be made available in the soil is usually in the form of hydrated silicate of potash and alumina. The nitrogen in nitrate of soda, having been assimilated by the plants, leaves a residue of soda which acts on the hydrated silicate of potash and alumina and renders the potash available.

As the amount of potash which can be made available in any soil is quite limited, the process of freeing it is only a temporary measure to meet an emergency, and it must eventually be replaced. Every 100 pounds of nitrate of soda will split off fifty to fifty-five pounds of actual potash and assure successful crops for a time where no additional potash is used.

Handy Section Nests.

The sketch shows a plan for hens' nests which I find very easy to clean, says William C. Albright in the Farm and Fireside. Just lift each section off and sweep the top of the section below. There is no bottom to clean. The top of the lower section serves as the bottom of the one above, but is not attached to it.

A is a platform thirty inches wide and as long as desired; B is a 1 by 4 inch strip to hold the nest material; CC are boards 1 by 12 by 18 inches which are partitions between nests; D is a 1 by 4 for hens to walk on to get in upper section; E is a 1 by 12 inch board, the top of the first section.

The bottom section is suspended by wires so that it hangs about two feet from the floor, and the platform, A, is placed against the wall. A burlap curtain is hung over the front of the nests to darken them, but can be pushed aside when you wish to gather the eggs.

Roots For Feed.

Roots are excellent feed for dairy cows and are especially desirable for the fall and early winter, as they are palatable, easy to digest and stimulate the flow of milk. Less grain is required while roots are being fed. The change from roots to more grain should be made gradually, adding grain at the rate of one pound for ten pounds of roots withdrawn.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

This is for delinquents only. If you are paid do not read it, but if not kindly do not overlook one word. Last week we mailed notices to many in arrears and asked for a settlement this month and stated that all accounts for 1915 and previous years not paid by Jan. 15 will be charged at the rate of $1.50 per year. We mean this, every word. Everyone in arrears has a few weeks to come across, and if they do not make the grade then it is their fault and not ours. At the present time many of the local papers have raised their rates to $1.50 per year, so far we have not made any change. A paper of the class of The Echo cannot be published at $1.00 any longer and make money, but while the price remains at $1.00 we must insist upon the money in advance, or settled at the $1.50 rate. Subscribers will therefore read this notice and please govern themselves accordingly. The label indicates how the subscription stands.

CHANCE FOR BREEDERS.

As a part of their plans for conserving their food supplies the warring nations of Europe have forbidden the export of live stock, says the Farm and Fireside.

Great Britain shut off the shipments so suddenly on the outbreak of the war that American stockmen who had bought cattle found themselves unable to get them out of the country. It may be taken for granted that the exports of sheep, cattle, mules and horses from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Holland and Russia will be reduced to nothing until after the war is over.

Here seems to be a chance for our breeders to supply the constant and profitable demand for high class breeding animals to the South American markets. The manufacturers are not the only people who will find new fields opened to them. —

WINTER COVER CROPS.

Increase Yield and Lower Cost of Production.

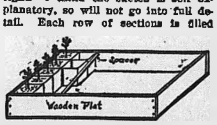
[Prepared by Louisiana experiment station.]

It should be the aim of all members of the corn club to increase their yield and at the same time to lower the cost of production for 1915. The planting of a winter cover crop will go a long way toward accomplishing both objects.

Let us see how a cover crop will help: It will prevent the rich top soil from being washed away by our heavy winter rains, also it will prevent the leaching of the plant food as it becomes available from day to day throughout the winter. Thus some plant food will be available for the corn crop when the cover crop is plowed under in the spring. As much nitrogen is leached from the soil in winter as is used in making the crop the following spring and summer. It is this element in fertilizers that makes them so costly, and this cost can be saved by planting one of the clovers for a cover crop. To insure a good growth the clover seed should be inoculated with nitrogen gathering bacteria. The pure culture may be obtained through the parish demonstration agent.



A cover crop plowed under in the spring will increase the water retaining power of the soil. Humus or decaying vegetable matter will store seven and a half times as much water as sand, pound for pound. Sand will lose its water three and a half times as fast as humus. A good supply of humus in the soil will lessen the danger of a drought injuring the crop

Whenever possible plant one of the following clovers: Crimson, burr, white, medium red or vetch. If you cannot conveniently plant one of these, then plant oats, rye or wheat.

To sum up, a winter cover crop will prevent the land from washing, leaching, increase the fertility and water retaining power of your soil and furnish grazing for pigs and other live stock during the winter and early spring.

Scheme For Transplanting.

In transplanting my tomatoes last season, writes a contributor to the Farm Journal, I devised the accompanying scheme, which seems to work all right. I think the sketch is self explanatory, so will not go into full detail. Each row of sections is filled with earth before removing the "spacer" and putting in the next row. When the flat is filled with sections and earth two or three seeds are planted in each section and thinned out to one per section when well up. This idea might be used for melons or cucumbers, as well as tomatoes.

SOME POULTRY NOTES.

Fresh air is important in successful poultry culture. To house fowls in a close, stuffy building, especially during the winter, will result in colds which lead on to roup. Since the advent of the scratching shed houses the value of fresh air has proved its worth, and there is less anxiety about poultry diseases.

The birds must have access to shelter during the rainy weather. A thorough soaking when they are nearly bare of feathers is apt to result in an attack of roup or cause a chill that may throw the bird back for weeks. But the hen that gets through the moult early and quickly will almost invariably prove a good winter layer.

Bear in mind that chickens, both young and old fowls, need meat. If insects cannot be found in sufficient number supply the fowls with meat meal occasionally. Laying hens are especially fond of meat meal, and a mash of meat, shorts and bran given occasionally will be beneficial to the fowls.

Hot mashes on cold days are on the feeding program of many successful poultry raisers.

When the white of an egg is watery it shows that one is not feeding a good, well balanced ration.

OPERATIONS for APPENDICITIS

And How They Can be Avoided

Operation Ordered

For Appendicitis—Used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Was Completely Cured.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor, as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for, his cure. Dr. Chase's Medicines have proven of wonderful benefit in our home, as the Ointment cured my little girl of a severe burn, when nothing else would bring relief."

Dr. David H. Reeder writes as follows of appendicitis:—"In considering the treatment of any condition of sickness it has always been my rule to first find the cause. To my mind, it's the only logical way. Many people seem to think that if they have had an operation for appendicitis they are forever immune, and need have no further fear along that line, but I say emphatically, and I think you will agree, I am right, that after an attack of appendicitis, even though you have been successfully operated upon and the appendix removed, your troubles have only just begun unless you remove the cause. What was the cause of the appendicitis?

"The thoughtless will say inflammation in the appendix. No, inflammation in the appendix is appendicitis, but what caused the inflammation? Constipation, yes, that is the prime cause. If you were never constipated you would forever be safe. Appendicitis is only one of the results of the retention of fecal matter in the colon for too long a period."

There is no longer any question that the real cause of appendicitis is constipation. By keeping the bowels regular you not only prevent appendicitis, but also a host of other ills, some of which are even more dangerous than appendicitis. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are recommended to you in this connection, not as a mere relief by effecting the movement of the bowels, but rather as a positive cure for constipation. As is well known, the bile secreted by the healthful action of the liver is Nature's cathartic. So long as the bile flows freely into the intestines there is no constipation of the bowels and no clogging of the excretory organs. Hence the wisdom of using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to ensure regular working of the liver, kidneys and bowels. You thereby save yourself much inconvenience from the minor ills of life, and ensure against such fatal diseases as appendicitis and peritonitis.

The room was completely furnished, bedecked and rendered habitable by a hundred and one articles that were mysteriously missing from my side of the castle. Rugs, tapestries, curtains of the rarest quality; chairs, couches and cushions; tables, cabinets and chests that would have caused the eyes of the most conservative collector of antiques to bulge with—not wonder, but greed; stands, pedestals, brasses, bronzes, porcelains—but why enumerate? On the massive oaken center table stood the priceless silver vase we had missed on the second day of our occupancy, and it was filled with fresh yellow roses.

And so complete had been the pilfering of my rooms by the devoted vandals in their efforts to make this lady cozy and comfortable that they did not overlook a silver framed photograph of my dear mother.

I tried to smile. "How—how cozy you are here," I said.

"You couldn't expect me to live in this awful place without some of the comforts and conveniences of life, Mr. Smart," she said defiantly.

"Certainly not," I said promptly. "I am sure that you will excuse me, however, if I gloat. I was afraid we had lost all these things. You've no idea how relieved I am to find them all safe and sound in my—in their proper place. I was beginning to distrust the Schmicks. Now I am convinced of their integrity."

"I suppose you mean to be sarcastic."

"Sarcasm at any price, madame, would be worse than useless, I am sure."

Crossing to the fireplace, I selected a lump of coal from the scuttle and examined it with great care. She watched me curiously.

"Do you recognize it?" she asked.

"I do," said I, looking up. "It has been in our family for generations. My favorite chunk, believe me! Still I part with it cheerfully." Thereupon I tossed it into the fire. "Don't be shocked. I shan't miss it. We have coals to burn, madame."

She looked at me soberly for a moment. There was something hurt and wistful in her dark eyes.

"Of course, Mr. Smart, I shall pay you for everything—down to the smallest trifle—when the time comes for me to leave this place. I have kept strict account of"—

She turned away, with a beaten droop of the proud little head, and again I was ashamed.

"Madame," I said, with considerable feeling, "I have behaved like a downright rotter today. I do not know why you are nor why you are here, but I assure you it is of no real consequence if you will but condescend to overlook my insufferable"—

She turned toward me. The wistful, appealing look still lingered in her eyes. The soft red nether lip seemed a bit tremulous.

"I am an intruder," she interrupted, smiling faintly. "You have every right to put me out of your—your home, Mr. Smart. I have been very selfish and seffish and inconsiderate, Mr. Smart. You see, I'm a spoiled child. I've always had my own way in everything. You must look upon me as a very horrid, sneaking, conspiring person, and I—I really think you ought to turn me out."

She came a few steps nearer. Suddenly it was revealed to me that she was the loveliest woman I had ever seen in all my life.

I am afraid that I stared.

"Turn you out?" I cried. "Turn you out of this delightful room after you've had so much trouble getting it into shape? Never!"

"Oh, you don't know how I've imposed upon you!" she cried plaintively. "You don't know how I've robbed you and bothered you"—

"Yes, I do," said I promptly. "I know all about it. You've been stealing my coals, my milk, my ice, my potatoes, my servants, my sleep and"—here I gave a comprehensive sweep of my hand—"everything in sight. And you've made us walk on tiptoe to keep from waking the baby, and"— I stopped suddenly. "By the way, whose baby is it? Not yours, I'm sure."

To my surprise her eyes filled with tears.

"Yes; she is my baby, Mr. Smart," she said, turning away.

CHAPTER VIII.

"The count—my husband."

MY face fell.

She couldn't have been a day over twenty-two. But she had a baby!

Facing me once more, she said:

"Doubtless you are very much puzzled by my presence in this gloomy old castle. You have been asking yourself a thousand questions about me, and you have been shocked by my outrageous suppositions upon your good nature. I am here, Mr. Smart, because it is the last place in the world where my husband would be likely to look for me."

"Your husband? Look for you?"

"Yes. I shall be quite frank with you. My husband and I have separated. A provisional divorce was granted, however, just seven months ago. The final decree cannot be issued for one year."

"But why should you hide from him?"

"The—the court gave him the custody of our child during the probationary year. I—I have run away with her. They are looking for me everywhere. That is why I came here. Do you understand?"

I was stunned. "Then, I take it, the court granted him the divorce and not you?" I said, experiencing a sudden chill about the heart. "You were deprived of the child, I see. Dear me!"

"You are mistaken," she said, a flash in her eyes. "It was an Austrian court. The count—my husband, I should say—is an Austrian subject. His interests must be protected." She said this with a sneer on her pretty lips. "You see, my father, knowing him now for what he really is, has refused to pay over to him something like a million dollars, still due for the marriage settlement. The count contends that it is a just and legal debt, and the court supports him to this extent: The child is to be his until the debt is cleared up, or something to that effect. I really don't understand the legal complications involved. Perhaps it were better if I did."

"I see," said I, scornful in spite of myself. "One of those happy international marriages where a bride is thrown in for good measure with a couple of millions. Won't we ever learn!"

"That's it precisely," she said, with the utmost calmness and candor. "American dollars and an American girl in exchange for a title, a lot of debts and a ruined life."

"And they always turn out just this way. What a lot of blithering fools we have in the land of the free and the home of the knave!"

"My father objected to the whole arrangement from the first, so you must not speak of him as a knave," she protested. "He doesn't like counts and such things."

"I don't see that it helps matters. I can hardly substitute the word 'brave' for the one I used," said I, trying to conceal my disgust.

"Please don't misunderstand me, Mr. Smart," she said haughtily. "I am not asking for pity. I made my bed, and I shall lie in it. The only thing I ask of you is—well, kindness."

She seemed to falter again, and once more I was at her feet, figuratively speaking.

"You are in distress, in dread of something, madame!" I cried. "Consider me your friend."

She shook her head restfully. "You poor man! You don't know what you are in for, I fear. Wait till I have told you everything. Three weeks ago I laid myself liable to imprisonment and heaven knows what else by abducting my little girl. That is really what it comes to—abduction. The court has ordered my arrest, and all sorts of police persons are searching high and low for me. Now don't you see your peril? If they find me here you will be in a dreadful predicament. You will be charged with criminal complicity, or whatever it is called, and—Oh, it will be frightfully unpleasant for you, Mr. Smart!"

My expression must have convicted me. She couldn't help seeing the dismay in my face. So she went on quite humbly:

"Of course you have but to act at once and all may be well for you. I—I will go if you—if you command me to"—

I struck my knee forcibly. "What do you take me for, madame? Hang the consequences! If you feel that you are safe here—that is, comparatively safe—stay!"

"It will be terrible if you get into trouble with the law," she murmured in distress. "I—I really don't know what might happen to you. Indeed, I do not."

Suddenly a horrible thought struck me with stunning force.

"Don't tell me that your—your husband is the man who owned this castle up to a week ago," I cried. "Count James Bohendorff?"

She shook her head. "No. He is not the man." Seeing that I waited for her to go on, she resumed: "I know Count James quite well, however. He is my husband's closest friend."

"Good heaven," said I, in quick alarm. "That complicates matters, doesn't it? He may come here at any time."

"It isn't likely, Mr. Smart. To be perfectly honest with you, I waited until I heard you had bought the castle before coming here myself. We were in hiding at the house of a friend in Linz up to a week ago."

"May I inquire, madame," said I stiffly, "how you came to select my abode as your hiding place?"

"Oh, I have forgotten to tell you that we lived here one whole summer just after we were married. Count Bohendorff was in the castle for our—our honeymoon. He was here a great deal of the time. All sorts of horrid, nasty, snobbish people were here to help us enjoy our honeymoon. I shall never forget that dreadful summer. My only friends were the Schmicks. You see they were in the family ages and ages before I was born."

"The family? What family?"

"The Rothboefen family. Haven't they told you that my great-grandmother was a Rothboefen? No? Well, she was. I belong to the third generation of American born descendants. Doesn't it simplify matters, knowing this?"

"Immensely," said I, in something of a daze.

"And so I came here, Mr. Smart, where hundreds of my ancestors spent their honeymoons, most of them perhaps as unhappily as I, and where I knew a fellow countryman was to live for a while in order to get a plot for a new story. You see, I thought I might be a great help to you in the shape of suggestion."

She smiled very warmly, and I thought it was a very neat way of putting it. Naturally it would be quite impossible to put her out after hearing that she had already put herself out to some extent in order to assist me.

"I can supply the villain for your story if you need one, and I can give you oceans of ideas about noblemen. I am sorry that I can't give you a nice, sweet heroine. People hate heroines after they are married and live unhappily. You"—

"The public taste is changing," I interrupted quickly. "Unhappy marriages are so common nowadays that the women who go into 'em are always heroines. People like to read about suffering and anguish among the rich, too. Besides, you are a countess. That puts you near the first rank among heroines. Don't you think it would be proper at this point to tell me who you are?"

She regarded me steadfastly for a moment, and then shook her head.

"I'd rather not tell you my name, Mr. Smart. It really can't matter, you know. I've thought it all out very carefully, and I've decided that it is not best for you to know. You see if you don't know who it is you are sheltering the courts can't hold you to account. You will be quite innocent of deliberately contriving to defeat the law.

"No, I shall not tell you my name, nor my husband's, nor my father's. If you'd like to know, however, I will tell you my baby's name. She's two years old and I think she'll like you to call her Rosemary."

By this time I was quite hypnotized by this charming, confident trespasser upon my physical—and I was about to say my moral estate. Never have I known a more complacent violator of all the proprieties of law and order as she appeared to be. She was a revelation—more than that, she was an inspiration.

What an exceedingly courageous, independent, fascinating little buccaneer she was!

"Rosemary," I repeated. "And what am I to call you?"

"Even my enemies call me countess," she said coldly.

"Oh," said I, more respectfully. "I see. When am I to have the pleasure of meeting the less particular Rosemary?"

"I didn't mean to be horrid," she said plaintively. "Please overlook it, Mr. Smart. If you are very, very quiet I think you may see her now. She is asleep."

"I may frighten her if she awakes," I said in haste, remembering my antipathy to babies.

Nevertheless I was led through a couple of bare, unfurnished rooms into a sunny, perfectly adorable nursery. A nursemaid—English, at a glance—arose from her seat in the window and held a cautious finger to her lips. In the middle of a bed that would have accommodated an entire family, was the sleeping Rosemary—a tiny, rosy cheeked, yellow haired atom bounded on four sides by yards of mattress.

I stood over her timorously and stared. The countess put one knee upon the mattress and, leaning far over, kissed a little paw. I blinked. Like a confounded booby.

Then we stole out of the room.

"Isn't she adorable?" asked the countess when we were at a safe distance.

"They all are," I said grudgingly, "when they're asleep."

"You are horrid!"

"By the way," I said sternly, "how does that bedstead happen to be a yard or so lower than any other bed in this entire castle? All the rest of them are so high one has to get into them from a chair."

"Oh," she said complacently, "it was too high for Blake to manage conveniently, so I had Rudolph saw the legs off short."

One of my very finest antique bedsteads! But I didn't even groan a single groan.

"You will let me stay on, won't you, Mr. Smart?" she said when we were at the fireplace again. "I am really so helpless, you know."

I offered her everything that the castle afforded in the way of loyalty and luxury.

"And we'll have a telephone in the main hall before the end of a week," I concluded beamingly.

Her face clouded. "Oh, I'd much rather have it in my hallway, if you don't mind. You see, I can't very well go downstairs every time I want to use the phone, and it will be a nuisance sending for me when I'm wanted."

This was rather high handed, I thought.

"But if no one knows you're here it seems to me you're not likely to be called."

"You never can tell," she said mysteriously.

I promised to put the instrument in her hall and not to have an extension to my rooms for fear of creating suspicion. Also the electric bell system was to be put in just as she wanted it to be and a lot of other things that do not seem to come to mind at this moment.

I left in a daze at half past 8 to send Britton up with all the late novels and magazines.

CHAPTER IX.

I Discuss Matrimony.

AT 12 the next day I climbed the tortuous stairs leading to the countess' apartments. She opened the door herself.

"I neglected to mention yesterday that I am expecting a houseful of guests in a day or two," I said after she had given me a very cordial greeting.

"Guests?" she cried in dismay. "Oh, dear; can't you put them off?"

"I have hopes that they won't be able to stand the workmen banging around all day," I confessed, somewhat guiltily.

"Women in the party?"

"Two I believe. Both married and qualified to express opinions."

"They will be sure to bore me out," she said ruefully. "Women are dreadful bores."

"Don't worry," I said. "We'll get a lot of new padlocks for the doors downstairs, and you'll be as safe as can be if you'll only keep quiet."

"But I don't see why I should be made to mope here all day and all night like a sick cat, holding my hand over Rosemary's mouth when she wants to cry and mussing poor Jinks so that he"—

"My dear countess," I interrupted sternly, "you should not forget that these other guests of mine are invited here."

"But I was here first," she argued. "It is most annoying."

"I believe you said yesterday that you are in the habit of having your own way." She nodded her head. "Well, I am afraid you'll have to come down from your high horse—at least temporarily."

"Oh, I see! You—you mean to be very firm and domineering with me."

"You must try to see things from my point of"—

"Please don't say that!" she dared. "I'm so tired of hearing those words. For the last three years I've been commanded to see things from some one else's point of view, and I'm sick of the expression."

"For heaven's sake don't put me in the same boat with your husband!"

She regarded me somewhat frigidly for a moment longer, and then a slow, witching smile crept into her eyes.

"I shan't," she promised and laughed outright. "Do forgive me, Mr. Smart. I'll try to be nice and sensible, and I will be as still as a mouse all the time they're here. But you must promise to come up every day and give me the gossip."

We fell into a discussion of present and future needs; of ways and means for keeping my friends utterly in the dark concerning her presence in the abandoned east wing.

"I've been trying to recall all of the notable marriages we had in New York three years ago," said I, after she had most engagingly reduced me to a state of subjection in the matter of three or four most questions that came up for settlement. "You don't seem to fit in with any of the international affairs I can bring to mind."

"You promised you wouldn't bother about that, Mr. Smart," she said severely.

"Of course you were married in New York?"

"In a very nice church just off Fifth avenue, if that will help you any," she said. "The usual crowd inside the church and the usual mob outside all fighting for a glimpse of me in my wedding shroud and for a chance to see a real Hungarian nobleman. It really was a very magnificent wedding, Mr. Smart." She seemed to be unduly proud of the spectacular sacrifice.

A knitted brow revealed the obfuscated condition of my brain. I was thinking very intently, not to say remotely.

"Don't you read the newspapers?" she cried impatiently. She actually resented by ignorance.

"Religiously," I said, stung to revolt. "But I make it a point never to read the criminal news."

"Criminal news?" she gasped. "What do you mean?"

"It is merely my way of saying that I put marriages of that character in the category of crime."

"Oh!" she cried, staring at me with unbelieving eyes.

"Every time a sweet, lovely American girl is delivered into the hands of a foreign bounder who happens to possess a title that needs fixing I call the transaction a crime. You did not love this pusillanimous count, nor did he care a hang for you. You were too young in the ways of the world to have any feeling for him, and he was too old to have any for you. The whole hateful business therefore resolved itself into a case of give and take—and he took everything. He took you and your father's millions and now you are both back where you began. Some one deliberately committed a crime, and as it wasn't you or the count—who levied his legitimate toll—it must have been the person who planned the conspiracy. I take it, of course, that the whole affair was arranged behind your back, so to speak."

Her face was quite pale. Her eyes did not leave mine during the long and crazy diatribe, of which I was already beginning to feel heartily ashamed, and there was a dark, ominous fire in them that should have warned me.

She arose from her chair. It seemed to me she was taller than before.

"If nothing else came to me out of this transaction," she said levelly, "at least a certain amount of dignity was acquired. Pray remember that I am no longer the unsophisticated girl you so graciously describe. I am a woman, Mr. Smart."

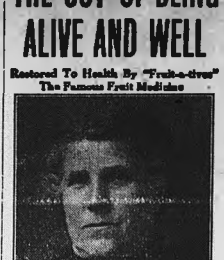
"True," said I, senselessly dogged. "a woman with the power to think for yourself. That is my point. If the same situation arose at your present age I fancy you'd be able to select a husband without assistance, and I venture to say you wouldn't pick up the first dissolute nobleman that came your way. No, my dear countess, you were not to blame. You thought, as your parents did, that marriage with a count would make a real countess of you. What rot! You are a simple, lovable American girl, and that's all there ever can be to it. To the end of your days you will be an American."

We were both standing now. She was still measuring me with somewhat incredulous eyes, rather more tolerant than resentful.

"Do you expect me to agree with you, Mr. Smart?" she asked.

"I do," said I promptly. "You of all people should be able to testify that my views are absolutely right."

"They are right," she said simply. "Still you are pretty much of a brute to insist me with them."



"I most sincerely crave your pardon if it hasn't too late!" I cried, abject once more. (I don't know what gets into me once in awhile.)

"Please, please don't say anything more about it. I daresay you've done me a lot of good. Perhaps I shall see things a little more clearly. To be perfectly honest with you, I went into this marriage with my eyes wide open, but I was only one fool among many. Dozens of other girls in my set were crazy to marry him. I—I haven't told you that he is extremely good looking. And he was—was adorable in those days."

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. Free from harmful drugs.

"No one who has not had Influenza can realize the suffering it causes or how it defies treatment. I know of nothing that will give such prompt relief as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, for when it is taken the pain in the chest disappears, the fever subsides and the whole body becomes more comfortable.

Then again, the after effects of Influenza are often even more distressing than the disease itself, but they can be avoided if you use

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

Though the greatest danger from this disease is Pneumonia, I have never known a single case of Influenza to result in it when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was freely given. The persistent cough that frequently follows Influenza can be relieved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and should not be allowed to run on until it becomes troublesome."

Your King and Country Need You. What Reason Can You Give for Not Enlisting in the Bruce Battalion?

Address and Presentation

On Tuesday evening, Jan 4th. a number of the friends of Mr. James Carter, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. McMillan, Purple Valley to spend a social evening with Mr. Carter before his departure for Wiarton to join the 160th Bruce Batt. An enjoyable time was spent and the following address accompanied the presentation of a wrist watch.

Dear Jim:—

We, your friends and neighbors of Purple Valley, having heard that you are about to leave us, have assembled here to-night to bid you farewell.

We are sorry to see you leave us, but we hope it will only be for a time, and after the war is over, that we will be able to welcome you back to Purple Valley.

We are glad to know that one of our boys has answered to the call of King and Country. And now on behalf of these here assembled we ask you to accept this watch, as a small token of remembrance and hope, as you look at it, it will bring to your recollection the old friends in Purple Valley.

Mr. Carter, though given little time to collect himself, replied very appropriately to the good wishes.

Important Agricultural Meetings

During the past week the North Bruce Farmer's Institute held some very important meetings at Hepworth Wiarton, Lions Head, Hopeness, Spry Mar and Park Head. which were addressed by representatives sent by the Provincial Government. Mr. A. R. G. Smith, of New Hamburg, and Mrs. Moorehouse, Cairo.

Mr. Smith is a practical man, an energetic young farmer with 120 acres of good land and he specializes in short-horns. He is very versatile, well read and is a good man for this work," says your breeding stock, sell the culls" this is what he advised. This is what England does in cattle and Scotland in horses. There never was he claims, such a good outlook for the dairy business. In field crops he strongly advised care in buying Alfalfa seed stating that the varieties that come from Southern Europe will not suit our climate.

Mr. Smith travels extensively throughout Ontario in the interests of the Department of Agriculture addressing farmers institutes and maintains that it is most important that the boys should be present.

Mrs. T. H. Reeve Passes Away

The death occurred Sunday of M Reeve at the advanced age of 74. The deceased had spent the holidays in Toronto with members of her family and had returned home but a week ago. She had, however, contracted grip and it proved fatal at her age. She was bright until the last.

The late Mrs. Reeves was born in Georgetown and was married in 1859 and had she lived ten days longer she would have been married 57yrs. She and her husband came to Oxenden in 1873 where they lived many years, and about 20 years ago moved to Wiarton. She isurvived by her husband and six sons, John, Toronto Herbert, Thomas, Bennett, Sask. and Fred, Albert a, also three daughters, Mrs. G. W. Hambly, Toronto. Mrs. Calvin Brady, Maryland, Mrs. John Bannerman, Toronto. most of whom will be at the funeral to-day. The deceased was a most estimable lady who belonged to the early life of the town, and she will be long remembered for her kind heart and her readiness to assist others.

Have left for England.

The Rev. C. K. Masters and Dr. A. H. Hough left to day for England where each one will serve his King and country, Mr Masters as Chaplain and the doctor will be attached to a hospital. Mr Masters has been in Wiarton two years, and has won golden opinions from everyone during this time. He is tactful, scholarly, a good preacher and a gentleman, and it is with genuine regret that au revoir is said to him. At a vestry meeting Monday evening he was relieved of his work in Trinity church, Dr. Hough has been a practising physician here for a number of years and no one has been more genuinely well liked. It means considerable for him to give up his practice and to separate himself from his friends and family, but he feels that he can be of service where medical men are needed and accordingly offered himself. The call to go to England has been very sudden in each case, and it is pleasant to know that they will both go in the same steamer. The Echo hopes to have something from the pen of each in due time.

Cedar Lodge Honors Dr. Hough and Rev C. K. Masters.

On Tuesday evening a large number of the members of Cedar Lodge met in their rooms and presented Dr. Hough and the Rev. C.K, Masters with wrist watches accompanied by the following address. Each of these gentlemen made a most suitable reply, The Rev. Mr. Masters was further honored by his his parish while Dr. Hough was presented with a purse of gold by a number of the citizens.

Wiarton, Jan. 11. 1916

Capt. A. H. Hough

Capt. C.K. Masters

Dear Brethern—

The members of Cedar Lodge A. F. & A. M. are much pleased to be able to meet with you upon the eve of your departure for the front to say good-bye and to wish you God speed and a safe return.

The brethern of Cedar Lodge are indeed proud that two more of their members have offered their services to their King and Country, and we heartily congratulate both of you upon your appointment. You are both eminently qualified for the position to which you have been appointed, and we know that you will bring credit to the craft and honor to the town of Wiarton.

Dr. Hough, for 15 years you have been identified with the life of this town and its institutions. You have always been ready to cheerfully give of your means to any worthy object and have been public spirited in the highest degree During these years you have, in your professional capacity, made many friends who will not soon forget your kind attentions and your acts of charity to the poor will be as bread cast upon the waters —to return after many days. You will be missed in the lodge room where your brethern honored you by electing you to the highest position at their disposal.

Mr. Masters, for two years you have been in our midst and during this time you have commanded our highest respect, you have thoroughly honored your high calling and we regret to lose you as a moral force in this town and community. However as your heart has been in the work you have now undertaken, we can assure you carry with you our most cordial wishes for your success We know that wounded soldiers will be cheered by your message and others inspired by your example.

In taking leave of you and in saying au revoir we ask you to kindly accept these wrist watches and may they continually remind you of pleasant hours spent in Cedar Lodge and the friends you have left behind.

We again say good-by and God speed and sincerely hope for your safe return to your families whose sacrifice in allowing you to go is worthy of the highest commendation.

Signed on behalf of Cedar Lodge.

S. J. Cameron. W. M.

Dr. S. E. Foster. Secy

A LARGE RECRUITING MEETING

In Town Hall Tuesday Evening

HOT SPARKS FROM THE ANVIL

This is as much our battle as if it were being fought on the Bruce Peninsula.

Parents be proud that you have a son strong enough and brave enough to fight for you.

A son upon being offered $1000 by his father to remain at home said "if your love will not keep me your money is of no use.

It is not for me to say who shall go, every man must settle this with his own conscience.

Britain with less than 200,000 men stopped the Germans from going into Paris.

The Irish fought years ago for religious liberty, and the Scotch for civil liberty, the English fought the Barons, we are their descendants.

The officers in the 160 Bruce are the pick of the best men in the County

If you saw what we did in Belgium you would rush to enlist.

We did not enlist for money, but for love of our Country.

This war will not end by talking about it in the pool-room.

The Rev. Mr. Master's little son is proud of him because his father is a soldier.

In the hour of our countrys great need, men need the rich red blood in their veins.

I take off my hat and bow to a man who has been a bum if he now has on the Kings uniform.

Where duty calls I will go. Dr. Hough.

We will dictate terms of peace in Berlin.

Voices from the graves of two Wiarton soldiers in France say come, voices from Belgium where Edith Cavell was murdered say come. voices from the children drowned when the Lusitania went down say come.

It was a big recruiting meeting, the biggest and best ever held in the town We have not time before going to press to give a full report, but the speeches were excellent and enthusiasm was high.

At Hymen's Altar

SMITH—BURT

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Esther M. Burt, Annabel, on Wednesday Dec. 29th. at high noon, when her second youngest daughter, Mary Isabel was united in marriage to Mr. Wilfred A. Smith, of Parkhead. The ceremony was performed by the Rev Mr. Crowle, of Hepworth. The bride entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Emma Rusk, of Parkhead. The bride looked charming in cream silk with shadow lace trimmings, she wore a bridal veil and carried a boquet of white roses, carnations and maiden hair fern. The bride's sister, Miss Allie, assisted the bride and wore shadow lace over cream silk with an overdress of pink chiffon and carried a hoquet of pink carnations and maiden hair fern. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Albert Smith, After the ceremony. the guests numbering about thirty sat down to a well prepared dinner. The dining-room was decorated very prettily, the color scheme being red and green throughout. The happy couple left on the two o'clock train for Norwood, Peterborough, South Dummer and other points, the bride wearing brown serge and a cream velvet hat trimmed with fur. On their return, they will reside at the groom's farm at Park Head. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket and chain. Friends were present from Owen Sound, Park Head, Hepworth, Lions Head and other points.

HOCKEY

In the first game in the O. H. A. Intermediate played at Owen Sound Monday evening the Wiarton team were downed, the score being 3 to 1 in favor of Owen Sound. The game was played on very slow ice. On Friday night there will be a game between Wiarton and Markdale, and as Markdale have a good team, composed principally of soldiers, something exciting may be expected. It is too soon yet to talk much about hockey for we do not know the relative strength of the different teams this year, but on Friday night we will see where we are at. Wiarton however may have a very good aggregation this year.

In speaking of the game at Owen Sound Monday evening The Echo was informed that the ice was simply slush and that hockey was impossible The Echo was also told that the Wiarton team bids fair to fully sustain the towns high reputation for first class hockey and can easily reverse the score on good ice.

The Town Council

Recruits Pass Greatest Test of Young Manhood

Declared Rev. C. K. Masters at the First Church Parade of an Overseas Quota in Wiarton

We are glad to welcome these men who have gone into training for the greatest test of manhood which has ever fallen on mankind. By their enlisting they signify that they are willing to sacrifice themselves on the alter of their country in a life which, although it is enjoyable, has a hard side which will make a great demand on the best of their manhood," said Rev. C. K. Masters, who leaves shortly as Chaplain of one of the Overseas Batt. in the first sermon preached in Wiarton to an Overseas detachment.

Forty eight of the Wiarton quota, of the Bruce Batt. in their new Khaki uniforms, under Lieut. Harold Hay, paraded on Sunday morning to Trinity Church where a large number of civillians also heard a splendid address by Rev. Mr Masters.

Upon announcing his text "behold I have set before thee an open door" Mr Masters said he had never used it before except to stimulate missionary work and thus extend the kingdom of God and in the present circumstances he deemed it appropriate as the issues for which we are fighting he declared were not political but moral and spiritual "now" said he "these young men are to stand on their feet and they will be away from their past environments as they are entering into the open door and the kingdom and I firmly believe in the remarks of the Chaplain General of the British Forces that in the heat of conflict and the stress of war what we need more than men of war is men of God.

The Late James Edwards.

With the death of James Edwards one more of the old residents has joined the vast majority. Born in Armagh, Ireland in 1850, he was a splendid type of Irish manhood, intensely loyal to his King and to his employer Coming to this country when nineteen he worked several years for the lumbermen J. B. Smith & Sons in Angus. Returning to Ireland he spent several years in Belfast ship yards. Thirty-three years ago he returned to this country with his wife, in the employment of Alex McNeil, at that time the last named gentleman was member for North Bruce, and "Big Jim Edwards" was his trusted driver in nearly all his election campaigns. For eleven years he was with M. Swale, retiring to his farm in Albemarle in 1897 where he died quite suddenly last Thursday in his 65th year. An exceptionally healthy man all his life, during the last year or so, heart trouble had developed which was the immediate cause of his death. No matter how hard luck was against him no one ever heard "Jim" complain, and many a less fortunate comrade felt his helping hand. His wife predeceased him six years ago, both being now buried in Colpoys cemetery. The funeral conducted by the Rev. C. K. Masters took place last Sunday, and was largely attended. Wiarton Orangemen sent flowers, also Alex and Malcolm McNeill.

Of surviving relatives there are his father and two sisters in Ireland, the former aged 97, a sister, Mrs Lynas, a nephew and neice on the farm. Two neices Mrs B. Hill and Miss Hester Lynas Pittsburg, Mrs G. Moore, Wiarton. Two brothers Robert and Charles in the States, and other neices in Toronto, most of whom attended the last rites.

Letter From Charlie Dobson

Bramshott Camp
Liphook. Hants
Dec 16th. 1915

To the A. Y. P. A.

Dear friends:—

I have received a parcel of home made candy from the society for which I feel that I can't thank you enough. It is indeed a treat as I have not had anything like it since leaving and I shall not forget where it came from

I wrote your President some time ago telling something of the camp life here and of our trip over. There are at present about 1600 or 1700 Canadians at Bramshott Camp, about 12 battalions in all. It is a rather large camp compared with the one in London, Canada and we are quartered in huts instead of tents.

The country around the camp is very beautiful although we do not get the full benefit of it at this time of the year. It is very wet just now, raining almost every day. I think I would rather have our Canadian winters than the rainy weather here As a result of the change I was in the hospital for 2½ weeks with a touch of pneumonia and influenza, spending part of the time in the Canadian Convalescent home at Wokingham, not far from London. Here I met plenty of the boys of the first contingent who were there for a rest after coming out of the hospital, having been wounded in the fighting in France. From there they are discharged and attached to reinforcements and sent back to France.

So far I have not had the chance of seeing any of our A. Y. P. A. boys since coming over here. I had a letter from Mr Bevan saying he was going to the front soon and also one from Harvey Williams. I have lost track of Harry Fogden and would be glad to get his address if anyone has it.

I was glad to hear of the success of the play this year and hope I shall be back to see the one next year. The A. Y. P. A. seems to be keeping on top in plays as well as other things and I sincerely wish the society every success in all its future undertakings

Again thanking you for your kind remembrance and wishing you all a Very Merry Christmas and Joyous New Year. I remain

Grey and Bruce Counties

CLIPPED FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES

Chesley

The evidence of good times in Chesley is especially noticeable this winter. Beginning at the corner drug store and for a block west, all kinds of freight in teamloads may be seen consigned here. Lined up on this street for sale the other day were eleven loads of wood, two of hay three of lumber, three of brick, besides other commodities, making it a busy mart. It might be said we are getting more like New York every day; but it will take a little while yet.

For the first time since 1908 Arran council was elected by acclamation at the recent nominations.

Dr. Biehn has been down at Bright this week visiting his aged mother who is seriously ill. Reeve Douglas of Hepworth was in town yesterday. He has started on his tenth year as a member of Bruce County Council and from length of service and ability should be Warden of this county for 1916.

The first hockey game of the season played in Chesley rink on New Year's afternoon resulted favorably to the home team by a score of 4 to 1. The ice was not in good condition for fast hockey owing to the mild weather. The game was rough from start to finish. Ab McCaffery was the best player for the local team. The half time score was three to one in favor of Chesley. Two of the O. S. players, Wilson and Oliver received slight injuries. The 147th Batt Intermediate N. H. L. team from Owen Sound accompanied by about 100 men in khaki, and commanded by Captain Pollock paraded from the station and presented a fine appearance. Chesley team has got off to a good start and should be at the top when the season closes. Roy Heppenstall, Paisley was referee. The line up

Owen Sound

One of the most satisfactory features of yesterdays election was the splendid vote in favor of Owen Sound's latest industrial acquisition—the Shoe Factory. The vote was 1314 in favor of the by law and 342 against, leaving a majority of 972. Mr Wilson, the promoter, was seen by The Sun a few minutes after the returns were complete, and he expressed his thanks to the electors for the way his proposition has been approved. Mr. Wilson said that work would be commenced on remodelling the Pacific Hotel this week and would be pushed rapidly to completion. Machinery was already purchased, subject to the passing of the By-law.

Two of the three cases of whiskey which Inspector Beckett seized at the Canadian Express Office were confiscated at the police court Friday afternoon, no one turning up to claim them. One of the town constables testified that he had endeavored to serve summonses on the persons, to whom the wet goods were consigned, but was unable to locate any one of the name or either Dr. Sutherland or W. C. Meyers. Decision was reserved in the case of Mrs Holton, to whom the third consignment was addressed, as she was unable to appear.

Well, the town is safe for another year. The electors have said their say, and all that remains is for the Councillors and Commissioners to get down to work. The Shoe Factory By-Law was carried by a big majority and as for Local Option well, its majority was within a few votes of what it got the first time it was submitted. Local Option will stay for another three years; and we might almost hazard the opinion that the question is disposed of for keeps

Dr. H. G. Murray is the next of our local physicians to leave for the seat of war. He received notice Tuesday of his appointment to the surgical staff of the Queen's University Hospital Unit at Cario, Egypt; and will leave for his post of duty on Saturday and Monday. The notice asked him to report as soon as possible, and he goes as soon as he can arrange some private matters here. The appointment is a good one, carrying with it the rank of Captain. We join with Dr. Murray's many friends in congratulating him on his appointment and wishing him the best of luck and success. His removal renders vacant the office of Medical Officer of Health for the town, which he has held for some time, and it will not be easy to find a successor who will fill it as well.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Southampton

The death occurred at Cleveland, Ohio, on Dec. 15th, of Alexander Sharp, and engineer of the Pere Marquette railroad and a resident of Saginaw, Mich. Deceased was born in Southampton, and spent his boyhood days here. His father was a merchant in Southampton about half a century ago.

Mr and Mrs Chas. Hull and babe of Wiarton spent New Year's with the latter's mother here, Mrs E. Hammer.

Conductor J. J. Cox has been seriously ill with pneumonia but last reports give some improvement in his condition, and we all hope to see him back on duty again soon.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach remedy in the whole world and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

PAISLEY

Mr Wm Jack, who is a fine clarinet player, has enlisted as a bandsman with the 160th Bruce Battalion. Messrs. M. Macdonald (barber) and J. S. Simon (2nd. Bruce) are the latest recruits who signed up at Paisley. Messrs Bernard Brown (tinsmith) Frank E. Wells (Elora road north) and Wm Granger (Eld) who enlisted some time ago, went to Walkerton on Tuesday.

Mr John Hammond of Elder-lie brought in the largest bird that has been delivered in Paisley poultry market this year, a 35 lb turkey which he exchanged for $7 00 cash at Ballagher, Laidlaw & Co's store.

The municipality has got rid of the bit elephant on it's hands. While the value ($850) is probably only about the price of a good elephant hide, yet there are grounds for all will be pleased to have this piece of idle depreciating property on the list as tax-paying dwellings, and will be under the bargain made. Mr John Collins is the purchaser and he is to erect a number of dwellings. As the amount of land provides ample room for four large village lots, it is possible there may be that number of new homes take the place of the factory building before long. The material obtainable from the present structures is estimated to be worth considerable more than the cost of tearing it down, and as all the machinery also becomes the property of the purchaser, it is considered that Mr Collins has a very good bargain on his hands. The houses to be built must be of a value not less than $1200 each.

KEEPING IT DARK

"All the passengers in the railway carriages with one exception wore some form of war badge. A stranger only was undecorated. A fussy badge-wearer remarked: 'I see, sir, that you are the only one not engaged in some form of war work.'

"I prefer to be quite unostentatious about what I do.'

"What is your war work?" continued the inquisitive one.

"Sir, I am a German spy; but I do not care to make my occupation too public."—Manchester Guardian.

Walkerton

A big reception will be tendered in the Town Hall on Friday night to Capt. Arthur W. McNally, who has returned to take a commission in the Bruce Battalion, after being twice wounded at the front. Mr. W. H. Price, M. P., of Parkdale, who travelled extensively over battle-scarred Flanders during the past summer, will address the gathering, Capt. McNally will relate some of his experiences in the war. The Town Council will make him a fitting presentation on that occasion. A strong recruiting appeal will also be one of the features.

Mr. Arthur Grabell, a former Walkerton boy, and whose late father at one time conducted a blacksmith shop here, is back renewing acquaintances in town after an absence from Walkerton of 27 years. After leaving here Mr. Garbell joined the Northwest Mounted Police and served with this force for eight years. When the Boer War broke out he enlisted with the Strathcona Horse and went through the South African campaign. He remained in that country for nine years, after which he returned to Canada and took up a farm in Saskatchewan. A big husky chap of over six feet, he is a typical Westerner, and would be a force to be reckoned with on the battlefield. He has applied for a commission in a Western regiment, which is now being formed, and expects soon to be doing "his bit" again for the Empire.

John Joynt, the man who moved the big Patriotic grant in the Bruce County Council at Walkerton last September, and who himself is giving annually $1000 to the Patriotic funds of Bruce and Huron counties as long as the war lasts, was defeated for the reeveship of Lucknow on Monday by J. G. Anderson, ex M. P. P. of South Bruce, who won out by a margin.

License Inspector White laid two complaints each on Tuesday before Magistrate Tolton against Alex. Lambertus of the Vendome Hotel, Teeswater, and the new proprietor of the Chiholser house, there, charging them with selling liquor in a local option territory. This affair is the outgrowth of a raid recently made by Constable French on the two Teeswater hotels in which he seized a quantity of liquor and had it sent to the Dept. to be tested. The hotelkeepers have, we understand, each pleaded guilty to the two charges laid against them and as the minimum fine is $300 on each count, they will likely be mulcted $600 apiece and cost.

With the County elections over, interest is centring around the naming of Warden. Reeve Alec McNab, who was the runner up in the contest last year, is considered the likely occupant of the chair for 1916. Anyone who is at all familiar with Reeve McNab's work in the council here, must feel that is exceptionally qualified, by ability by training and by experience for the Chairmanship of the County Council. His election will prove a most popular choice.

SLANDERING THE BAGPIPES

All English battalions were recently warned to keep careful watch for any contrivances which the Germans might use with the object of producing poisonous gases. Shortly afterwards a certain regiment on taking over some trenches found an old bagpipe left in the lines.

At once the Colonel, who possessed a sense of humor sent the following message to brigade headquarters:—

"A weird instrument has been discovered in my trenches; it is believed to be used for producing asphyxiating noises."—Exchange.

Children Like It

"You know it is not an easy matter to get children to take medicine, and forcing it on them does no good. Most mothers know that a cough medicine, while palatable, should contain no drug injurious to the child.

The great popularity of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is explained by the fact that it contains no opium or narcotic of any kind, and at the same time is so pleasant and agreeable to the taste that children like ments should summarily release every man in the same position. I think that young farmers should also be allowed to go, and in this connection the suggestion has been made to me by a prominent cleric that the clergymen of Canada and others who cannot serve might well play their part in assisting such young men to go, even if such assistance should involve helping out with the crops or gathering the harvest.

"It is estimated that there are upwards of 25,000 young men capable of bearing arms, and anxious to do so, in the banks and other commercial institutions of Canada who are not being allowed to go," said the Minister. "This condition should not exist. Why should not women replace these young men while the war is on?"

DRIVE IS RESUMED.

Russians Have Repulsed Austrian Counter-Attacks With Losses.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The battle between the Russians and Austro-Germans in Galicia and Bukowina continues. The Austrians have made determined counter-attacks along the Middle Stripa and the south-east of the town of Czernowitz, but according to the Russian official communication they were beaten back with enormous losses, while the Russians have made distinct gains, occupying several Austrian positions and taking more than 1,300 prisoners in all.

The Russian official reasserts the claim of the capture of Czartoryak, after admitting a repulse there Saturday. The Austrians succeeded in dislodging the Russians from all of the town except the cemetery, but were unable to hold it. With the arrival of Russian reserves they were themselves ejected.

Th Austrians apparently are fighting desperately in this region in the effort to hold their positions as a screen for Kovel and a link between the Austro-German armies in Galicia and those further north in the neighborhood of Pinsk, which is threatened with envelopment as a result of the Russian advance.

Vienna admitted yesterday that the heavy Russian attacks in Eastern Galicia and in Bukowina have been resumed. The Austrian positions in some places have been penetrated, although the official statement of the Vienna War Office claims they have all been recaptured.

The Russians also record the resumption of the German offensive in the Riga region, where fresh attacks near the Mitau road have been repulsed. The Germans again employed asphyxiating gases, but evidently without success.

These attacks by von Hindenburg, it is believed here, are meant primarily to divert the Russians from their offensive along the south-east front.

PRESERVATION OF TIMBER.

Some Simple Forms of Treating Plants Moderate in Cost.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

In many localities the need for the preservative treatment of farm timbers is imperative. Especially is the advisability of using creosoted posts indisputable. If it is difficult for a farmer to treat his own material with preservatives, this can be overcome by some individual undertaking the work for the neighborhood. A small wood preserving plant could be profitably operated in connection with a threshing outfit, a feed mill or a sawmill. Another plan is for several farmers to cooperate in establishing and operating a plant. Every agricultural district should possess the facilities for increasing by preservative treatment the durability of farm timbers locally used. The process best adapted to this purpose is the "open tank" process.

A simple form of treating plant consists of a black iron tank with a firebox under it. The firebox and hot air chamber are constructed with brick, and a sheet iron collar caps the masonry. The tank is supported by a strong foundation. Such an outfit, with a tank three feet in diameter and four feet high, made of three-sixteenth inch black iron, would probably cost from

BLACK IRON HEATING PLANT WITH MASONRY FIREBOX.

$25 to $30. With such a tank and chimney there is little danger from fire.

When running a treating plant in connection with a threshing engine the heating is done by steam from the engine. The tanks used in such a plant, with the necessary piping, would cost about $50. The cold bath with such an outfit may be a horizontal trough large enough to permit soaking the entire post.

In using the open tank treatment the posts are set in the upright tank, in which they are given the hot bath. Crude petroleum or any heavy oil (but not tar) may be used in this tank and a temperature of about 220 degrees F. maintained by either building a fire under it or by steam. The hot bath is run on an average for two hours, and the cold bath lasts about one hour. The time will vary and must be determined by trial for each case. The principle which governs the treatment is that the hot bath expands the air and moisture in the wood; then by placing the posts in the cold bath a contraction takes place, drawing or pressing the preservative into the wood.

The best treatment is that which will give the deepest penetration in the shortest time with a reasonable absorption. An economical treatment for a post five inches in diameter would be an absorption of not over four-tenths of a gallon if only the butt is treated and six-tenths of a gallon if the whole post is treated. The amount absorbed by a well seasoned post can be determined by weighing the post before and after treatment. It is not advisable to treat such woods as cedar, locust, white oak and black walnut because they are hard to treat and are naturally durable, so that treatment does not greatly lengthen their life and does not justify the expense.

Posts should be peeled and seasoned before treatment. Under favorable conditions the average period required to season posts is five weeks, although this varies with the species and the season of the year. The tops of the posts should be beveled, so that the moisture will run off and not penetrate the post.

BIG BATTLESHIP LOST

H.M.S. King Edward VII. Is Sunk by a Mine.

British Admiralty Announces That Crew Were All Saved When Big Pre-Dreadnought Battleship Went Down—She Is Second Largest War Vessel Lost in Present War and Was Built in 1905.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The British battleship King Edward VII. has been sunk after striking a mine. The entire crew was saved. The Admiralty announcement says: "H.M.S. King Edward VII. has struck a mine. Owing to the heavy sea she had to be abandoned and sank shortly afterwards. The ship's company was taken off without any loss of life. Only two men were injured."

The Official Press Bureau statement makes no mention of the area where the King Edward struck a mine. It is believed, however, she was on patrol duty in the North Sea.

The eight British battleships of the King Edward class are 16,350 tons each and carry a complement of about 775 officers and crew. The King Edward was completed in March, 1905, at a cost exceeding $5,000,000. She had a speed of nearly 20 knots and was 453 feet long, 72 feet beam, and 26¾ feet draught. She carried four 12-inch guns, four 9.2-inch, and ten 6-inch and 18-inch torpedo tubes.

The King Edward is the second largest battleship lost by Great Britain since the beginning of the war. Next to the Dreadnought, Audacious, which was of 24,000 tons displacement, the King Edward is the largest in maximum tonnage, the third being the Formidable, of 15,000 tons.

EXPEDITION HELD UP.

Djemal Pasha Refuses to Move Without German Vanguard.

ROME, Jan. 10.—The Turco-German expedition against Egypt is held in abeyance owing to the refusal of Djemal Pasha to attack the Suez Canal without a German vanguard of 25,000 picked troops.

The completion of the railroad out of Jerusalem is not being pushed nearer than within 50 miles from the Suez Canal. Its continuation is extremely difficult, hence the construction is equally slow.

There is also doubt concerning the loyalty of the Arab irregulars destined to co-operate with the expedition. Syrian troops have been sent to the Dardanelles and to Armenia because their detention was feared by the Turks and Germans.

For these reasons it is considered here unlikely that an attack on the Suez Canal will be attemped before spring.

Prof. Otto, of Vingraeve, who was sent to Jerusalem to search for available supplies of drinkable water on the road to Suez has, according to Berlin advices, reported the discovery of great resources east of Mount Sinai. The whole surrounding territory, now a desert, he state, could be fertilized if German and Austrian engineers were hurried on with adequate machinery and the Turkish armies ensured against the terrible fear of thirst in the projected attack upon Egypt.

CIVILIANS LEAVE NANCY.

Shelling of City by Germans Causes Anxiety.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—It is announced that safe-conducts have been issued to 30,000 persons to leave the city of Nancy. A special train with some of these residents on board arrived in Paris Friday. Others from Nancy have gone to Dijon and elsewhere.

These statements regarding conditions in Nancy, in the result of the fact that the German shells had begun to hit in the town, were contained in a proclamation issued by Prefect Mirman, of the Department of Meurthe et Moselle, in which Nancy is situated, to discredit stories of destruction and panic in Nancy which have been circulating in Paris and elsewhere. The proclamation, which is entitled, "Shame to scorers of panic," gives the casualties at six persons killed and ten wounded, and adds that no fires have been caused by the bombardment. The Prefect states he believes that the exaggerated rumors were started by persons living remote from Nancy, because anyone near there would know they were untrue.

Hastening Plans for Attack.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Greek correspondents continue to assert that the Bulgarians and Germans are hastening plans for an attack on Salonica. The French Sunday official communication says:

"On the morning of January 8 the enemy aeroplanes bombarded the cantonments of the Allies in the environs of Salonica. The material damage was insignificant. One of these aeroplanes was brought to earth by our artillery fire."

Elusive Cruiser Goeben Again.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 10.—"Russian torpedo boats encountered the Goeben (formerly a German cruiser, now the Sultan Selim of the Turkish navy) in the Black Sea, says a Russian official statement. "They withdrew under protection of a ship of the line nearby. A short fight at long range ensued, after which the Goeben fled into the Bosphorus. There were no Russian losses."

Woman Gets Iron Cross.

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Emperor William has conferred the iron cross on Frau Skolik, of Gleiwitz, for thwarting a bomb plot, the work of a spy. This is the first time that a woman has received the iron cross.

Editorial

THE Dominion Parliament is now in session.

WIARTON did not get started at recruiting at the beginning, but we are making up quickly for lost time.

KINCARDINE can get an election for water commissioners, in Wiarton we have to beg men to take the job.

RECRUITING meetings are being held in every school house in this district and are being well attended. It must be admitted that the public would like to see a larger number offer their services at these meetings, but we must not forget that the idea of service and sacrifice must lodge into the minds of the young men and remain there for some time before we see results. The volunteers will come in due time

THE Echo congratulates the Rev. Mr Masters upon his appointment as Chaplain to an overseas battalion, and if we knew the battalion to which he he would be attached we would doubly congratulate it. Any young man who falls wounded in battle will be comforted by his kind attention and sweet message. He has yearned for this appointment as soon as the war began, and The Echo hopes that he will safely return to his parish and family, and the kind words we have said about Mr. Masters we would repeat with emphasis about Dr Hough.

Unjust Criticism

THERE is no doubt that those who are urging the young men to enlist are the subjects of a great amount of undeserved criticism. We often hear it said why do they not go themselves. Those who should go, or those who have sons who should go, take this position to defend their apathy. We believe every man who is urging upon others recruiting as a national duty would go if he were of military age, or if it were possible, and we do not believe any man would urge other men to go, and yet be too selfish to send his sons. Our faith in loyalty to the Empire is too strong for us to entertain any idea to the contrary.

There are many young men who cannot pass the medical test, and all honor to this class who have presented themselves and been refused. Their rejection certificate is some thing that they should preserve and they should be honored by others just as much as those who have been fortunate enough to be accepted.

A COMPLETE BREAKDWN AFTER LA GRIPPE

It Leaves the Sufferer a Victim of Many Forms of Weakness.

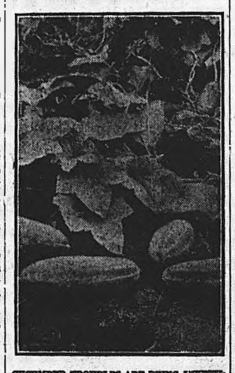
Ask those who have have had la grippe regarding the present condition of their health and most of them will answer "Since I had the grip I have never been well." There is a persistent weakness of the limbs, bad digestion, shortness o breath and palpitation of the heart caused by the thin-blooded condition in which the grip almost always leaves its victims after the fever and influenza have subsided.

They are at the mercy of relapses and complications often very serious. This condition will continue until the blood is built up again. and for this purpose nothing can equal a fair treatment with Dr. Williams Pink Pills. which quickly makes the blood rich and red, drive the lingering germs from the system and transform despondent grip victims into cheerful, healthy, happy men and women. Mr. John Battersby, London Ont., says:—"Just before christmas, 1914, I was taken down with an attack of la grippe and the trouble left me in a deplorable condition. I was almost too weak to walk about, as I was then working on a farm in Western Ontario, I was quit unable to follow m usual work. I tried several kinds of medicine, but it did not help me. As a matter of fact I felt steadily growing weaker, and in this condition, when reading a paper, I saw Dr. Williams Pink Pills advertised and decided to try them. I got a supply and by the time the second box was finished I fel considerable better, and after continuing the pills some time longer I felt better than I had done for months. This was my first experience with Dr. Williams Pink pills, but you may depend upon it that if I find medicine necessary again I will know just what to take."



You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont

CUCUMBER DISEASES.

Injuries Are Due to Several Distinct Troubles.

There have come to the department of agriculture this year an unusual number of reports and complaints of losses to cucumber growers from blights of foliage or fruit, particularly in certain north central states, where pickle growing is an important industry.

These injuries have proved upon investigation to be due to one or another of several distinct troubles—blighting of the foliage by downy mildew or anthracnose, diseases which have already proved controllable by spraying with bordeaux mixture; to the bacterial wilt, a disease the cause of which is known and for which a remedy is being sought; to the pickle spot, a disease of sporadic occurrence and not yet remediable, or in some cases to a disease of still unknown nature called white pickle.

Those troubles not already worked out are being investigated by the state experiment stations in Wisconsin, Michigan and New York and by the United States department of agriculture, and a plan is being formulated jointly by these institutions to carry aid to the growers in case of a recurrence of the diseases next year.

It will have to be proved by experiments whether or not spraying will be generally profitable. The department of agriculture points out to the farmers that a long rotation of crops is an important precaution, which should be practiced by all. There is no evidence that these diseases are spread through the seed.

Apples For Winter Use.

Apples for winter use are usually stored in an underground cellar or in an outdoor pit, says J. C. Whitten of the Missouri station. If a cellar is used it must be well ventilated, but kept above freezing. In the fall it is best to open the ventilators at night and close them during the warmer days. Trap all water drains to prevent the loss of cold air. If the outdoor pit is used heap up the apples on the surface of the ground on a well drained spot and cover with straw. As cold weather approaches put a thin layer of earth over the straw. Later thicken the covering of earth so as to prevent freezing.

News Is Stranger Than Fiction

By MOSS.

SUPPOSE advertising of all kinds the world over were wiped out for a month—utterly obliterated.

Yes, it would ruin business. But it would do more—it would make this old world positively STUPID.

Why?

Because ADVERTISING IS NEWS, and we must keep pace with the news or grow stale.

Newspaper advertising—THE BEST ON EARTH—is displayed news, paid for with a purpose.

The latest news in newspaper advertising, a special sale of furs, a big reduction in suits, a saving in groceries, furniture at annual sale prices or five bars of soap for the price of three—all this latest news is as important to every housewife and the husband who pays the bills as the last word from Mexico or an account of the newest municipal or society scandal.

Advertising is POSITIVELY and ABSOLUTELY news.

Successful advertisers make their ads. as NEWSY as possible.

Read the ads. in this paper as NEWS. Keep up with them. Truth is stranger than fiction. So is news.

Take a Tip From Old Diogenes

By MOSS.

PLATO having a couple of thousand years ago defined man as a two legged animal without feathers, Diogenes (the chap who went around in the daytime with a lantern looking for an honest man) plucked a rooster and took it into the academy where the ancient philosophers discussed everything under the sun and said, "This is Plato's man." On which account this addition was made to the definition: "With broad, flat nails."

We all admit that old Diogenes was a pretty smart Greek, with a fine sense of humor. If he lived today he wouldn't have to use his lantern among daylight newspapers to find an honest advertiser. SUCCESSFUL ADVERTISERS MUST BE HONEST. Dishonesty doesn't pay in advertising or in anything else. No daylight paper wants to have anything to do with the space buyer who deliberately tries to fool the public.

But, coming back to Plato's modified man, the moral of that story is: Be exact. Be specific. Don't overlook the details.

Do you watch the ads. in this paper CAREFULLY enough? Do you keep posted on the details? Do you make it your business to read them with EXACTNESS?

DON'T SKIP THE "BROAD, FLAT NAILS."

None So Blind As He Who Will Not See

By MOSS.

BLIND mistakes are pitiful, but usually preventable.

Take the bichloride of mercury poisoning cases which the papers have been full of recently. The sight of a person facing sure death within a week and arranging his earthly affairs calmly and coolly arouses one's pity. At the same time one usually thinks that the victim should have known better.

Blind mistakes in buying are also pitiful and also usually preventable.

Blind buying leads to DISSATISFACTION and WASTE. Blind buying increases your COST OF LIVING.

It isn't pleasant to have your pocketbook sapped and get little for your money.

Avoid making blind mistakes in buying. Don't rely on the man who is in business for a day. Rely on the man who advertises REGULARLY and HONESTLY in this paper.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

This is for delinquents only. If you are paid do not read it, but if not kindly do not overlook one word. Last week we mailed notices to many in arrears and asked for a settlement this month and stated that all accounts for 1915 and previous years not paid by Jan. 15 will be charged at the rate of $1 50 per year. We mean this, every word. Everyone in arrears has a few weeks to come across, and if they do not make the grade then it is their fault and not ours. At the present time many of the local papers have raised their rates to $1.50 per year, so far we have not made any change. A paper of the class of The Echo cannot be published at $1.00 any longer and make money, but while the price remains at $1.00 we must insist upon the money in advance, or settled at the $1.50 rate. Subscribers will therefore read this notice and please govern themselves accordingly. The label indicates how the subscription stands.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Scientist Studies Battling Soldiers

(Mail and Empire

Dr. George W. Crile, the distinguished Cleveland surgeon, is far from being for peace at the price of national degeneracy. Indeed, he hopes that as man comes to comprehend his own mechanism he may reach "a grade of civilization which will enable him to invigorate himself without ruin." "Struggle," Dr. Crile contends, "is a biological necessity, and even war is preferable to pusillanimous peace leading to degeneracy." Returned from Europe, where he was surgeon in charge of the Lakeside unit of Western Reserve University at Neuilly, Dr. Crile has just published the summary of his observations at the front in a little book entitled. "A Mechanistic View of Peace and War," issued by the Macmillan Company. It is an extraordinary book.

War a Normal State of Man

It is no message of the universal brotherhood of man banded in the altruist's dreams of peace that Dr. Crile conveys, from introductive conclusion. He says at once;

"As I reflected upon the intensive application of man to war in cold, rain and mud; in rivers, canals and lakes; underground, in the air, and under the sea; infested with vermin, covered with scabs, adding the stench of his own filthy body to that of his decomposing comrades; hairy begrimmed, bedraggled, yet with unflagging zeal striving eagerly to kill his fellows: and as I felt within myself the mystical urge of the sound of great cannon, I realize that war is a normal state of man."

From Peace to War

The quick self-adaptation of men from the pursuits of peace to life at the front he describes thus:

"In the first impact of war many men in all of the armies became insane: many under went nervous breakdown; some became hysterical; but the great majority became seasoned and maintained a state of good health. The rigid, alert, muscular response uses up much energy; the appetite is active, digestion good, and if the supply of food is adequate the balance of nutrition is maintained. I have observed, however, that soldiers in the trenches show unusual lines of strain upon their faces, giving them the appearance of being from five to ten years older than their actual ages."

The Reaction of Artillerymen

The bodily reaction of artillerymen to concentrated fire Dr. Crile compares, in some cases, to that of workmen who experience caisson disease, or "bends," while laboring under atmospheric pressure in tunnels, the rarefication and condensation of the air causing such violent changes in the gaseous tension of the blood as to rupture blood vessels in the central nervous system. Artillery action he vividly qualifies: "It is like quarreling by telegraph." The psychology of waiting under fire, considered perhaps the most trying ordeal of the soldier is analyzed as follows:

"Instinct urges him to face the oncoming enemy. He realizes the possibility of immediate death. His kinetic system (the group of organs, in the body by means of which man and animals transform the potential energy contained in in the blood into muscular action, emotion body heat) is speeded to the utmost He is activated for a fierce physical attack. He is under extreme emotion. His heart pounds loudly against his ribs, his hands tremble, his knees shake, his body is flushed with heat, he is drenched with sweat.

The Soldier Under Fire

"In mechanistic terms the phenomena manifested by the soldier waiting under fire may be interpreted as follows: His brain is activated by the approach of the enemy. The activated brain in turn stimulates the adrenals, the thyroid, the liver. In consequence thyroidin, adrenalin and glycogen are thrown into the blood in more than normal quantities. These activating substances are for the purpose of attack or escape. As the secretions thus mobilized are utilized in neither attack nor escape, heat and the muscular actions of shaking and trembling are produced. The rapid transformation of energy causes a correspondingly rapid production of acid by-products."

BOSTON AGAIN

A New Yorker who recently returned from a visit to Boston vouches for the truth of the following: One afternoon he found the six-year old son of his host settled in front of the drawingroom fire with a sheet of paper before him and a pencil in his chubby fist. Stealing a look over the boy's shoulder he saw that the little fellow was making pictures.

"Well Bobby," he asked gently, "are you drawing an engine?"

Slowly the child looked up and slowly he spoke:

"It would take a very strong boy to draw an engine; but I am making a picture of a locomotive."—Youth's Companion.

WHAT DOES YOUR MIRROR TELL YOU?

Your mirror has a message for you. Is it one of health and good cheer ? Or do you read there signs of disease and a warning to take action ?

Is your complexion pale and sallow ? Lips, gums and eyelids without color ? Is there puffiness under the eyes ?

These are indications of anaemia or poor quality of blood. Other symptoms are shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, faintness and dizziness, swelling of the ankles, indigestion and irritable temper, ringing in the ears and dimness of vision.

The blood is watery. It is lacking in the red corpuscles which supply nutrition to the nervous system and go to build up the cells and tissues of the body. You need just such help as is best supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. In this food cure you get in condensed and easily assimilated form the ingredients from which good, rich, red blood is formed. Gradually and naturally the weak, listless body is restored and the vital organs resume their various functions.

Since the Nerve Food cures by the building-up process, you must expect to keep up the treatment for some little time. The thoroughness of the cure will more than reward you for your perseverance, and in the meantime your mirror will tell you of improving health and the return of color to the cheeks.

"Stranger things have happened than that you should patch up your difficulties and go back to live with your husband."

She uttered a little cry of revulsion.

"How dare you suggest such a thing! How dare you speak to me in that way! You—I ought to order you out of this room and never—never"—

My luminous smile checked the outburst.

"Splendid!" I cried. "You convince me that it can never happen."

"You spoke of him as my husband," she said, going back to my remark. "He is not my husband. Please be good enough to remember that."

"It will be easy, I assure you. May I therefore venture the hope that if you ever decide to marry again you'll give some deserving American a chance to make you his queen?"

"I shall never marry, Mr. Smart," she said with decision. "Never, never again will I get into a mess that is so hard to get out of. I can say this to you because I've heard you are a bachelor. You can't take offense."

"I fondly hope to die a bachelor," said I with humility.

"God bless you!" she cried, bursting into a merry laugh, and I knew that a truce had been declared for the time being at least. "And now let us talk sense. Have you carefully considered the consequences if you are found out, Mr. Smart?"

"Found out?"

"If you are caught shielding a fugitive from justice. It occurred to me last night that the safest thing for you to do, Mr. Smart, is to—to get out yourself," I stared. She went on hurriedly, "Can't you go away for a month's visit or"—

"Well, upon my soul!" I gasped. "Would you turn me out of my own house? This beats anything I've"—

"I was only thinking of your peace of mind and your—your safety," she cried unhappily. "Truly, truly I was."

"Well, I prefer to stay here and do what little I can to shield you and Rosemary," said I sullenly.

"I'll not say anything horrid again, Mr. Smart," she said quite meekly. (I take this occasion to repeat that I've never seen any one in all my life so pretty as she!) Her moist red lip trembled slightly, like a censured child's.

"How dare you suggest such a thing!"

With an abrupt change of manner she began to pace the floor, distractedly beating her clinched hands against her bosom. Twice I heard her murmur, "Oh, God!"

This startling exposition of feeling gave me a most uncanny shock.

And now I was witness to the pain she suffered; now I heard her cry out against the husband that had hurt her so pitilessly. I turned my head away, vastly moved. Presently she moved over to the window. A covert glance revealed her standing there, looking not down at the Dannbe that seemed so far away, but up at the blue sky that seemed so near.

The sound of dry, suppressed sobs came to my ears. It was too much for me. I steathily quit my position by the mantelpiece and tiptoed toward the door, bent on leaving her alone. Halfway there I hesitated, stopped and then deliberately returned to the fireplace, where I noisily shuffled a fresh supply of coals into the grate. It would be heartless, even unmannerly, to leave her without letting her know that I was heartily ashamed of myself and completely in sympathy with her. Wisely, however, I resolved to let her have her cry out. Some one a great deal more farseeing than I let the world into a most important secret when he advised man to take that course when in doubt.

For a long while I waited for her to regain control of herself, rather dreading the apology she would feel called upon to make for her abrupt reversion to the first principles of her sex. The sobs ceased entirely. I experienced the sharp joy of relaxation. Her dainty lace handkerchief found employment. First she would dab it cautiously in one eye, then the other, after which she would scrutinize its crumpled surface with most extraordinary interest. At least a dozen times she repeated this puzzling operation. What in the world was she looking for? To this day that strange, sly peeking on her part remains a mystery to me.

She turned swiftly upon me and beckoned with her little forefinger. Greatly concerned, I sprang toward her. Was she preparing to swoon? What in heaven's name was I to do if she took it into her pretty head to do such a thing as that?

"Look!" she cried, pointing upward through the window. "Isn't she lovely?"

I stopped short in my tracks and stared at her in blank amazement. What a stupefying creature she was!

She beckoned again impatiently. I obeyed with alacrity. Obtaining a rather clear view of her eyes, I was considerably surprised to find no trace of departed tears. Her cheek was as smooth and creamy white as it had been before the deluge. Her eyelids were dry and orderly, and her nose had not been blown once to my recollection. Truly, it was a marvelous recovery. I still wonder.

The cause of her excitement was visible at a glance. A trim nursemaid stood in the small gallery which circled the top of the turret, just above and to the right of us. She held in her arms the pink hooded, pink coated Rosemary, made snug against the chill winds of her lofty parade ground.

Catching the nurse's eye, she signaled for her to bring the child down to us. Rosemary took to me at once. A most embarrassing thing happened. On seeing me she held out her chubby arms and shouted "da da!" at the top of her infantile lungs.

I flushed, and the countess shrieked with laughter. It wouldn't have been so bad if the nurse had known her place. If there is one thing in this world that I hate with fervor it is an ill mannered, poorly trained servant. A grinning nursemaid is the worst of all.

"Ha, ha!" I laughed bravely. "She—she evidently thinks I look like the count. He is very handsome, you say."

"Oh, that isn't it!" cried the countess, taking Rosemary in her arms and directing me to a spot on her rosy cheek. "Kiss right there, Mr. Smart. There! Wasn't it a nice kiss, honey bunch? If you are a very, very nice little girl the kind gentleman will kiss you on the other cheek some day. She calls every man she meets da-da," explained the radiant young mother.

"Oh," said I, rather crestfallen.

"Would you like to hold her, Mr. Smart? She's such a darling to hold."

"No—no, thank you," I cried, backing off.

"Oh, you will come to it, never fear," she said gayly as she restored Rosemary to the nurse's arms. "Won't he, Blake?"

"He will, my lady," said Blake with conviction. I noticed this time that Blake's smile wasn't half bad.

At dinner that evening I asked Poopendyke point blank if he could call to mind a marriage in New York society that might fit the principals in this puzzling case.

"I'm sorry, sir, but—but I can't do it. I promised her this morning I wouldn't let it be dragged out of me with redhot tongs."

CHAPTER X.

I Receive Visitors.

THE east wing of the castle was as still as a mouse on the day my house party arrived. Grim old doors took on new paddocks, keyholes were carefully stopped up, creaking floors were calked, and yet I trembled. My secret seemed to be safely planted, but what would the harvest be?

Elsie Hazzard presented me to her friends, and with lordly generosity I presented the castle to them.

There was a Russian baron whom for brevity's sake I'll call Umovitch. There was a Viennese gentleman of twenty-six or eight, I heard, but who looked forty. His name was Pless. He was a plain mister. The more I saw of him the first afternoon the more I wondered at George Hazzard's carelessness. Then there were two very bright and charming Americans, the Billy Smiths. He was connected with the American embassy at Vienna, and I liked him from the start. The baron was in the Russian embassy and was really a very nice boy.

"And this Mr. Pless, who is he?" I asked.

Elsie was looking at the rakish young man with a pitying expression in her tender blue eyes.

"Poor fellow!" she sighed. "He is in great trouble, John. We hoped that if we got him off here where it is quiet he might be able to forget. Oh, but I am not supposed to tell you a word of the story! We are all sworn to secrecy."

"Women," said Billy impressively. "Then it's easily patched," said I. "Like cures like."

"You don't understand, John," said Elsie gravely. "He was married to a beautiful"—

"Now, Elsie, you're telling," cautioned Betty Billy—Mrs. Billy Smith.

"Well," said Elsie doggedly, "I'm determined to tell this much. His name isn't Pless. His wife got a divorce from him, and now she has taken their child and run off with it, and they can't find—what's the matter?"

"Poor fellow!" she sighed.

My eyes were almost popping from my head.

"Is—is he a count?" I cried, so loudly that they all said "Shh" and shot apprehensive glances toward the pseudo Mr. Pless.

"Goodness!" said Elsie in alarm. "Don't shout, John."

Billy Smith regarded me speculatively. "I daresay Mr. Smart has read all about the affair in the newspapers."

"I haven't seen anything about it in the papers," said I, trying to recover my self possession which had sustained a most tremendous shock.

"Thank heaven!" cried Elsie devoutly.

"The poor fellow is almost distracted. Really, Mr. Smart, we planned this little visit here simply in order to—to take him out of himself for awhile. It has been such a tragedy for him. He worshiped the child." It was Mrs. Billy who spoke.

"And the mother made way with him?" I queried, resorting to a suddenly acquired cunning.

"It is a girl," said Elsie in a loud whisper—"the loveliest girl. The mother appeared in Vienna about three weeks or a month ago and—whiff!—off goes the child. Abducted—kidnaped! And the court had granted him the custody of the child. That's what makes it so terrible. If she is caught anywhere in Europe—well, I don't know what may happen to her. It is just silly acts as this that make American girls the laughingstocks of the whole world."

By this time I had myself pretty well in hand.

"I daresay the mother loved the child, which ought to condone one among her multitude of sins. I take it, of course, that she was entirely to blame for everything that happened."

They at once proceeded to tear the poor little mother to shreds, delicately and with finesse, to be sure, but none the less completely.

"What was her social standing in New York?" I inquired.

"Oh, good enough," said Betty Billy. "She was in the smartest set, if that is a recommendation."

To my disgust the three of them refused to enlighten me further as to the history, identity or character of either Mr. or Mrs. Pless, but of course I knew that I was entertaining under my roof by the most extraordinary coincidence the Count and Countess of Something-or-other, who were at war, and the child they were fighting for with motives of an entirely opposite nature.

"What time do we dine?" asked Mr. Pless later, with a suppressed yawn.

"At 8," said Elsie promptly.

"I think I'll take a nap," said he. With a languid smile and a little flaunt of his hand as it dismissing us, he moved languidly off, but stopped after a few steps to say to me, "We'll explore the castle tomorrow, Mr. Smart, if it's just the same to you." He spoke with a very slight accent and in a peculiarly attractive manner. There was charm to the man, I was bound to admit. "I know Schloss Rothhoefen very well. It is an old stamping ground of mine."

"Indeed!" said I, affecting surprise.

"I spent a very joyous season here not so many years ago. Hohendahl is a boyish friend."

I was eager to steal away to the east wing with the news, so somewhat later I knocked at the countess' door. I realized that it was a most unseemly hour for calling on a young, beautiful and unprotected lady, but the exigencies of the moment lent moral support to my invasion.

The countess' French maid peered out at me.

"Tell your mistress that I must see her at once."

"Madame is not at home, m'sieur," said the young woman.

"Not at home?" I gasped. "Where is she?"

"Madame has gone to bed."

"Oh!" I said blinking. "Then she is at home. Present my compliments and ask her to get up. Something very exasperating has hap"—

"Madame has request me to inform m'sieur that she knows the count is here and will you be so good as to call tomorrow morning."

"What! She knows he's here? Who brought the information?"

"The bountiful Max, m'sieur. He bring it with dejeuner again with dinner and but now with the hot water, m'sieur."

"Oh, I see!" said I profoundly. "In that case I—shan't disturb her."

Very stiffly and ceremoniously I advised caution for the next twelve hours and left.

Now it may occur to you that any self respecting gentleman in possession of a castle and a grain of common sense would have set about to find out the true names of the guests beneath his roof. But it so happens that I rather enjoyed the mystery. The situation was unique, the comedy most exhilarating. Of course there was a tragic side to the whole matter, but, now that I was in for it, why minimize the novelty by adopting arbitrary measures? Somewhat gleefully I decided that it would be good fun to keep myself in the dark as long as possible.

When I reached the room where my guests were assembled I found Mr. Pless and the Baron Umovitch engaged in an acrimonious dispute over a question of bridge etiquette. The former had resented a sharp criticism coming from the latter, and they were waging a verbal battle in what I took to be five or six different tongues, none of which appeared to bear the slightest relationship to the English language. Suddenly Mr. Pless threw his cards down and left the table without a word of apology to the two ladies, who looked more hurt than appalled.

He said he was going to bed, but I noticed that he took himself off in the direction of the moonlit loggia. We were still discussing his defection in subdued tones—with the exception of the irate baron—when he re-entered the room.

"Are there real spirits in your castle, Mr. Smart, or have you flesh and blood mediums here who roam about in white night dresses to study the moods of the moon from the direst ramparts?"

I started. What indiscretion had the countess been up to?

"I don't quite understand you, Mr. Pless," I said, with a politely blank stare.

"My dear countess," said I the next morning, "while I am willing to admit that all you say is true, there still remains the unhappy fact that you were very near to upsetting everything last night. Mr. Pless saw you quite plainly. The moon was very full, you'll remember. Fortunately he was too far away from your window to recognize you. Think how easy it might"—

"But I've told you twice that I held my hand over Pinkie's nose, and he just couldn't bark, Mr. Smart. You are really most unreasonable about it. The dog had to have a breath of fresh air."

"Why not send him up to the top of the tower and let him run around on the"—

"Oh, there's no use talking about it any longer!" she said wearily. "It is all over, and, no real harm was done. I am awfully sorry if they made it uncomfortable for you."

"And now will you be good enough to tell me who I am?" she asked after a few minutes. "That is, who am I supposed to be?"

"Oh," said I uneasily, "you are really nobody! You are Britton's wife."

"What! Does Britton know it?"

"Yes," said I, with a wry smile. "He took a mean advantage of me in the presence of George Hazzard not an hour ago and asked for a raise in wages on account of his wife's illness. It seems that you are an invalid."

"I hope he hasn't forgotten the baby in his calculations."

"He hasn't, you may be sure. He has named the baby after me."

"How original".

"I thought it rather clever to change Rosemary's sex for a few days," said I. "And now tell me all about Mr.

Pless," she said. "How is he looking? Does he appear to be unhappy?" There was a curious note in her voice, as of anxiety or eagerness, it was hard to tell which.

"He appears to be somewhat sentimental and preoccupied. He gazes at the moon and bites his nails."

"I—I wish I could have a peep at him some time without being"—

"For heaven's sake, don't even consider such a thing!" I cried in alarm.

"Just a little peek, Mr. Smart," she pleaded.

"No" said I firmly.

"There is a great deal at stake," said I. "The peril is—well, it's enormous. I am having my own time heading off a scheme they've got for exploring the entire castle. Your bus—your ex-husband says he knows of a secret door opening into this part of the"—

CHAPTER XI.

I Resort to Diplomacy.

THE countess sprang to her feet with a sharp cry of alarm.

"Heavens, I—I forgot about that! There is a secret panel, and—heaven save us!—it opens directly into my bedroom!" Her eyes were very wide and full of consternation. She gripped my arm. "Come! Be quick! We must pile something against it or nail it up or do something!"

She fairly dragged me out into the corridor and then, picking up her dainty skirts, pattered down the rickety stairs at so swift a pace that I had some difficulty in keeping her pink figure in sight. Why is it that a woman can go downstairs so much faster than a man? I've never been able to explain it.

At last we came to the broad hall at the top of the main staircase. Almost directly in front of us loomed the great padlocked doors leading to the other wing. Passing them like the wind, she led the way to the farthermost end of the hall. Light from the big paneless windows overlooking the river came streaming into the vast corridor, and I could see doors ahead to the right and the left of us.

"Your bedroom?" I managed to gasp, uttering a belated question that should have been asked five or six flights higher up at a time when I was better qualified to voice it. "What the dickens is it doing down here?"

She did not reply, but, turning to the left, threw open a door and disappeared into the room beyond. I followed ruthlessly, but stopped just over the threshold to catch my breath in astonishment.

I was in "my lady's bedchamber."

The immense Gothic bed stood on its dais, imposing in its isolation. Three or four very modern innovation arms loomed like minarets against the opposite walls half open. Some of my most precious rugs adorned the floor, but the windows were absolutely undraped.

"Don't stand there gaping!" she cried in a shrill whisper. "This is the mirror, the middle one. It opens by means of a spring. There is a small hole in the wall behind it, and then there is still another secret door beyond that, a thick iron one with the sixth Baron Rothhoefen's portrait on the outer side of it. The canvas swings open. We must"—

I was beginning to get my bearings. "The sixth baron? Old Ludwig the Red?"

"The very one."

"Then by Jove he is in my study! You don't mean to say"—

"Please don't stop to talk!" she cried impatiently, looking about in a distracted manner. "But for goodness sake get something to put against this mirror!"

My mind worked rapidly. The only object in the room heavy enough to serve as a barricade was the bed, and it was too heavy for me to move. I feared. I suggested it, of course, involuntarily lowering my voice to a conspiratorial whisper.

"Pull it over, quick!" she commanded promptly.

"Perhaps I'd better run out and get Max and Ru"—

"It my bus—it Mr. Pless should open that secret door from the other side, Mr. Smart, it will be very embarrassing for you and me. Let"—

I put my shoulder to the huge creaky bed and shoved. There were no casters. It did not budge. The countess assisted me by putting the tips of her small fingers against one end of it and pushing. It was not what one would call a frantic effort on her part, but it served to make me exert myself to the utmost.

President Falconer Urges Patriotism.

Tells Students to Give Themselves And Their Money to the Empire.

In an inspiring New Year's address to the students of the Toronto University, President B. A. Falconer at noon to-day clearly set forth the duty of the undergraduate during the Easter term. Convocation Hall, in which the address was delivered, was well filled with students, notwithstanding the great reduction in their numbers.

The president said: "This is a year of many decisions, and hard partings. We live day by day, and the fidelity with which we face the day often determines the quality of a life time.

"Our traditions are growing apace. each detachment of our men going overseas acts in such a way as to stir our pride We constantly hear of good things well done."

He then gave figures showing that about 1,700 Varsity men were now on active service. Of the staff, 73 are serving as officers and 8 in the ranks, while 746 graduates are now officers and 171 hold other ranks. Undergraduates numbering 655 are now serving. 284 as officers, and 381 in the ranks. Besides these, there are 10 Y.M.C. workers. He stated that 27 have fallen since October, Fallen heroes include; G.S. Andrews B.A. H. B. Hodge, Wycliffe, C. Hughes, B.A.. S. Kennedy, B. S. A., A. E. Lawton, H. S. Monkman.

"Thirty-one undergraduates left last week to take commissions with the Imperial forces."

In regard to the work at Saloniki, he quoted the authorities as saying that the University base hospital saved the situation.

"And now," he said, "Sir R.L. Borden asks for 500,000 men, a most inspiriting challenge to Canadian young men. The sinking of a ship like the Persia shows the brutal policy of the enemy. Old stock Canadians from farm, village and town are saying that the enemy must be conquered. They would be greater men if put their utterance into action. Many more of our students will take part in this crusade. There are other things to be done and I am going to commend to you students, Belgian and Serbian relief work, Red Cross work, and the work of the Secours Nationale of France. all of which need immediate support. There is also for Canadians the great Patriotic Fund for the future.

Derby Plan is not Needed for Canadians

Ottawa—The statement appearing in the Winnipeg Tribune yesterday afternoon that Gen. Hughes had informed an unnamed Winnipeg officer while in Ottawa that he intended to adopt the Derby recruiting scheme in the near future was unequivocally denied by Gen. Sir Sam Hughes last evening. "I talked to no Winnipeg officer on the subject. I have no intention whatever of changing our own scheme of recruiting for any other scheme. There isn't a single word of truth in the statement" said Gen Hughes emphatically.

"The plan of recruiting which we have pursued in the past and which we intend to continue, is by all odds the best plan which could be devised. It has brought splendid results and will continue to bring splendid results. There is no necessity for changing it for any scheme resembling compulsion and we are not going to change it."

"When we started out to raise one division of men," continued General Hughes, "there were sceptics who gloomily shook their heads and said we could not keep it reinforced and then we raised another and kept it reinforced. When we raised the authorized number of 250.000 the sceptics again shook their heads but we will have the 250,000 raised by the end of the present month. And we will raise the other quarter million just in the same way. What we set out to do we will do.

"There are croakers who tell you that recruiting is falling off. As a matter of fact recruiting all over the Dominion is as brisk as it ever was. In Quebec recruiting has been stimulated as never before and in all the other Provinces it is satisfactory.

"In the matter of officers we are looklooking for men of business ability, professional men, contractors, engineers, men who have rubbed shoulders with the world and who, when they have perfected their military training, make the best soldiers which can be procured."

"We have every reason to be satisfied with our plan of recruiting, so far it has given excellent results, and we have no intention of substituting any other scheme for it" concluded General Hughes.

Every effort will be made to restore these services at the earliest moment and the public will be promptly advised as soon as conditions permit the restoration of the services. The Company states that the necessity of this action is greatly regretted but the suspension of deferred services by other Transatlantic Cable Companies some days ago has resulted in a flood of deferred messages to Western Union Cables and it therefore becomes necessary in order to protect the companys regular patrons and its own expedited service to temporarily suspend all but the regularly fully paid services.

The soldiers gratefully acknowledge the following.

Supper at Mrs. Dinsmores residence given by the Ladies Patriotic League.

The proceeds from a euchre party given by Mr. and Mrs. W. D. McClure in which they were assisted by a large number of ladies, This money is being spent in purchasing a foot-ball, boxing gloves, and other articles for the drill hall.

A basket of home made candy from Mrs. S. J. Cameron.

Provl. Sergt. Dobson has been out to Lions Head to drill the recruits at that point, while Lieut Patterson and Provl. Corp. Spicer are doing the same duty at Cape Croker

Capt. Clark, Walkerton, who will have charge of the recruiting from Hepworth to Tobermory, was in town Monday and inspected the Wiarton troops and pronounced them as fine a lot of men as he has seen.

It must not be forgotten that the nucleus of the now large Wiarton detachment was due to Ex-Mayor Cameron, who persistently stuck to the job of getting twenty-five recruits at this point, and it was difficult work until the Bruce Battalion was started.

And now for business, Mr. Gideon Kastner offers $5 to any man who secures five recruits.

Soldiers Worship at St. Pauls Church.

"Not long ago," said the Rev. J.E. Thompson, Sunday morning, when addressing the Wiarton detachment os the Bruce Battalion, who now number 110, "there appeared the picture of Generals French and Joffre, side by side, and underneath these words the men who did it. and with all honor to them there was no reference to the rank and file, the privates without whom this war cannot be carried on and brought to a glorious end. Bruce County has been asked to raise 1200 men—not 1200 Captains, or 1200 Lieutenants—but 1200 Privates who will do the work that often goes unrecognized, but without whose aid the work cannot be done."

The soldiers were present in a body and were warmly welcomed to the service. The music was of a patriotic character and the Union Jack was in evidence. It is their purpose to attend the different churches on Sunday mornings.

An Old Timer.

There was a snow storm this week that had some class. It began on Sunday and on Tuesday afternoon there was an effort at quitting, but it was impossible to stop like grandfathers clock. It reminded one of the winter of 1903-4, when the Grand Trunk was tied up for week. This was before the North Pole had been discovered, and we thought that the Bruce Peninsula was far enough north. Yes it snowed this week, and blew too. The gale was terrific. all the lost time has been fully made up. At least 24 inches of snow have fallen but it will not stop forever, and the run upon the woodpile will soon let up The storm however, put most of the rural mails out of commission Tuesday. The stages from Lions Head and Stokes Bay were cancelled and the Echo has to appear this week minus of considerable local news.

HOCKEY

The first home game was played here Friday night last and the Wiarton team showed up as strong as last years aggregation. Markdale were the victims, they have a good team but the home boys skated rings around them and outclassed them at every stage of the game, piling up a score of 8—2.

The ice was perfect, the game fast and at times rough, a number of penalties being imposed on both sides.

Wiarton scored first, the visitors retaliated and then the boys in red cut loose and landed seven more in the nets, the Markdale team getting another in the last period.

Tommy Nimmo is guarding the net this year and is proving an effective barrier. Barrett and Mathieson on defence make shooting a difficult job. "Dad" and Allan Ashley are on the team again this year, 'nuff said. And Buster Brown and Red McDonald, two of last years juniors, are on the wings putting up as good as any, so it will be seen we we have a team which will enter the finals.

There are three soldiers connected with the team this year, a number of games will be played and the proceeds donated to patriotic purposes

The line up was as follows

THE AGONIES OF NEURALGIA

A Nerve Trouble, Always Due to Weak, Watery Blood

Only those who have been attacked with neuralgia can form the faintest idea of what its victims suffer. A tingling of the tender skin, a sharp sudden stab from some angry nerve; then piercing paroxysms of pain that is neuralgia. The cause of the trouble is disordered nerves, due to weak, watery blood. The cure is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which makes new, rich, red blood, and thus sooth and strengthens the disordered nerves and cures neuralgia. Mr. Louis Martin, Mildmay, Ont., says: — "I am writing to let you know the great benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me. Two years ago I was a physical wreck. My nerves were unstrung and I suffered tortures from neuralgia, in the head and thorought the nervous system generally. I was almost unfit for work, and only managed to get along with the greatest difficulty. I doctored for about five months and in this time took over forty dollars worth of medicine without any benefit. More, I was actually growing worse, and finally had to take to my bed. My nerves got so bad that I could not turn over in bed without help and the pain was something awful. As I am a farmer you can easily see that necessary work was being neglected, so I sent for a brother in Alberta, to come and take charge of the work. When my brother arrived he at once urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, telling me of some cures that had come under his observation. I got half a dozen boxes before they were all gone, there was no doubt, they were helping me. Altogether I used nine boxes of the Pills and by that time I was a well man, and it is impossible to say how thankful I was for my release from pain.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or 6 boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. William, medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

Letter From Major Fletcher to Mrs. S. J. Cameron, Secretary of Ladies Patriotic League

Bramshott Camp, Jan 1st 1916.

Dear Mrs Cameron,—

On looking through my trunk yesterday I noticed the socks which the Wiarton W. P. L. so kindly sent me when our Regt was in London, and it suddenly dawned on me that I had never acknowledged receiving them, much less thanked you for them Doubtless you will think me very ungrateful and I do not blame you in the least, as it was extremely careless and rude not to do so. All I can say in explanation is that about the time the parcel arrived I was having a very strenuous time, being in camp only four days in three weeks and after that we were preparing to cross the water and in the hurry and bustle it was forgotten entirely. Seeing that this is the season of "Peace and Goodwill" I will ask you to forgive me and trust that you may, although I do not deserve it. If I can be of any service to you while here I will be only too pleased to do anything you wish or give you any information you may require. Mr Simmie is in Scotland at present but will return in a few days. Both he and myself are enjoying the best of health since our arrival, in this we are fortunate as nearly every other officer has been laid up with "La Grippe" or some form of throat trouble which attacks nearly everyone at this time of year. Rain falls here almost continuously at this time of year and we have had only one dry day in three weeks. It is still coming down in torrents to day and blowing a gale but is warm as summer. The grass is fresh and green as in the springtime. We are fortunate in having a good camping ground as there is very little mud owing to the sandy nature of the soil which for the most part is very barren in this locality, only the valleys being cultivated. There are thousands of acres of wasto land partly covered with fir trees and holly bushes. There is also great quantities of heather growing on the higher ground. This is the highest part in the South of England and is considered a healthy place. There are many quaint old buildings and ruins near here, one in partiocular, a church built in 1096 which is still in use. The "Royal Anchor" a hotel about 2 miles away, built in 1794 is doing business. This is said to have been a favorite stopping place of Admiral Nelson. About a mile away is the home of Sir Conan Doyle, the well known writer. About three miles from camp is the town of Haselmere, which is situated in a beautiful valley, where Tennyson lived.

There is no sign of the war being ended as preparations are still being made and buildings erected just as if the war had only began. We have no idea how long we will be here or where we will be sent but do not expect to be moved for some weeks as it will take us that long to finish our rifle practise which we have only began. I have visited the city of London and was greatly impressed with what I saw there. It is not a pretty place by any means but there are so many historic buildings and streets to see that makes it interesting. Saw St. Pauls Cathedral, Bank of England, Trafalgar Square and the famous Tower of London, Did not intend writing at so great a tength when I started but thought perhaps you might be interested in what I have told you.

Before closing I will again ask your pardon for my neglect as stated in the former part of this letter. With sincere good wishes and kindest regards to you and Mr. Cameron

I remain

A Wonderful Medicine For Children.

Mrs Geo. Huffman, Wellington, Ont., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets and can recommend them as a wonderful medicine for children, I am the mother of five and have used no other medicine for any of them." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing of the Tablets. That is why once a mother has used them for her little ones she would use nothing else. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Empire's Call to Ontario:

"ECONOMIZE"

Lloyd George

"We are fighting Germany, Austria, and drink, and, so far as I can see, the greatest of these three deadly foes is drink."

Lord Kitchener

"The men who have recently joined the colors are doing their utmost to prepare themselves for active service with the least possible delay. This result can only be achieved if by hard work and strict sobriety they keep themselves thoroughly fit and healthy."

Admiral Jellicoe

"In the Navy there are three qualities upon which efficiency mainly depends. They are discipline, straight shooting, and endurance; and Temperance unquestionably leads greatly to the promotion of these qualities."

Baron French

"There is no doubt that the work which the Royal Army Temperance Association carries on makes men infinitely better soldiers and better men. If men want to are regiments, battalions, squadrons, batteries, smart and efficient, they must practise these great qualities of self-control and self-sacrifice."

The existence of the British Empire depends upon the outcome of the War. All our resources must be thrown into the scale.

The Empire's call is for men, munitions, food, clothing, and, above all things, MONEY. We are being called upon to give our millions to carry on the war. Sir Geo. E. Foster has stated that the Dominion Government might even ask for a Domestic Loan of $300,000,000. It is only a few weeks ago that Canadians subscribed over $100,000,000 to a War Loan.

These facts bring right home to us that this is, as Premier Asquith stated, "A War of Money as well as Men."

Sir Robert Borden, Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, and other prominent men have emphasized the necessity of economy.

Conserve our wealth. Cut down expenses. This is what we must do.

Something to Think About

Did you ever seriously think about the millions of dollars expended annually for alcoholic beverages in the Province of Ontario?

As nearly as can be estimated from figures, based on Dominion Government returns, the consumption of alcoholic beverages in the Dominion in 1914 was $103,049,129. Assuming that Ontario, whose population is one-third of the Dominion, consumes one-third of the alcoholic beverages, her share amounts to $34,349,709.66. Let us say $33,000,000.

In other words, Ontario's Annual Consumption of Alcoholic Beverages represents the cost of---

1st. Rifles, Machine Guns and Field Guns for an army of 690,523 men on active service for a period of 12 months.

2nd. Or Accoutrements, Camp Equipment, Harness and Saddlery, Transport Vehicles, Signalling and Telephone Equipment, Tools and Miscellaneous Requirements for 1,269,231 men at the front.

3rd. Or one year's Clothing and Necessaries for 330,000 men.

4th. Or Rations, Subsistence or Money Allowances for 226,027 "boys" on active service for one year.

5th. Or the Canadian Government's Separation Allowance for 117,773 dependents for the entire year of 1916.

The foregoing figures are based on the war estimates of the Department of Militia and Defence for 1916-17, as published on December 31st, 1915, in The Toronto Globe.

Signs of the Times

England

The sale of liquor has been curtailed to five and one-half hours per day. WHY?

France

The French Government has prohibited the manufacture or sale of Absinthe, and provided heavy penalties for any person supplying any such liquors to soldiers. WHY?

Russia

The most outstanding example in the world's history of the prohibition of the liquor traffic is Russia. Our ally has enacted absolute prohibition with unbelievable results—both economic and moral. Vice and poverty have given way to happier homes and enormously increased savings accounts. WHY?

Germany

On February 17th, 1915, the General Commander issued a proclamation that any saloonkeeper serving alcoholic drinks to any soldier would be sentenced to one year's imprisonment, and his business closed up. WHY?

United States

Seven more States voted "Yes" on December 30th, for State-wide prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor. WHY?

Canada

Prince Edward Island is dry.

Nova Scotia is all under prohibition except the city of Halifax.

New Brunswick has prohibition in ten out of fifteen counties and in two of its three cities.

Quebec has 900 dry municipalities and only 227 wet.

Manitoba will vote on prohibition this year.

Saskatchewan — Every bar was closed on June 30th last.

Alberta—Declared for prohibition on July 21st last by 50,353 votes, as against 37,309.

British Columbia—The Government is pledged to take a plebiscite.

Ontario

573 municipalities are now dry and there are licenses in only 274. This counts as dry the municipalities voted dry on January 3rd. During the past five years only a single municipality in Ontario has gone back from prohibition to license. Local prohibition has proved an immense success. You are asked to join with the Committee of One Hundred in the demand for a chance to pronounce on Province-wide abolition of the traffic.

Eliminate This Expenditure

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred believes that as a war-time measure, if for no other reason, this colossal expenditure for alcoholic beverages in Ontario should be eliminated. The Committee also has every confidence that the Provincial Government will move in this important matter as rapidly as public opinion will support them.

The function of the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred is to organize, crystalize and give expression to the present state of public opinion on the question of prohibition. The Committee believes that it can demonstrate to the Government that Ontario is overwhelmingly in favor of prohibition. The people will shortly be given the opportunity of signing a petition for presentation to the Government.

The Citizens' Committee of One Hundred is the executive head of this big new prohibition movement. It represents the whole Province. It numbers men of both political parties—men who welcome this chance to work for prohibition now that it has been taken out of politics—earnest men who are working together for the common good.

The public, and this includes those living in DRY municipalities, are urged to join hands with the Committee and insure the success of the movement. Doing so will show that you appreciate the benefits of prohibition in your own municipality and add great strength to the Committee's campaign.

If you live in a Local Option municipality your signature to the petition is just as urgently wanted as it would be if you were under license. Province-wide prohibition would not only confer a benefit on people living where Local Option does not prevail, but would also help to enforce the law in Local Option municipalities.

Red Cross Work At Lions Head

By Helen Murchie in The Canadian Countryman

Some time ago I wrote of the work which British women are doing in France for our soldiers. now comes a letter telling of what has been accomplished by one group of our own women at home. Last summer, in the course of an Institute trip, I visited Lion's Head in the Bruce Peninsula, a charming little town beautifully situated on one of the deep, rocky indentations of the Georgian Bay. From this village I carried away the most vivid impressions, not only of its clean, wind-swept streets, and the delicate beauties of its rugged shores, but also of the delightful friendliness of its people, and of their zeal in all good works, particular in everything concerning the war. The latter was the more remarkable as, especially in winter, it is difficult and costly to ship goods in and out of Lions Head since it is twenty-three miles from Wiarton and the railway.

I have not at hand the report given me then of the work done for the Red Cross, but I remember that a considerable sum of money had been collected, and that large quantities of socks and surgical supplies had been sent down to headquarters. But here is the latest bulletin sent me through the kindness of the president, Mrs. W. B. Moore:

"The knitting has been kept up, and another 90 pairs of socks are about ready for mailing, which completes 100 pairs since you where there (early in July). Yesterday we shipped a large box containing 4 new quilts and 92 articles of winter clothing for relief work in Northern France. Besides this we have kept up the hospital supply work, For British Red Cross the women here canvassed in village and country, and realized $340. Two weeks ago they held a concert and social for Belgian Relief and realized $38. Now we are going to rest from it till after New Years."

They surely deserve that rest! This may be taken as a fair example of the way in which the Women's Institute in town and country are working to furnish the supplies which are everywhere in demand. Instead of the more or less sporadic efforts of last year, things have settled into steady stride, regular work meetings are held, and one can rest assured of a steady flow of supplies as long as the need for them continues.

NOT A BIGAMIST EITHER

"So Allen has secured a rich husband?"

"Yes, and at the same time a mighty poor one."

WILL FIGHT TO LAST

Montenegro Refuses to Consider Signing an Armistice.

Austrians Completely Dominate the Situation in the Little Monarchy, and Are Mounting Guns on Mt. Lovcen as a Step Towards the Defence of Cettinje — Austrians Have Occupied Spizza.

ROME, Jan. 17.—It is extremely difficult to forecast developments in Montenegro, which are expected to be sensational, since the Austrians now completely dominate the situation. Besides occupying Cettinje, the capital, they have planted mine fields to protect Antivari and San Giovannidi Medua, have closed communications by sea, cut off the wireless and have practically isolated Montenegro. Meanwhile Crown Prince Daniele is in ill-health, and it is suspected that he is consumptive. He is now in Rome as the guest of King Victor Emmanuel. The latter, it is now known, has come to Rome from the Italian-Austrian front as a result of developments in Montenegro.

The Austrians have proclaimed a state of siege at Cettinje, and have arrested a number of citizens on suspicion. They have searched the houses of the town, and have requisitioned foodstuffs and disarmed the inhabitants.

Meanwhile guns are being mounted on Mount Lovcen, and trenches are being dug around the city. Three divisions of infantry, with heavy artillery, have been sent to Scutari, and reinforcements are being concentrated at Cettinje in case they are needed to repulse an attack on Scutari.

The whereabouts of King Nicholas are unknown publicly. There is an unconfirmed report that he is on his way to Italy.

The Montenegrin authorities officially deny that Montenegro ever adhered to or intends to adhere to any separate proposal of peace or to any armistice with Austria. It is declared that King Nicholas and his army and people will continue to fight until the last man.

A recent despatch said that after the capture of Mount Lovcen by the Austrians advices had been received to the effect that Austria and Montenegro had arranged an armistice.

The Austro-Hungarian statement dealing with the Montenegrin operations says: In the Balkans the Austro-Hungarians, in continuing their pursuit of the enemy, have occupied Spizza. In Cettinje 154 cannon, 10,000 rifles, 10 machine guns, and quantities of ammunition were captured. The number of cannon taken on Mount Lovcen has reached 45. Three hundred Montenegrins have been taken prisoner. Austro-Hungarian troops have stormed trenches on the heights of Gradina, south of Borase.

DRIVING FOR GORIZIA?

Heavy Artillery Activity May Be Prelude to Advance.

Rome, via London, Jan. 17.—The following official statement from general headquarters was issued yesterday:

"The artillery activity yesterday was weak along the Trentino and Carnia fronts, somewhat lively on the Isonzo and particularly violent on the heights to the north-west of Gorizia. Here the fire of the enemy's batteries was effectively answered by ours, the action continuing until late in the evening in the Oslavia position.

"On the Carso, our artillery actively shelled the enemy trenches in the zone of Monte San Michele, destroying them for a length of 400 yards.

"One of our air squadrons made an extensive raid in the region of the east Isonzo and bombarded the enemy aviation camp at Assovizo, the cantonements at Chiapovano and Boruberg and the railway stations at Lonzatica, Pregasina, and Lubiana. The squadron, which was violently cannonaded by numerous anti-aircraft batteries, returned safely."

Arabs Dispersed Near Suez Canal.

CAIRO, Jan. 17.—The following British official communication issued to-day says: "A column from Matruh dispersed on Thursday 400 Arabs who had been located 40 miles from Matrûh. The Arabs showed no resistance and fled on the approach of our force. More than 100 camels and all of the sheep, goats, and tents belonging to the Arabs were captured, in addition to 26 prisoners. There were no British casualties."

TURKISH FORCE ROUTED

Notable British Success Announced From Mesopotamia.

Relief Army Which Went to the Aid of the Troops Bottled Up at Kut-el-Amara Has Defeated a Large Body of Turks and Is Pursuing Them—Victory Represents a Gain of Twenty-five Miles.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The War Office announced yesterday a fresh British success in Mesopotamia. The British relief force which recently started from Ismi-Ali-Gherbi to hasten to the aid of the 45,000 British troops bottled up at Kut-el-Amara, 62 miles above on the Tigris, defeated the Turkish army on January 8 and 9, after the Turks had considerably hampered its progress. It then forced the Ottoman troops to retreat north-westwards along the river to a point astride the Tigris, 25 miles below stream from Kut-el-Amara. Three days ago the British attacked the Turks there and forced them to retreat further. At last accounts they were still pursuing them.

This success represents a gain for the relief force of more than 25 miles. Moreover, it places it in the immediate neighborhood of Kut-el-Amara, so that the Turkish main force is now between the main British force in that stronghold and the relief force. If the defenders of Kut-el-Amara, through a successful sortie en masse, manage to break through the Turkish lines, the Sultan's army would be put into a perilous plight. On the other hand, if the relief force is able to push its pursuit and effects its aim of relieving the main British army, then the latter will be out of immediate danger despite Turkish superiority, because of its strategical position. A new British drive on Bagdad would be the logical consequence. The text of the War Office statement follows:

"After their defeat on January 8-9 the Turkish force opposing General Aylmer retired to a position astride the Tigris at Orah, 25 miles down stream from Kut-el-Amara.

"General Aylmer attacked the position January 13, hard fighting continuing till nightfall.

"During the evenings of January 13 and 14 the enemy began to retire and is being closely pressed on the east and on the north by the British forces."

The death of the Hon. Ivor Campbell, First Lieutenant of the Seaforth Highlanders, from wounds received in Mesopotamia, is announced.

The above is the first intimation that the Indian division of the British army in France, which was withdrawn from the western front two months ago, had been despatched to the assistance of the force operating against the Turks on the Tigris. The Seaforth Highlanders were attached to the Indian division in France, and it is now known that several other Scottish regiments accompanied them to Mesopotamia.

Lieut. Campbell was a nephew of the late Duke of Argyll, uncle by marriage to King George. Three years ago he served as attache to the British Embassy at Washington.

AUSTRIANS ON OFFENSIVE.

Violent Attempt is Made to Recapture Trenches from Italians.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Austrians made a violent attempt on Friday to recover the positions at Oslavia, north-west of Goritz, which they lost on November 20. These positions have been subjected to many attacks since the Italians crowded the Austrians out of them two months ago.

The attack on Friday was begun with a heavy artillery bombardment on the positions between the Peumico Torrent (south of Oslavia and between that village and the village of Peuma) and Oslavia. This was followed by an infantry attack, which was repulsed. Then came another infantry attack which was successful in gaining for the Austrians some of the trenches occupied by the Italians between Hill 188 and Oslavia.

Saturday morning the Italians made a counter-attack, driving the Austrians back beyond Oslavia and reoccupying the positions east of the village. The battle in which the Italians captured Oslavia in November was a particularly bloody engagement, the captured trenches being filled with Austrian dead when the Italians finally occupied them.

$15,000,000 Fire in Bergen.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Jan. 17, via London.—A third of the City of Bergen, a thriving Norwegian maritime city, with a population of 90,000, was destroyed Saturday night by fire. The damage is estimated at $15,000,000. Two lives are reported lost. The conflagration is said to have been the worst ever recorded in Norway.

The business section, with its old wholesale houses, several of the largest of the hotels, a number of schools, the electric plant and banks and newspaper buildings, was the burned part.

The difficulties of the 2,000 persons now without homes were increased by the fact that the largest storage houses, filled with provisions for supplying the surrounding country, were burned down. It is harder to obtain groceries to-day than at any time since the outbreak of the war.

Steamer Bayo Sunk by Floating Mine

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Only one, out of 36 members of the crew of the Spanish steamship Bayo, was saved when the vessel, on Thursday, was sunk by striking a floating mine, forty miles off the Port of La Rochelle. The Bayo was on the way from Huelva, Spain, for La Rochelle. She was owned in Bilbao, was of 2,776 tons, 233 feet long, and had been built at Whitby, England, in 1892.

Editorial

THE sympathy of this district will go the Hon. A G. MacKay Edmonton, in his battle for life against pneumonia. and the hope will be universal that he will recover

THE Lucknow Sentinel says—"What is the matter with our home boys"(that they do not enlist)? asks a local exchange. All sorts of excuses are given; their families and relatives object, they say, but we notice that when the same parents and relatives object to other doings it does not make the slightest difference; the sons, so obedient when it comes to joining the colors, then do exactly as they please. Why this great show of obedience? Another way of putting it would be; for these young fellows, when they want to go to the devil, father, mother, and friends may plead in vain, but when it comes to going to war, father's and mother's word is law.

The War Comes Home

Until the present it must be admitted that there were not very many here who felt the conditions caused by the war. It is true that there has been more or less of an industrial depression in this town as the lumber business has been paralyzed and all wood working factories have suffered, but beyond this there has not been any financial stringency. Most of the men thus thrown out of work have obtained employment elsewhere, and conditions seem about normal this winter. The farmers have probably never been so prosperous. They had good crops last year, and they have been selling these at high prices. The want and poverty of continental Europe is altogether unknown here. Everyone is living just as they did a few years ago. We simply know nothing yet about hunger and cold.

Until recently, too, there were not so very many recruits from this district, a few had gone. most of them having enlisted elsewhere, two of whom fell in battle. while this saddened the homes affected yet the great majority had not been touched.

Now. however, the case is different The raising of a battalion of 1200 men in Bruce county is bringing the war home and there will not be many homes unaffected The allotment for this district was 250. and it will be raised. This will affect very many homes. Never before have the people been called upon to sacrifice, but true greatness, national, or individual, comes through sacrifice. It has been the glory of national life, and for the State patriots have fought and died. It has been the glory of our Christian religion, it gave it birth, and the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the Church. Many years ago when a missionary offered his services to a foreign field it was a sacrifice. often death, but it was true greatness Now the test of greatness is with us it is for Bruce county to offer her sons for her King and Country, and they are coming forward, great in their strength. great in their spirit of self sacrifice.

But one day the war will be over and there will be many heroes. Those who heard the call of duty and obeyed, those who presented themselves for enlistment but were physically unfit. and those at home, not of military age, who did their bit in saving their country. And the coward will be the man who could have gone, but would not. The future will not have much glory in store for him.

From this time forward we will know what war is—it has come home.

The Town Council

At aspecial meeting recently held Mr James Wilson, Bognor, was engaged as Chief Constable of the town at a salary of $700 per year, and a by-low was put through Monday evening confirming the appointment. He will also be Sanitary Inspector. This gentleman was on the police force in London for a time. Ex-Chief Glover will be night watchman for a time. In addition to these two official heads there are now three military constables in the town, whose duty is to see after the soldiers, consequently it should be difficult now to go astray, or if you do you may be brought up with a thump.

A communication was read from the head quarters Toronto, asking for a donation to the Salvation Army Messrs McVannell and Hurlbut supported, and the Reeve stated that the County Council always give this institution $5 whereupon the town has also given another $5.

It has been difficult this year to get auditors, the removal of Mr H. Walmsley upset the work of the previous meeting of the Council, but at last two others have been secured in the persons of Messrs J. J. Tyson and R. E. Trout.

Coun. Kempt presented a motion instructing the Clerk to write the Hydro-Electric asking them to send an official here to discuss Hydro Electric connections. The Reeve was not opposed to the motion but pointed out that we would have to take 200 h. h. at $42 per h. h. in other words we would have to guarantee $8400, and as we cannot do this another meeting at the present is hardly advisable.

The Assessor and Collector of last year having given excellent satisfaction these gentlemen were re-appointed at the same salaries. The Mayor recommended the appointment as he was not in favor of a change.

While salaries have gone up in every walk of life, the Town Clerk and Treasurer has been obliged to see his remain as stationary as the limestone cliffs around the bay. Last year he asked for an increase and all that was done was to pay the guarantee bond. On Monday evening the Mayor referred to this, to the large amount of work done in his office, and stated that it is most efficiently performed. In fact the Clerk is a most painstaking official. The Council accordingly raised the salary $50.

Councillor Pope brought up the question of ploughing the streets, whereupon Councillor McVannell stated that he intended to have two ploughs at work as is is impossible for one to do it quickly enough, one will work on the flat and the other on the hill.

WIARTON, ONTARIO

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr McCutcheon.

"Don't do that," I protested. "I can manage it alone, thank you."

I secured a strong grip on the bottom of the thing and heaved manfully.

"You might let me help!" she cried, firmly grasping a side piece with both hands.

I Put My Shoulder to the Huge Creaky Bed and Shoved.

The bed moved. By means of great straining I got the heavy thing over against the mirror. One of the legs was hopelessly splintered in the drop from the raised platform.

"There," she said, standing off to survey our joint achievement; "we've stopped it up very nicely." She brushed the tips of her fingers daintily. "This afternoon you may fetch up a hammer and some nails and fasten the mirror permanently. Then you can move the bed back to its proper place. Goodness! What a narrow escape!"

"Madame," said I, my hand on my heart, but not through gallantry, "that bed stays where it is. Not all the king's horses nor all the king's men can put it back again."

"Was it so heavy, Mr. Smart?"

I swallowed very hard. A prophetic crick already had planted itself in my back. "Will you forgive me if I submit that you sleep quite a distance from home?" I remarked with justifiable irony. "Why the dence don't you stay on the upper floors?"

"Because I am mortally afraid," she said, with a little shudder. "You've no idea how lonely, how spooky it is up there at the dead hour of night. I couldn't sleep. After the third night I had my things moved down here, where I could at least feel that there were strong men within—you might say arm's length of me. I'm—I'm shockingly timid."

She smiled, a wavering, pleading little smile that conquered.

"Of course I don't mind, countess," I hastened to say. "Only I thought it would be cozier up there with Rosemary and the two maids for company."

She leaned a little closer to me. "We all sleep down here," she said confidentially. "We bring Rosemary's little mattress down every night and put it in the dressing room. It is a very good fit and makes quite a nice cradle for her. Helene and Blake sleep just across the hall, and we leave the doors wide open. So, you see, we're not one bit afraid."

"Umf!" said I judicially. "And so my study is just beyond this mirror, eh? May I inquire how you happen to know that I have my study there?"

"Oh, I peeked in the other day," she said serenely.

"The dence you did!"

"I was quite sure that you were out," she explained. "I opened Ludwig the Red an inch or two, that's all. You are quite cosy in there, aren't you? I envy you the grand old chaise longe."

We returned to the corridor. She closed the door softly, a mockery in view of the clatter I had made in shifting the bed and its impedimenta.

"Listen!" I whispered suddenly, grasping her arm. "Did you hear footsteps in the— Sh!"

Some one was walking over the stone floor in the lower hall, brisk strides that rang out quite clearly as they drew nearer.

"It is—it is Mr. Pless," she whispered in a panic. "I recognize his tread. As if I could ever forget it! Oh, how I hate him! He"—

"Don't stop here to tell me about it," I cut in sharply. "Make haste! Get up to your rooms and lock yourself in. I'll—I'll stop him."

Assuming a nonchalance I certainly did not feel, I descended the stairs.

TOOK THE ADVICE OF HIS FRIEND

Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism Relieved By "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. L. LABRIE

694 Champlain St., Montreal.

"I have been restored to health by taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I became very weak, had frequent dizzy spells and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints and my hands swollen.

A friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and from the outset, they did me good. After I had started the second box, I felt I was getting well and I persevered in the treatment. I can truthfully say that 'Fruit-a-tives' is the only medicine that helped me.

LOUIS LABRIE.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the famous medicine made from fruit juices.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

We met in the broad hallway below. Mr. Pless approached slowly, evidently having checked his speed on hearing my footsteps on the stairs.

"Hello!" I said agreeably. "How did you get in?"

He surveyed me coolly. "I know the castle from top to bottom, Mr. Smart. To be perfectly frank with you, I tried the secret panel in your study, but found the opposite door blocked. You have no objection, I trust, to my looking over the castle? It is like home to me."

My plan was to detain him in conversation until she had time to secrete herself on the upper floor. Somehow I anticipated the banging of a door, and it came a moment later, not loud, but very convincing just the same. He glanced at me curiously.

"Then how did you get in?" I repeated, cringing perceptibly in response to the slam of the distant door.

"By the same means, I dare say, that you employ," said he.

For a moment I was confounded. Then my wits came to the rescue.

"I see. Through the dungeon. You do know the castle well, Mr. Pless."

"It is a cobwebby, unlovely passage," said he, brushing the dirt and cobwebs from his trousers. My own appearance was conspicuously immaculate, but I brushed in unison, just the same.

"I'd like to have your opinion as to the best way of restoring or repairing those mural paintings in the dome of the east hall," I said, detaining him. It was necessary for me to have a good excuse for rummaging about in the unused part of the castle. "It seems too bad to let those wonderful paintings go to ruin. They are hanging down in some places and are badly cracked in others. I've been worrying about them ever since I came into possession. For instance, that Murillo in the center. It must be preserved."

He gave me another queer look, and I congratulated myself on the success of my strategy. He took it all in. The mocking light died out in his eyes, and he became intensely interested in my heaven sent project.

For fifteen or twenty minutes we discussed the dilapidated frescoes, and he gave me the soundest sort of advice, based on a knowledge and experience that surprised me more than a little. He was thoroughly up in matters of art.

I looked at my watch. Assuming a careless manner, I remarked:

"Come along." I started off in the direction of the lower regions. He followed. I maneuvered with such success that ultimately he took the lead. I hadn't the remotest idea how to get to the confounded dungeons!

At last there came a day of deliverance. The guests were departing, and I can truthfully say that I was speeding them.

Elsie Hazzard took me off to a remote corner, where a little later on Betty Billy and the two husbands found us.

"John, will you ever forgive me?" she said very soberly. "I swear to you I hadn't the faintest idea what it"—

"Please, please, Elsie," I broke in warmly; "don't abuse yourself in my presence. I fully understand everything—at least, nearly everything. What I can't understand, for the life of me, is this: How did you happen to pick up two such consummate bounders as these fellows are?"

"Alas, John," said she, shaking her head, "a woman never knows much about a man until she has lived a week in the same house with him. Now you are a perfect angel."

"You've always said that," said I. "You did not have to live in the same house with me to find it out, did you?"

She ignored the question. "I shall never, never forgive myself for this awful week, John. We've talked it all over among ourselves. We are ashamed—oh, so terribly ashamed. If you can ever like us again after"—

"Like you!" I cried, taking her by the shoulders. "Why, Elsie Hazzard, I have never liked you and George half so much as I like you now. You two and the Smiths stand out like Gibraltars in my esteem. I adore all of you. I shan't be happy again until I know that you four—and no more—are coming back to Schloss Rothhoefen for an indefinite stay. Good Lord, how happy we shall be!"

"Good Lord, how happy we shall be!"

I said it with a great deal of feeling. The tears rushed into her eyes.

"You are a dear, John," she sighed. "You'll come?"

"In a minute," said she with vehemence, a genuine American girl once more.

"Just as soon as these pesky workmen are out of the place I'll drop you a line," said I, immeasurably exalted. "But I draw the line at noblemen."

CHAPTER XII.

I Am Invited Out to Dinner.

MR. PLESS went away with the others at half past 11, and that was the end of his first visit to my domain.

For fear that you, kind reader, may be disappointed, I make haste to assure you that he was to come again.

Of course there was more or less turmoil and—I might say disaffection—attending his departure. He raised Cain with my servants because they did this and that when they shouldn't have done either; he (and the amiable baron) took me to task for having neglected to book compartments for them in the Orient express; he insisted upon having a luncheon put up in a tea basket and taken to the railway station by Britton, and he saw to it personally that three or four bottles of my best wine were neatly packed in with the rest. He said three or four, but Britton is firm in his belief that there was nearer a dozen, judging by the weight.

"Well, thank the Lord!" said I, as the ferry put off with the party, leaving me alone on the little landing. The rotten timbers seemed to echo the sentiment. At the top of the steep all the Schmicks were saying it, too; in the butler's pantry it was also being said; a score of workmen were grunting it, and the wigglass that drew me up the hill was screaming it in wild, discordant glee. I repeated it once more when Britton returned from town and assured me that they had not missed the train.

Conrad, grinning from ear to ear, was waiting for me outside my bedroom door late in the day. He saluted me with downal cordiality.

"A note, mein herr," said he, and handed me a dainty little pearl gray envelope.

"I shan't be home for dinner, Conrad," said I, my eyes aglow. "Tell Hawkes, will you?"

The countess welcomed me with a radiant smile. We shook hands.

"Well, he has gone," said I, drawing a deep breath.

"Thank the Lord!" said she. And then I knew that the symphony was complete. We all had sung it.

It must not be supposed for an instant that I had been guilty of neglecting my lovely charge during the season of travail and despair. No, indeed! I had visited her every day as a matter of precaution. She required a certain amount of watching.

I do not hesitate to say at this time that she seemed to be growing lovelier every day. In a hundred little ways she was changing, not only in appearance, but in manner.

No, to be perfectly frank about it, I can't explain just what these little changes were—that is, not in so many words—but they were quite as pronounced as they were subtle. I may risk mentioning an improvement in her method of handling me. She was not taking quite so much for granted as she did at first. She was much more humble and considerate, I remarked. Instead of bullying me into things she now cajoled me; instead of making demands upon my patience and generosity she rather hesitated about putting me to the least trouble. She wasn't so arrogant nor so hard to manage. In a nutshell, I may say with some satisfaction, she was beginning to show a surprising amount of respect for me and my opinions.

Her devotion to Rosemary was wonderful to see. By the way, while I think of it, the child was quite adorable. She was learning to pronounce my name and getting nearer and nearer to it every day. At the time of which I now write she was calling me (with great enthusiasm) by the name of "Go-go," which reduced to aboriginal American means "Man-With-the-Strong-Arm-Who-Carries-Baby."

"It is very nice of you to ask me up to dine with you," said I.

"Isn't it about time I was doing something for you in return for all that you have done for me?" she inquired gayly. "We are having a particularly nice dinner this evening, and I thought you'd enjoy a change."

"A change?" said I, with a laugh. "As if we haven't been eating out of the same kettle for days!"

"I was not referring to the food," she said, and I was very properly squelched.

"Nevertheless, speaking of food," said I, "it may interest you to know that I expected to have rather a scrumptious repast of my own to celebrate the deliverance. A fine, plump pheasant, prepared a la Oscar, corn fritters like mother used to make, potatoes picard"—

"And a wonderful alligator pear salad," she interrupted, her eyes dancing.

I stared. "How in the world did you guess?"

She laughed in pure delight, and I began to understand. By the Lord Harry, the amazing creature was inviting me to eat my own dinner in her exile manger! "Well, may I be hanged! You do beat the Dutch!"

She was wearing a wonderful dinner gown of Irish lace, and she fairly sparkled with diamonds. As I looked at her standing there by the big oak table I couldn't help thinking that the count was not only a scoundrel but an all kinds of a fool.

"It was necessary for me to bribe all of your servants, Mr. Smart," she said.

"You did not offer the rascals money, I hope," I said in a horrified tone.

"No, indeed!" She did not explain any further than that, but somehow I knew that money isn't everything to a servant after all. "I hope you don't mind my borrowing your butler and footman for the evening," she went on. "Not that we really need two to serve two, but it seems so much more like a function, as the newspapers would call it."

It was my turn to say "No, indeed."

"And now you must come in and kiss Rosemary good night," she said, glancing at my great Amsterdam clock in the corner.

We went into the nursery. It was past Rosemary's bedtime by nearly an hour, and the youngster was having great difficulty in keeping awake. She managed to put her arms around my neck when I took her up from the bed, all tucked away in her warm little nightie, and sleepily presented her own little throat for me to kiss, that particular spot being where the honey came from in her dispensation of sweets.

I was full of exuberance. An irresistible impulse to do a jig seized upon me. To my own intense amusement and to Blake's horror I began to dance about the room like a clumsy kangaroo. Rosemary shrieked delightedly into my ear, and I danced the harder for that. The countess, recovering from her surprise, cried out in laughter and began to clap time with her hands. Blake forgot himself and sat down rather heavily on the edge of the bed. I think the poor woman's knees gave way under her.

"Hurrah!" I shouted to Rosemary, but looking directly at the countess. "We're celebrating!"

Whereupon the girl that was left in the countess rose to the occasion and she pirouetted with graceful abandon before me in amazing contrast to my jumping jack efforts. Only Blake's reserve and somewhat dampening admonition brought me to my senses.

"Please don't drop the child, Mr. Smart," she said. I had the great satisfaction of hearing Rosemary cry when I delivered her up to Blake and started to slink out of the room in the wake of my warm cheeked hostess.

"You would be a wonderful father, sir," said Blake, retaining a little.

I had the grace to say, "Oh, pshaw!" and then got out while the illusion was still alive. (As I've said before, I do not like a crying baby.)

It was the most wonderful dinner in the world, notwithstanding it was served on a kitchen table moved into the dining room for the occasion. Imposing candelabras adorned the four corners of the table and the very best plate in the castle was put to use. There were roses in the center of the board, a huge bowl of short stemmed Marechal Niel beauties.

"Have I told you, Mr. Smart, that I am expecting my mother here to visit me week after next?"

She tactfully put the question to me at a time when I was so full of contentment that nothing could have depressed me.

"You don't say so!" I exclaimed, quite cheerfully.

"That is to say, she is coming if you think you can manage it quite safely."

"I manage it? My dear countess, why speak of managing a thing that is so obviously to be desired?"

"You don't understand. Can you smuggle her into the castle without any one knowing a thing about it? You see, she is being watched every minute of the time by detectives, spies, secret agents, lawyers and heaven knows who else. The instant she leaves Paris, bang! It will be like the starter's shot in a race. They will be after her like a streak. And if you are not very, very clever they will play bob with everything."

"Then why run the risk?" I ventured.

"My two brothers are coming with her," she said reassuringly. "They are such big, strong fellows that"—

"My dear countess, it isn't strength we'll need," I deplored.

"No, no, I quite understand. It is cunning, strategy, caution and all that sort of thing. But I will let you know in ample time, so that you may be prepared."

"Do!" I said gallantly, trying to be enthusiastic.

"You are so wonderfully ingenious at working out plots and conspiracies in your books, Mr. Smart, that I am confident you can manage everything beautifully."

"And now let us talk about something else," she went on complacently, as if the project of getting the rest of her family into the castle were already off her mind. "I can't tell you how much I enjoyed your last book, Mr. Smart. It is so exciting! Would you be entertained by a real mystery?" Very promptly I said I should be. We were having our coffee. Hawkes and the butler had just left the room. "Well, tradition says that one of the old barons buried a vast treasure in the cellar of this"—

"Stop!" I commanded, shaking my head. "Haven't I just said that I don't want to talk about literature? Buried treasure is the very worst form of literature."

"Very well," she said indignantly. "You will be sorry when you hear I've dug it up and made off with it."

I pricked up my ears. This made a difference. "Are you going to hunt for it yourself?"

"I am," she said resolutely.

"In those dark, dank, grewsome cellars?"

"Certainly."

"Alone?"

"If necessary," she said, looking at me over the edge of the coffee cup.

"Tell me all about it," said I.

"Oh, we shan't find it, of course," said she calmly. I made note of the pronoun. "They've been searching for it for two centuries without success. My—that is, Mr. Pless has spent days down there. He is very hard up, you know. It would come in very handy for him."

I glowered. "I'm glad he's gone. I don't like the idea of his looking for treasures in my castle."

She gave me a smile for that.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Countess Gives Me a Surprise.

FULL an hour or more after leaving the enchanted rooms near the roof I lounged in my study, persistently attentive to the portrait of Ludwig the Red, with my ears straining for sounds from the other side of the secret panels. Alas! Those panels were many cubits thick and as staunch as the sides of a battleship. But there was a vast satisfaction in knowing that she was there, asleep perhaps, with her brown head pillowed close to the wall, but little more than an arm's length from the crimson waistcoat of Ludwig the Red. So he sat rather low, like a Chinese god and supported his waistcoat with his knees.

Morning came and with it a smiling determination to get down to work on my long neglected novel.

"A fine morning, sir," said Hawkes in a voice that seemed to come from the grave.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. At any drug store.

Chesley

Mayor Halliday, C. J. Mickle, chairman of the High School Board, and Jos. McNeel chairman of the P. S. B. treated their colleagues and the municipal and school officials and teachers to an oyster supper at Buckley's on Monday night. The caterer came in for considerable eulogies for his spread and the efficiency of the waiter service. A program of speeches was carried out with Mr. Mickle as toastmaster. When the lights went out the company went home each feeling that he had spent a happy evening and the guests of the opinion that the head of the town council and the chairman of the respective boards are right jolly good fellows and hospitable in a marked degree.

Streamers are being painted, prize tags and entry forms being printed, and all the preliminaries being attended to to make this year's Chesley Poultry Show, one that will do credit to not only Chesley but also Bruce Co. and Ontario. Last year's show, opened the eyes of many people, who were astonished at the excellence and number of the exhibits, and there is no doubt that this years show will exceed that of last year in number of exhibits and with this end in view larger premises, the Town Hall, has been secured. Tell your friends about it. Exhibitors can obtain prize lists from the secretary W. Y. McKenzie, Chesley.

Rheumatism and Lumbago

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills:—"My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble. I had awful, sharp pains in the lower part of my back and left hip, and was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

When you have pains and aches put Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to the test. By enlivening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels they cleanse the system of all poisons, and thereby remove the cause of rheumatism, lumbago and other painful diseases.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its vitality; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Owen Sound

Despite their lack of training the 147th battalion team took the measure of Wiarton Intermediate O. H. A. aggregation last night to the tune of 3 to 1. Wiarton got away with a rush in the first few minutes of the play and scored the first and only tally but from then on it was Owen Sound's game. Oliver made the first for the soldiers a few minutes afterwards and came back with another one a few minutes before the end of the period. This ended the scoring for that period and in the second the game was just up and down the ice, both Jamieson and Nimmo stopping a number of hard ones but no scoring was done. The third period opened fast and rough. Fletcher was hit in the stomach and went off, Wiarton put a man off to even up. Tipping and dirty work became the order of the day, but all the time the soldiers were getting the range of the Wiarton nets and kept up a steady bombardment but Nimmo was brewed with a goodly amount of luck and only one shot found its way inside the nets. "Wait till Ashley gets started" was the cry of the Wiarton supporters, but strange to say Ashley couldn't get started as the soldiers were right after him all the time. Stan Burgoyne, of Toronto was referee and held the game well in control. The line up was as follows.

| OWEN SOUND | goal | WIARTON |
|---|---|---|
| Jamieson | | Nimmo |
| Oliver | r defence | Barrett |
| Adams | l. " | W. Ashley |
| Kruitzweiser | rover | Matheson |
| Fletcher | centre | McDonald |

On Saturday the Owen Sound Iron Works Company Ltd. which has been in the hands of a trustee and which was offered for sale a few days ago on a mortgage, came into the possession of interests represented by Messrs. D. M. Butchart and M. Kennedy. The plant is in excellent condition and did a good business until it became involved through losses in contracts for cement making machinery. It is to soon to state just what particular line the plant will be operated on, but under the control of its new owners it will undoubtedly become a large factor in Owen Sounds iron working industries.

A terrible accident and one that may possibly be attended by fatal results took place at the Boyd St. skating rink immediately at the conclusion of the hockey match between Owen Sound and Chesley last evening. The big crowd of 800 or 1,500 people was in the act of leaving the building when about twenty feet of the balcony on the south side near the entrance suddenly collapsed without a moments warning, precipating from forty to fifty persons to the ice below and injuring seven soldiers and two civilians more or less severely. As the injured were picked up and carried into the waiting room immediately after the accident occurred the spectators were given a faint conception of the grim realities of the scenes witnessed in a hospital after a battle and the means which are employed to save for the injured and dying. The scene at the rink was certainly one to excite the sympathy and compassion of the most careless and indifferent. We doubt whether a more tragic event has ever been recorded in the history of Owen Sound.

It is likely that a searching inquiry will be made into the cause of the accident with the view of putting the responsibility on the right shoulders. The fact that so many soldiers were injured is accounted for by the fact that those of them in the balcony on the south side allowed the civilians to pass out first, in order that they, the soldiers, might pass out in a bunch, and in so doing they began to mark time, thereby throwing a heavy strain on the balcony which was not strong enough to withstand the stampede. It was fortunate indeed that the spectators on the ground floor of the south side had made their exit before the collapse occurred, else the consequences might have been more serious.

HOCKEY

The large audience which attended the patriotic exhibition hockey match on Thursday night of last week in the rink here between Chesley and Wiarton, got their moneys worth as well as doing their bit towards making the soldiers club room more cheerful.

The weather was mild but the ice was good and a fast clean game was witnessed by an enthusiastic crowd. It was not a league game but both teams were out to win and worked hard from start to finish, although it proved an easy task for the home team to put it over the visitors 8-2.

The team work of the Wiarton boys was almost perfect, showing that they have been well coached and are practising hard. Their combination, stick handling far outclassed Chesley and the game was all Wiartons from the first drop of the ball.

During the first few minutes of the opening period Mathieson got away and slipped one into the nets, and McDonald got another, giving the home team a lead of two goals. Chesley came out strong in the second period and got two, evening up the score, but they were doomed to stop scoring right then and there for Tommy Nimmo set his teeth, took a grip on his stick and said to himself he would not let another shot pass him, and he didn't. "Dad" Ashley got busy and rushed the Chesley nets, breaking the tie. Brown followed with another and Parker added the third, leaving the score at the end of the second period 5-2.

In the third period Barrett made a rush from end to end and scored. A three man combination carried the puck to the nets again, and before the bell sounded to end the game Barrett made another rush and scored one just for luck, leaving the total score 8-2

These teams will likely come together again in a league game and it is hoped they will keep up the record for clean fast hockey they made Thursday night Durst, in goal, and Lustig, rover, starred for the visitors.

The line up was as follows:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Chesley | | Wiarton |
| Durst | goal | Nimmo |
| Krueger | right defence | Barrett |
| Finn | left " | Mathieson |
| A. McCaffrey | centre | Dad Ashley |

They Get the Socks

Early in the knitting for the soldiers, a lady in this town, who has done her bit over and over again, put her name on the inside of a pair of socks and this is the reply she received from the soldier into whose hands the pair had fallen. It shows that the socks get to the boys in the trenches

Dec 23 12 15
Some where in Belgium.

Dear Friend—

Excuse me for using that familar phrase but you are a friend of mine for I received a pair of socks with your name in them, so I am acknowledging the gift with a big heart full of thanks to you, and the good work which the Red Cross are doing for us boys. We are certainly getting well looked after by the folks at home. You are doing your bit at home as well as we are doing it here and it is highly appreciated by us, we are spending our holidays in the trenches but will not fare badly under the circumstances. I am writing this letter in a dugout under difficulties so hope you will excuse this scrawl, will close now, hoping to be in dear old Wiarton again.

I am yours obediently,
Ralph Hyatt.

This young gentleman is a nephew of Mrs S. Hyatt and a brother of Mrs W. Taylor, Otterwell Settlement.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

The Municipal Pot Will Boil in Albemarle

When life gets dull Albemarle supplies the tonic. Councillor Samuel Adams has received a letter from Robertson and McNabb, Walkerton, advising him that his assessment is not high enough to quafify for the office of councillor and that if he does not resign he will be disqualified. Just how much bluff there is to the whole thing Sam did not wait to see, he packed his trunk and dug out. He has sent in his resignation as one of the lawmakers of the township. There was a most erroneous idea floating about the township that the next highest to him in the last election could take his place His resignation means an election, it is only in the cities where this procedure of the next highest takes the seat vacated. It means an election, the hottest, the fiercest, that has ever taken place in that township. It will be one camp against the other. Mr. J. C. Lemcke will probably run again, and it is understood that he will be opposed by either ex-reeve Robt Given or Jas. Given, of Mar.

The reason Mr. Adams resigned is because his assessment was lowered last year and quite unknown to him when he accepted office. He lacks $50 of the amount required, but the ratepayers would never mind a little thing like this. Who complained? Who wanted him out of the council? Why did they want him out? What harm would he do in the council. It is since reported that Mr. Adams will got resign, his property qualifications not being sufficient although they were not when he was a candidate.

The Indians obtained their uniforms Tuesday and will be as sturdy set of soldiers as will be found in Canada.

HEALTH WRECKED THROUGH LA GRIPPE

It Generally Leaves the Patient Debilitated and an Easy Victim to Other Diseases

One of the foremost medical writers says: "It is astonishing the number of people who have been crippled in health for years after an attack of la grippe or influenza." The real danger from this disease, which sweeps over Canada every winter, is during convalescence, when the characteristic symptoms, the fever, the catarrh, the bondache and the depression of spirits pass away. Grip leaves behind it weakened vital powers, thin blood, impaired digestion and oversensitive nerves—a condition that makes the system an easy prey to pneumonia and even consumption. It is a condition that calls most emphatically for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic especially adopted to meet this need as they purify and enrich the blood. They tone up the nerves and give vigor, strength and health to the debilitated system. Mrs. Howard D. Chaffey, Indian Island, N. B. says: "For several winters in succession I was attacked by la grippe which left me weak and badly run down. In each case I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with the most beneficial result. Last winter when the trouble was again prevalent I took the precaution of fortifying my system with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and escaped the trouble, while many of my neighbors were down with it. In fact I enjoyed the best of health all spring and feel sure this medicine will fortify the system as to prevent the trouble."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CLIPPED FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES

Owen Sound

No further word has been received from Edmonton regarding the illness of Hon A. J. MacKay, since the message to The Sun on Tuesday afternoon which brought the good news that his condition was slightly improved and that the outlook was more favorable. As it is known that relatives here would be immediately advised if there was any unfavorable turn in the case, the Owen Sound friends of Mr. MacKay are convinced that "no news is good news." Now that the patient has passed the critical period of his illness there is every reason to look forward to complete recovery, although according to Tuesday's message the convalescence will be very slow.

Dr. McNally, Provincial Medical Officer of Health for this district, was in town this week attending a meeting of the Union Cement Company. The fact that there are about twenty cases of measles in the town was brought to the attention of Dr. McNally by the local Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Rutherford. As a means of keeping the disease out of the schools Dr. McNally and Dr. Rutherford addressed the teachers of the various schools in the Y. M. C. A. building on Wednesday afternoon after school hour, pointing out the danger of measles and the symptoms which should arouse suspicion even before the rash breaks out.

Staff Sergt Norman Stewart and Pte. Legard, two of the victims of the skating rink accident, have been dismissed from the General and Marine Hospital, they having recovered from their injuries. Pte. McTavish is still in his ward at the hospital, but it is thought he will be able to be round in another week or so. The difficulty now is to keep him quiet, as he seems disposed to talk and read more than is good for him. Pte. Richardson though much improved, is not entirely out of danger, as his physician states now that his lung is punctured! If no unfavorable symptoms develops, however, his complete recovery will only be a matter of time. The other victims are all doing as well as can be expected.

The Presbytery meeting was held here on Wednesday, the attendance was small H. M. Conveners reported that Mar would raise $50 extra as requested. Clerk instructed to express Presbytery's appreciation, St. Paul's Owen Sound. After careful consideration it was agreed to secure, if possible, union with Saltawak. Messrs Thompson, (Convener); Pilkey, D McKay and Jas. Carrie were appointed a committee to confer with all congregations concerned, and to report at adjourned meeting of Presbytery. Mr D. M. Mathisson, convener, and Mr G. S. Scott were appointed to act as S. S. and Y.P.S. till close of current year. Rennie and Mr Pilkey's notice motion were deferred till adjourned meeting to be held Feb. 15 at 10 a. m. Attendance thereat specially important.

Peacock, a well-to-do and highly esteemed young farmer, also of 14th con. Eld. Rev. R. L. Oakley was the officiating clergyman who tied the nuptial knot in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The popularity of the bride was shown by the number of handsome and valuable presents received. After their honeymoon Mr and Mrs Peacock will make their home at lot 13, con. 14, Eld. The Enterprise joins with their many friend in hearty congratulations and best wishes.

There passed peacefully away at the Free Presbyterian manse in Chesley on Tuesday Jan. 18th., the Rev. His removal is a great loss.

Hanover

Rev. Austin L. Budge M. A. of Greemore, Ont., the former popular pastor St. Andrew's church here, has received a call to Chalmers Presbyterian church, Hamilton.

Mr and Mrs John Ahrens and four children of Lethbridge are visiting friends in this vicinity. They were here about five years ago from Hamilton. They lived in Hanover about twenty years ago when Mr Ahrens was employed as a cooper with Mr John Niergert. Lethbridge is doing pretty well now says Mr Ahrens.

Southampton

In the death of Mrs Emma M. Gorham last Sunday, January 16th, Southampton loses another well known resident. Mrs Gorham had suffered with stomach trouble for a number of years, but no one had a thought that the end was so near. Specialists were called in consultation, but all measures taken to save her life were unavailing.

Tara, combined with Allenford and other surrounding points, now has forty-five recruits for the 160th Batt. They are being trained in the old British hotel.

Mr Orland Knechtel returned from London Wednesday night, where he had been getting information about enlisting for active service in the mechanical and transport department. As soon as he gets his affairs in shape at home he will enlist.

Kincardine

Among the men who have offered to fight for King and County is Mr. Angus Norman, 10th Kincardine. Mr. Norman is a fine sample of patriotic man. He has a farm and a family, but he feels that men are needed and he is willing to go if accepted. The spirit shown by Angus is what has made Britian's Armies famous.

Mr. Alex. Campbell, Princess street, celebrated his 87th birthday on Wednesday, Jan. 13th. A few friends gathered at his home and spent a most enjoyable evening with him and his good wife. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are among the most highly esteemed and respected citizens and all will join in wishing them continued good health and reid-

Daniel McDonald near Lucknow has one sons in the King's uniform. Daniel jr enlisted with the 18th Bn. and has been in active service for some time. Jack was with the 33rd, but went on ahead with reinforcements, and is in active service. Sandy is with the transportation service of the imperial army, taining at London. Tom has enlisted with the Bruce Battalion. All are fine, sturdy boys, and although they will be greatly missedin the community their impulse has inspired a feeling of local pride, and their father is revered.

Walkerton

Mrs. Forbes Clark, whose two sons, Capt. Ross Clark and Corporal Jack Clark, have returned from the Tobermory Guard and enlisted with the 160th Bruce Battalion, received word this week that another son, James Clark, better known in athletic circles as "Sox" had enlisted at Galt, as one of the four Highland pipers that will accompany the 71st Battalion to the front. With three of her sons now serving the King, Mrs. Clark will have the satisfaction of knowing that her family is bravely doing its bit for the empire.

Mr. A. J. Smith, a former Walkerton merchant, was ordered by a Toronto Court last week to pay for ten sacks of sugar which were ordered by him from the Wallaceburg Sugar Co., but which landed in Walkerton after he had sold out and were delivered to his successor, Mr. Reynolds. The Sugar Co. claimed that Smith had never notified them of the transfer of business and they accordingly sued him for the sugar. Station Agent Walford, Drayman Jos. Lindsay and Wm. George and Gus Boyce were a quartette from here who attended the trial and testified as witnesses in the action. As this is the second time the case has been up in Toronto, the costs in the suit are heavy, and it is estimated that the verdict last week will stick Smith for over $200.

To date 260 men have signed up with the Bruce Battalion. Of these 71 enlisted at Walkerton.

At the meeting in Ripley on Monday evening last held at which Capt. A. W. McNally and Lieut. Roy Whitehead spoke 8 recruits were signed up.

The local officers are looking for some large building in town in which to house and feed the increasing number of soldiers as the accommodation in the various building bosses here is proving unequal to the task.

Wm. Rainboth, a farm laborer on the Bruce peninsula, who was brought to the Walkerton jail by High Constable Ward on Monday, was arraigned before Magistrate Tolton on Tuesday last and on being examined by two local physicians, was adjudged to be violently insane. The unfortunate man was remanded to the Walkerton jail to await his removal to the asylum.

As a result of informations laid by License Inspector White against Alex. Lambertus of the Vendome, Teeswater, and Wm. Lappin of the Gibbeiser House, there, an interesting trial was held in Teeswater on Monday last before a bench of magistrates composed of James Tolton and Robert Richardson of Walkerton, and J. K. McLean and Reeve Ferguson of Teeswater. The illicit sale of booze was reported to have been going on rather briskly in Teeswater during Constable Trenche's absence, and when that officer suddenly and unexpectedly returned and seized a quantity of moisture in the Vendome and Gibbeiser hotels, there seemed likely to be some high financing in the near future. This came off on Monday, when Alex. Lambertus was fined $400 on each of two charges, which, with costs, relieved him of $808.30. One of the dual charges laid against Lappin was dropped and on the other he was soaked $450 and costs, making a total assessment of nearly $1300 gathered from the two Teeswater hotel keepers on Monday for selling and keeping for sale booze in a local option territory. As a second offence by either of them would mean, at the least, four months in jail, the prospects are that they will not be caught soon slinging again.

Mr. H. H. Engel, representing the Hanover Patriotic Society and Recruiting League and on behalf of the I. O. D. E., addressed the town council on Monday night in regard to donations to equipment of the 147th Grey battalion. Some $5000 of extras not furnished by the government is required and Mr Engel thought that if the town of Hanover would furnish a field kitchen it would be a very graceful act and also a good advertisement for the town. He also pointed out that approximately $8,000,000 was needed from Canada for patriotic work this year, or about $1 a head. Hanover's share would be around $2,000 and Mr Engel considered that the fairest way to all would be to take it out of the taxes. The matter was left in the hands of the Finance Committee of the council who will submit a report to a special meeting of the council in a few days.

Bill Likely to Pass.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—It is now believed that the concluding stages of the military compulsion bill will be passed without difficulty, and that the measure will go into operation without the Labor party or the trades unions endeavoring to frustrate its smooth working by a resort to a general strike or other industrial upheavals.

The suspicions formerly entertained by labor men concerning the bill have been largely removed by Premier Asquith's assurances and the successful passage of the bill through its stages in the House of Commons, and, in the opinion of some of the influential trades union leaders, when the Bristol labor conference next week is apprised of private assurances received from the Premier the conference will decide to support the bill.

British Submarine's Exploits.

ROME, via Paris, Jan. 24.—Details of the destruction of an Austrian hydro-aeroplane by a British submarine, which also sank a torpedo boat coming to its rescue were received here yesterday. The incident occurred near Grado. The submarine caught the seaplane after it had been hurled into the sea as the result of engine trouble and captured two officers who were piloting it. The submarine then torpedoed the seaplane. The torpedo-boat which was probably escorting the seaplane, then approached, and the submarine, by skilful manoeuvres, fired a second torpedo. The torpedo boat sank instantly.

Troops for Enver Pasha.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Fifty thousand German troops have arrived at Constantinople, according to Salonica despatches. British correspondents express the view that the object of this army is not an expedition against Egypt, but to support the authority of the Turkish War Minister, Enver Pasha.

Greek reports say that the Turks recently have been restive under the rule of Enver Pasha, and serious plots against him have been discovered, these being suppressed ruthlessly.

BRITISH GAIN GROUND

Terrific Battle Fought on Road to Kut-el-Amara.

General Aylmer's Rescue Force on Way to Relieve General Townshend Gains Two-thirds of a Mile Against Strongly Entrenched Turkish Position at Essian—Losses Heavy on Both Sides.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Gen. Aylmer's relief force last Friday attacked the Turks, who are strongly entrenched at Essian, six miles east of Kut-el-Amara, where the main British army to whose aid the relief force is trying to hasten, is bottled up. A violent battle ensued, in which success alternated between Britons and Turks. The fighting lasted all day. Torrents of rain, causing floods, prevented a renewal of the attack on the following day, but General Aylmer's force managed to entrench itself a little more than two-thirds of a mile within the Turkish line. The British report speaks of "very heavy losses on both sides," which indicates the fury of the battle.

The following official statement on the Mesopotamian campaign was given out yesterday:

"Sir Percy Lake (the new commander in Mesopotamia), reports that General Aylmer attacked the Turkish position at Essian on 9th day. Fierce fighting continued through the day, with varying success. The weather throughout was atrocious, a pouring rain rendering movements of troops extremely difficult.

"Owing to the floods it was impossible to renew the attack on Saturday, and Gen. Aylmer took up a position 1,300 yards from the trenches.

"The weather continues very bad, with incessant rain. No details regarding the casualties have been received, but they are reported to have been very heavy on both sides."

Friday's attack was the fourth to be launched by the relief force against the Turks at Essian since the Ottoman troops were driven to the position in the first week of this month. The weather, especially the never ceasing rain, now and then intermingled with terrific hurricanes is ferocious, the third enemy hampering both sides, but particularly the attacking relief force, the floods making it impossible to bring up artillery. Besides, the Turks, realizing the dangerous consequences that would result from the main British army being relieved at Kut-el-Amara appear to have fortified their Essian position so strongly that the relief force finds difficulty in penetrating their lines.

TURKEY ASSUMES BLAME.

Austria and Germany Evade Responsibility in Persia Case.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—An Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says:

"According to a Berlin report the Turkish Ministry of Marine is about to publish a statement to the effect that a Turkish submarine sank the steamer Persia.

"The report alleges that similar statements are being published by the German and Austrian Admiralties, it being hoped by the central powers that such a declaration will settle the Persia question."

This despatch has not been confirmed from other sources.

Both the German and Austro-Hungarian Governments have announced that the Persia was not sunk by one of their submarines, and investigations by the diplomatic representatives of the United States abroad have failed to reveal the real cause of the disaster.

The Persia was sunk off the Island of Crete Dec. 30 with a loss of 119 passengers and 217 members of the crew. The vessel went down within five minutes after a terrific explosion forward.

Greek Statement Delayed.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Athens, under date of Friday, states that the Greek chamber of deputies will commence work to-day without the usual speech from the Throne, the Government reserving its declaration on the political situation until later. M. Rouphous, deputy from Patras, and former governor of Crete, probably will be elected president of the chamber.

An Athens despatch says: "The Greek Government, according to announcement here, sees no objection to the temporary establishment of the Serbian Government at Corfu."

Another Call for Gold.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 24. — The Sonderburger Zeitung learns from Berlin that the Government have decided that all the good money coined before 1914 must not be used by other than Government offices. The public is requested to have their gold changed, which means, of course, that they will receive paper currency. Some German papers frankly admit the desirability of accumulating all the available gold.

Two Men Drowned.

PORT COLBORNE, Jan. 24.—Two young men, Fred Lambert and Percy Snider, son of Charles Snider, were drowned while skating on the lake Sunday afternoon near Schofield's Point. The bodies have been recovered. Fred Lambert was a soldier for overseas, and leaves a widow. A third young man also broke through, but was rescued.

Premier Briand Will Visit Rome.

ROME, Jan. 24.—Premier Briand of France is to come to Rome. The date of his visit has not yet been fixed. It is possible that he will confer with Cardinal Billot, looking toward an eventual reconciliation between France and the Vatican.

AIR RAID ON KENT.

One Man Was Killed and Six Persons Were Slightly Injured.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The British War Office announced yesterday two visits by hostile aircraft to the east coast of Kent. Taking advantage of the bright moonlight a hostile aeroplane swept over the coast at one o'clock yesterday morning. After dropping nine incendiary bombs in rapid succession the aeroplane disappeared over the North Sea. Neither naval or military damage was done, but private property suffered, the incendiary bombs causing several fires, all of which were extinguished within an hour. One man was killed, and two men, a woman, and three children were injured.

An official account of the first raid, given out here yesterday, says:

"The War Office announces that, taking advantage of the bright moonlight, a hostile aeroplane visited the east coast of Kent at one o'clock this morning. After dropping nine bombs in rapid succession it made off to seaward.

"No naval or military damage was done, but there was some damage to private property. Incendiary bombs caused fires, which were extinguished by two o'clock.

"The following casualties occurred: One man killed, two men, one woman, and three children slightly injured."

The War Office announcement concerning the second attack says:

"Following the aerial attack on the east coast of Kent early this morning two hostile seaplanes made a second attack upon the same locality shortly after noon.

"After coming under a heavy fire the raiders disappeared, pursued by our naval and military machines.

"The enemy effected no damage, and no casualties have been reported."

FIGHTING NEAR ARRAS.

German Effort Results in a Gain of Two Hundred Yards.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—Heavy fighting has been in progress in France, a French advanced position on the road between Arras and Lens being attacked by strong German forces. The infantry attack was preceded by mine explosions and a violent bombardment, and the Germans captured a first line trench on a front of several hundred yards.

French counter-attacks were immediately inaugurated and a portion of the captured trench was retaken. The Germans, however, at the close of the day occupied about 200 yards of the advanced trench, which formed a salient in the French lines.

Twenty-four French aeroplanes made a raid on the railway station and barracks at Metz, dropping 130 shells. The French airmen were heavily bombarded, but all returned undamaged save one, who was forced to land south-east of Metz.

President Poincare and Albert Thomas, Under-Secretary of War, were present at the trials at Satury Camp Saturday of the newly-invented trench cannon and bullet-proof shields.

The explosion of a German mine south of Ypres yesterday destroyed nearly 100 yards of British trenches, according to the official report from Berlin. The British, however, assert that they retain possession of the crater. Bombardments of considerable intensity are reported from other sectors of the front.

ATTACK IS HELD UP.

Teutons Near Salonica Cannot Provision Their Armies.

SALONICA, Jan. 24.—A German submarine has sunk a British cargo boat. The crew was saved.

The Bulgars are transporting heavy guns from Varna to the Macedonian front.

The belief is growing in Entente circles that the Austro-German attack on Salonica is likely to be decided soon. The Germans are finding that it will require considerable time to surmount all the obstacles facing them in this campaign. Chief among these is the transport of troops, heavy artillery, and supplies along the bad roads and the railway line, which is still considerably damaged in several parts. It is said that the railway will not be completely established for two months yet.

How serious the matter of provisioning the troops is may be gauged from the fact that all the Austro-German troops in Monastir, which originally numbered 16,000, have been removed to a more northerly point, where they can more easily be kept supplied.

Montenegro Tricked Austria.

ROME, Jan. 24.—The Montenegrin Premier, who is now in Brindisi, explains that an armistice, not peace, was negotiated by Montenegro, with the object of gaining time and assure the retreat of the Montenegrins to Scutari and of the Serbians to Durazzo.

Thus, the Premier explains, the Austrian invasion of Albania was delayed a week. Hence, he points out, the negotiations were justified since they were a "ruse de guerre."

German Forces for Bagdad.

ROME, Jan. 24.—News reaching here is to the effect that Germans have concentrated 3,000 automobiles in Constantinople which are destined for rapid transportation of a Turco-German expedition to Bagdad.

Meanwhile reinforcements are sent to Bagdad by rail, carrying with them, upon the suggestion of Field Marshal von der Goltz, floating mines and torpedoes, to be placed in the Euphrates and Tigris Rivers.

Child Fatally Burned.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 24.—Caroline Armstrong, four-year-old daughter of Wm. Armstrong, of Zurich, Huron County, died at Victoria Hospital here Saturday of burns received while playing with matches.

DRIVING TURKS WEST

Russian Force in Caucasus Are Now Attacking Erzerum.

Grand Duke Nicholas' Victories on Turkey's North-eastern Frontier is Having a Salutary Effect on the Persian Situation — Czar's Soldiers Are Capturing Arms, Ammunition, and Provisions.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The operations in Armenia, where the Russians during the last week have made important gains, and at last accounts were driving the Turks westwards before them, promise more and more to influence the situation in Persia. The Russians, who originally fought the Turks on a limited area in the Caucasus, have inflicted several crushing defeats upon the Ottomans since the Grand Duke Nicholas took the command. They have transferred the momentum of their offensive over the Caucasian border into Armenia, where they are now attacking Erzerum, an important city in the interior.

Thus the Russian offensive in that part of the Near Eastern theatre, if pushed with the same success that has marked it since the beginning of the year, presents a growing menace to Asiatic Turkey. South-east of the Erzerum front, around Lake Van, the Muscovites have been proportionately successful of late, though the Turkish lines appear on the whole to have held their own.

There is no doubt, however, that the Turks are compelled, both by the situation in Armenia, in the Caucasus, and in Persia—where the Russians are menacing Ispahan—to send very strong reinforcements of troops to the Asiatic theatre.

The Sunday Petrograd official report states that the precipitate retreat of the Turks in the region of Erzerum continues. In many places the Czar's troops are still capturing artillery, ammunition, provisions, and telephone material. The pursuing troops are advancing along roads strewn with frozen bodies of Askaris.

Large numbers of prisoners have been taken at each inhabited place.

"One of our detachments," continues the report, "which has arrived at the Caucasian front from Manchuria, charged half a squadron of cavalry and three companies of Askaris, who were defending the village, sabring some of the force and capturing others.

"South of the River Charlanson we completely annihilated a strong Kurd detachment.

TO CUT DOWN IMPORTS.

Britain is Likely to Reduce Purchases of Luxuries.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Parliamentary correspondent of the Weekly Despatch declares that the Government is going to stop the importation of luxuries, as the shipping crisis is necessitating compulsory thrift. Certain necessities will still be admitted, such as bananas. The French and Italians, he states, have been deprived not only of domestic commodities, but of essential war material owing to the filling of the world's ships with luxuries and unnecessaries for England.

As further steps in the conserving of shipping space, gasoline imports will be reduced, putting a stop to wasteful motoring, and the importation of pulp for the manufacture of paper will be lowered for the present.

The Daily Mail said yesterday morning:

"It is believed that the Government shortly will take measures to prevent the importation of unnecessaries. It may list unnecessaries and prohibit their landing anywhere in Great Britain, or it is possible that a prohibitive tariff will be adopted, on which the Government already has made a beginning in a small way with automobiles, watches, clocks, and musical instruments. Due care will be exercised regarding trade with Allies and the British dominions."

The newspaper specifies pulp and paper among the imports probably to be reduced, resulting in smaller newspapers as already is the case in France and Italy.

Russians Resume Attacks.

London, Jan. 24.—The Russians have resumed their attacks against portions of the Austrian Bessarabian front, and are showing great activity in Volhynia, where flying columns of troops were repulsed Saturday by the Austrians. In the north-west artillery duels before Smorgen and Dvinsk are reported by Berlin and Vienna.

In Galicia a desperate fight is taking place for the possession of mine craters north-east of Czernowitz. On the front of the middle Stripa the Russians repulsed several attempts of the enemy to approach their trenches.

Austrian Cruiser Helgoland Sunk.

ROME, Jan. 23.—The Italian Navy Department has received information that the Austrian scout cruiser of the Novara type, which was sunk a week ago, was the cruiser Helgoland, which has been attached to the Cattaro base since the outbreak of the war.

It was officially announced in Rome on January 16 that the French submarine Foucault, attached to the Italian fleet, torpedoed and sank in the Adriatic Sea an Austrian scout cruiser of the Novara type.

Brantford Child Killed.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 24. — Three children of Pte. W. J. Jackson, two boys and a girl, while playing in a gravel pit Saturday on the outskirts of the city, were buried by a cave-in, and one child, a boy about five years of age, was killed. Rescuers dug them out within five minutes and the other two children suffered only minor injuries.

Good for the Whole Family

"Granny" Chamberlain

"A good cough remedy is one that can be depended upon to cure coughs. Not one that cures some particular cough, but coughs in general.

It must be a cough remedy that can be relied upon for all the different coughs that are so prevalent. While the causes of all coughs are primarily the same, yet the condition of the patient is what makes the difference in the nature of the cough itself. Coughs of healthy persons are easier to cure than the coughs of invalids. The powerful convulsive cough of a large man is harder to cure than the cough of a baby. If you get a remedy that will cure a large man's cough and yet not be too powerful for the baby, you have a good cough remedy.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

is just this kind of remedy. It is good for any member of the family. It relieves coughs of all kinds. It is the product of much thought and study to produce an ideal cough remedy. It is composed of things which cure easily and soothingly without harming the most delicate tissues of the throat. It acts as easily and safely on the young as on the old, and is the ideal remedy for coughs, colds, croup, influenza, whooping cough and bronchitis."

Yours for Health — Granny Chamberlain

THE Crown Portland Cement plant of Wiarton that probably cost upward of $1.000.000- is not worth 25 cents to the bondholders, has not been for a few years, and unless they not, never will be. It is in the hands of a trust company and two years ago the rails were sold to pay the taxes, and last year a number of dynamos were disposed of for the same purpose. Some of the independent cement plants in Canada are now flourishing and if the Crown Portland Cement plant were in operation it could no doubt do well. If the bondholders would get together and find out where they are at it would be a good thing. Possibly they might feel disposed to surrender all their interests to any company that will operate the plant.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON, Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1913, by George Barr McCutcheon.

"Is it?" said I, and my voice sounded gloomier than his.

"Send Mr. Poopendyke to me, Hawkes, immediately after I've finished my breakfast."

"Very good, sir. Oh, I beg your pardon, sir. I am forgetting. Mr. Poopendyke is out. He asked me to tell you he wouldn't return before 11."

"Out? What business has he to be out?"

"Well, sir, I mean to say he's not precisely out, and he isn't just what one would call in. He is up in the—ahem!—the east wing, sir, taking down some correspondence for the—for the lady, sir."

I arose to the occasion. "Quite so, quite so. I had forgotten the appointment."

"Yes, sir; I thought you had."

"Ahem! I dare say Britton will do quite as well. Tell him to"—

"Britton, sir, has gone over to the city for the newspapers. You forget that he goes every morning as soon as he has had his"—

"Yes, yes! Certainly," I said hastily. "The papers. Ha, ha! Quite right."

It was news to me, but it wouldn't do to let him know it. The countess read the papers, I did not.

It was nearly 12 when my secretary reported to me on this particular morning.

"Mr. Poopendyke," said I, "are you employed by me or by that woman upstairs?" I would never have spoken of her as "that woman," believe me, if I had not been in a state of irritation.

He looked positively stunned. "Sir?" he gasped.

I did not repeat the question, but managed to demand rather fiercely, "Are you?"

"The countess had got dreadfully behind with her work, sir, and I thought you wouldn't mind if I helped her out a bit," he explained nervously.

"Work? What work?"

"Her diary, sir. She is keeping a diary."

"Indeed!"

"It is very interesting, Mr. Smart. Rather beats any novel I've read lately. We've brought it quite up to date. I wrote at least three pages about the dinner last night. If I am to believe what she puts into her diary it must have been a delightful occasion, as the newspapers would say."

I was somewhat mollified. "What did she have to say about it, Fred?" I asked. It always pleased him to be called Fred.

"That would be betraying a confidence," said he. "I will say this much, however—I think I wrote your name fifty times or more in connection with it."

"Rubbish!" said I.

"Not at all," said he, with agreeable spirit.

A sudden chill came over me. "She isn't figuring on having it published, is she?"

"I can't say as to that," was his disquieting reply. "It wasn't any of my business, so I didn't ask."

"Oh," said I, "I see!"

"I think it is safe to assume, however, that it is not meant for publication," said he. "It strikes me as being a bit too personal. There are parts of it that I don't believe she'd dare to put into print, although she reeled them off to me without so much as a blush. 'Pon my soul, Mr. Smart, I never was so embarrassed in my life. She"—

"Never mind," I interrupted hastily. "Don't tell tales out of school."

He was silent for a moment, fingering his big eyeglasses nervously. "It may please you to know that she thinks you are an exceedingly nice man."

"No, it doesn't!" I roared irascibly. "I'm blamed if I like being called an exceedingly nice man."

"They were my words, sir, not hers," he explained desperately. "I was merely putting two and two together—forming an opinion from her manner, not from her words. She is very particular to mention everything you do for her and thanks me if I call her attention to anything she may have forgotten. She certainly appreciates your kindness to the baby."

"That is extremely gratifying," said I acidly.

He hesitated once more. "Of course you understand that the divorce itself is absolute. It's only the matter of the child that remains unsettled. The"—

I fairly barked a him. "What the mischief do you mean by that, sir? What has the divorce got to do with it?"

"A great deal, I should say," said he, with the rare, almost superhuman perspicacity that has made him so valuable to me.

"I see, my son!" was all that I could say.

Hawkes chipped on the door luckily at that instant.

"The men from the telephone company are here, sir, and the electricians. Where are they to begin, sir?"

"Tell them to wait," said I. Then I hurried to the top of the east wing to ask if she had the least objection to an extension phone being placed in my study. She thought it would be very nice, so I returned with instructions for the men to put in three instruments—one in her room, one in mine and one in the butler's pantry. It seemed a very jolly arrangement all round. As for the electric bell system, it would speak for itself.

During the middle of the afternoon when Mr. Poopendyke and I were hard at work on my synopsis we were startled by a dull, mysterious pounding on the wall hard by. We paused to listen. It was quite impossible to locate the sound, which ceased almost immediately. Our first thought was that the telephone men were drilling a hole through the wall into my study. Then came the sharp rat-a-tat once more. Even as we looked about us in bewilderment the portly facade of Ludwig the Red moved out of alignment with a heart rending squeak and a long thin streak of black appeared at the inner edge of the frame, growing wider—and blacker if anything—before our startled eyes.

"Are you at home?" inquired a voice that couldn't by any means have emanated from the chest of Ludwig, even in his mellowest hours.

I leaped to my feet and started across the room with great strides. My secretary's eyes were glued to the magic portrait.

"By the Lord Harry!" I cried. "Yes!"

The secret door swung quietly open, laying Ludwig's face to the wall, and in the aperture stood my amazing neighbor, as lovely a portrait as you'd see in a year's trip through all the galleries in the world. She was smiling down upon us from the slightly elevated position, a charming figure in the very latest Parisian hat and gown.

"I am out making afternoon calls," said she. Her face was flushed with excitement and self consciousness. "Will you please put a chair here so that I may hop down?"

For answer I reached up a pair of valiant arms. She laughed, leaned forward and placed her hands on my shoulders. My hands found her waist, and I lifted her gently, gracefully to the floor.

"How strong you are!" she said admiringly. "How do you do, Mr. Poopendyke! Dear me, I'm not a ghost, sir!"

"How do you do?" he jerked out. Then he felt of his heart. "My God, I don't believe it's going!"

Together we inspected the secret doors, going so far as to enter the room beyond, the countess peering through after us from my study. To my amazement the room was absolutely bare. Bed, trunks, garments, chairs—everything, in fact, had vanished as if whisked away by an all powerful genie.

"What does this mean?" I cried, turning to her.

"I don't mind sleeping upstairs now that I have a telephone," she said serenely. "Miss and Rudolph moved everything up this afternoon." Poopendyke and I returned to the study. I for one was bitterly disappointed.

"I'm sorry that I had the phone put in," I said.

"Please don't call it a phone!" she objected. "I hate the word phone."

"So do I," said Poopendyke recklessly.

I glared at him. What right had he to criticise my manner of speech? He started to leave the room after a perfunctory scramble to put his papers in order, but she broke off in the middle of a sentence to urge him to remain. She announced that she was calling on both of us.

"Please don't stop your work on my account," she said and promptly sat down at his typewriter and began pecking at the keys. "You must teach me how to run a typewriter, Mr. Poopendyke. I shall be as poor as a church mouse before long, and I know father won't help me. I may have to become a stenographer."

He blushed abominably. I don't believe I've ever seen a more unattractive fellow than Poopendyke.

"Oh, every cloud has its silver lining," said he awkwardly.

"But I am used to gold," said she. The bell on the machine tinkled merrily.

"What do I do now?" he mumbled, shifting the space for her.

"Go right ahead," said he. She scrambled the whole alphabet across the next sheet, but he didn't seem to mind.

"Isn't it jolly, Mr. Smart? If Mr. Poopendyke should ever leave you I may be able to take his place as your secretary."

"Yes, you might have me down here for an old fashioned midday dinner."

"Capital! Why not stay for supper, too?"

"It would be too much like spending a day with relatives," she said. "We'll go treasure hunting on Monday. I haven't the faintest notion where to look, but that shouldn't make any difference. No one else ever had. By the way, Mr. Smart, I have a bone to pick with you. Have you seen yesterday's papers? Well, in one of them there is a long account of my—of Mr. Pless' visit to your castle, and a lengthy interview in which you are quoted as saying that he is one of your dearest friends and a much maligned man who deserves the sympathy of every law abiding citizen in the land."

"An abominable lie!" I cried indignantly.

"Another paper says that your fortune has been placed at his disposal in the fight he is making against the criminally rich Americans. In this particular article you are quoted as saying that I am a dreadful person and not fit to have the custody of a child."

"Good Lord!" I gasped helplessly.

"You also expect to do everything in your power to interest the administration at Washington in his behalf."

"Well, of all the— Oh, I say, countess, you don't believe a word of all this, do you?"

She regarded me pensively. "You have said some very mean, unkind things to me."

"If I thought you believed"— I began desperately, but her sudden smile relieved me of the necessity of jumping into the river. "By Jove, I shall write to these miserable sheets, denying every word they've printed. And what's more, I'll bring an action for damages against all of 'em. Why, it is positively atrocious! The whole world will think I despise you and"— I stopped very abruptly in great confusion.

"And—you don't?" she queried, with real seriousness in her voice. "You don't despise me?"

"Certainly not!" I cried vehemently. Turning to Poopendyke, I said: "Mr. Poopendyke, will you at once prepare a complete and emphatic denial of every word they have printed about me, and I'll send it to all the American correspondents in Europe. We'll cable it ourselves to the United States. I shan't rest until I can set straight in the eyes of my fellow countrymen the whole world shall know, countess, that I am for you first, last and all the time. It shall know"—

"But you don't know who I am, Mr. Smart," she broke in, her cheeks very warm and rosy. "How can you publicly espouse the cause of one whose name you refuse to have mentioned in your presence?"

"I dismissed her question with a wave of the hand. "Poopendyke can supply the name after I have signed the statement. I give him carte blanche. The name has nothing to do with the case so far as I am concerned. Write it, Fred, and make it strong."

She came up to me and held out her hand. "I knew you would do it," she said softly. "Thanks."

She not only came for dinner with us on Sunday, but made the dressing for my alligator pear salad. We were besieged by the usual crowd of Sunday sightseers, who came clamoring at our stanch, re-enforced gates and unathematized me soundly for refusing admission. One bourgeoise party of fifteen refused to leave the plaza until their return fares on the ferry barge were paid, stoutly maintaining that they had come over in good faith and wouldn't leave until I had reimbursed them to the extent of 50 hellers apiece, ferry fare. I sent Britton out with the money. He returned with the rather disquieting news that he had recognized two of Mr. Pless' secret agents in the mob.

"I wonder if he suspects that I am here," said the countess, patting her reptilly when I mentioned the presence of the two men.

I did not sleep well that night. The presence of the two detectives outside my gates was not to be taken too lightly.

A LIFETIME OF SICKNESS

Worn Out, Thin and Miserable Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

PALMERSTON, June 20th, 1914.

"Stomach Trouble and Distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives," your famous fruit medicine, and they completely relieved me. To-day I am feeling fine and a physician, meeting me on the street, asked the reason for my improved appearance. I said, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives." He said, "If Fruit-a-tives make you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can."

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

She Was Smiling Down Upon Us.

I bowed very low. "You may be quite sure, countess, that I shall dismiss Mr. Poopendyke the instant you apply for his job."

"And I shall most cheerfully abolish cake," said she. Silly ass.

I couldn't help thinking how infinitely more attractive and perilous she would be as a typist than the excellent young woman who had married the jeweler's clerk and what an improvement on Poopendyke!

"I came down to inquire when you would like to go exploring for buried treasure, Mr. Smart," she said after the cylinder had slipped back with a bang that almost startled her out of her pretty boots and caused her to give up typewriting then and there forevermore.

"Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today," quoted I glibly.

She looked herself over. "If you knew how many times this gown had to be put off till tomorrow, you wouldn't ask me to ruin it the second time I've had it on my back."

"It is an uncommonly attractive gown," said I.

"Shall we set tomorrow for the treasure quest?"

"Tomorrow is Sunday."

"Can you think of a better way to kill it?"

WHAT CATARRH IS

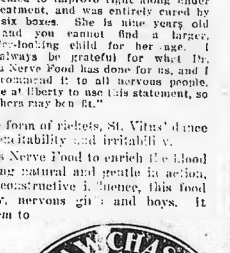
It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from any harmful drugs. Try it.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.



Mrs. Geo. Chisholm, R.R. No. 1, Grafton, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for my little girl for what the doctors pronounced Chorea, a disease of the nerves. I consulted our family doctor, and he gave her a liquid medicine, but do what we would, we could not get her to swallow it. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and, being in pill form, she took it without any trouble. She was seven years old, and got pale and run down. The muscles of the face were affected, and she became a pitiful sight. She seemed to improve right along under this treatment, and was entirely cured by using six boxes. She is nine years old now, and you cannot find a larger, healthier-looking child for her age. I shall always be grateful for what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for us, and I can recommend it to all nervous people. You are at liberty to use this statement, so that others may be fit."

In children nervous exhaustion frequently takes the form of rickets, St. Vitus' dance or fits. In less advanced stages there are nervousness, excitability and irritability.

All such conditions indicate the need of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood and nourish the starved and feeble nerve cells. Being natural and gentle in action, and at the same time powerful in its restorative and reconstructive influence, this food cure is admirably suited as a treatment for weak, puny, nervous girls and boys. It makes them strong, hearty and robust, and enables them to develop into healthy and useful men and women.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

JOHN GALT, President. G. H. BALFOUR, General Manager

REPORT OF THE AUDITORS TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE UNION BANK OF CANADA.

In accordance with the provisions of sub-sections 19 and 20 of Section 7 of the Bank Act, we report to the Shareholders as follows:

We have audited the above Balance Sheet with the books and voucher at Head Office and with the certified returns from the branches.

We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required, and are of the opinion that the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

In addition to our verification at the 30th November, we have, during the year, checked the cash and verified the securities or investments of the Bank at its chief office and principal branches and found them to be in agreement with the entries in the books of the Bank relating thereto.

In our opinion the Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the affairs of the Bank, according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

T. HARRY WEBB, E. S. READ, C. R. HEGAN, Auditors, of the firm of WEBB, READ, HEGAN, CALLINGHAM & CO., Chartered Accountants.

Winnipeg, 29th December 1915.

In the absence of the President, Mr. John Galt, the chair was taken by Mr. R. T. Riley, Vice-President.

The Vice-President's Address.

In the absence of the President, Mr. John Galt, the Chair was taken by Mr. R. T. Riley, Vice-President.

In moving the adoption of the Report, the Vice-President, Mr. R. T. Riley, spoke as follows:

The statement which we have placed before you to-day discloses a condition of the Bank which should be very gratifying considering that we are in the midst of a war which has caused an unparalleled dislocation of the world's commerce and finances.

The finances of the Dominion have been conducted during the past year with comparatively little help from outside, and although we shall have to make further borrowings for war purposes, there need be no misgivings as to our ability to repay such obligations.

Trade conditions in Canada have distinctly improved. Orders for war materials and supplies have exceeded all expectations, and the decrease of foreign trade is now in our favor and likely to continue so for some time, as there is still a lot of grain to be exported from the crop of 1915.

Our share of the cost of the war has not yet fallen upon us, and it is the paramount duty of every corporation and private individual to exercise the strictest economy, both in public and private life, so that when we are called upon to pay our share we shall not be found unprepared.

Canada has every cause for thankfulness that we have been blessed with a bountiful harvest beyond the expectations of the most optimistic, and as a result the farmers of the West are today in a better and safer condition than ever before.

With reference to conditions in England, our London Manager reports that the effect of the war on general business in Great Britain has been confusing, and that while there have been no repetitions of the financial upheavals of the previous year, the burden of hostilities has made great inroads into accumulated wealth, and further disorganized the complex industrial and financial life of the nation.

The United States for the time being has become the money market of the world, and it is pleasing to note the satisfactory manner in which the recent Canadian loan of $45,000,000 has been received, as well as various Provincial, Municipal and Railway loans aggregating in the total about $140,000,000. It is the duty of every financial institution to see that all offerings should be thoroughly sound, and of the highest character.

Our policy for the coming year will remain the same. We shall be conservative, at the same time extending to our customers as liberal treatment as conditions and sound banking will warrant.

General Manager's Address.

The year just closed has been one of much anxiety to bankers, and we are pleased to have come through it in such a satisfactory manner.

Reserves—Referring more particularly to the statement which has been presented to you the percentage of Liquid Assets to total Liabilities to the public amount to 47.37 per cent, as compared with 36.27 per cent last year.

Profits—The profits for the year were $659,693.01. This is $52,752.47 less than the previous year, which, under trying and abnormal conditions, and the maintaining of such large idle reserves, must be regarded as satisfactory. They have been sufficient to pay the usual dividend of 8 per cent and a bonus of 1 per cent, making a grant of $10,000 to the Officers' Pension Fund, providing for $45,730.77 War Tax on circulation and set aside $150,000 for contingencies, besides having made adequate provision for all loans.

Circulation—Notes of the Bank in circulation have increased $1,800,000.

Deposits—Total deposits of $72,686,000 show a gratifying increase of $9,240,600.

Balances Due to and by Other Banks—Balances due by Banks outside of Canada show an increase of $3,050,000 over 1914.

Gold and Silver Coin and Dominion Government Notes amount to $9,257,000, which is $2,140,000 more than in the previous statement.

Cheques on Other Banks amounted to $3,556,000, being $1,120,000 greater than last year.

Investments—There is little change in the Bank's investments. The increase of $115,000 represents the initial payment on the Bank's subscription to Canada's first War Loan of $100,000,000. The amount allotted to this Bank was $388,400, which has since been fully paid for.

Call and Short Loans—Call and Short Loans in Canada are $4,824,600 higher and are against bonds of a high order.

Current Loans and Discounts—Current Loans and Discounts in Canada have been reduced by $1,325,000.

Total Assets—The total Assets of the Bank have risen to the large amount of $90,663,000, as against $81,541,000 last year, an increase of $9,100,000.

General Remarks—Enforced liquidation has been in progress throughout Canada for the past two years, but the strain has been lighter than was anticipated. This period will be extended until normal conditions are resumed, but the future is faced with feelings of hopefulness and every confidence. The chief factors which have contributed to this lightening of our burdens are thrift, strict economy, the lessening of expenditure on capital account, balance of trade with Great Britain being in Canada's favor and bountiful harvests.

The gratifying results of the past season's crops have enabled farmers to liquidate their obligations very largely, and every encouragement is being offered by Provincial Governments in Western Canada to go more extensively into mixed farming.

Staff—It will be of interest to our Shareholders to know that 315 members of our staff have volunteered for overseas military duty; of these, we regret to announce, nine have been killed in action, and to their sorrowing relatives our sympathy is extended; 21 have been wounded and 281 are still on active service. Too much praise cannot be extended to the 1,476 remaining members of the staff who are so loyally and cheerfully performing additional duties and working longer hours whilst their fellow clerks are fighting for the Empire.

Mr. E. L. Drewry seconded the motion for the adoption of the report.

The motion was then adopted.

Auditors Messrs T. Harry Webb, C.A.; E. S. Read, C.A., and C. R. Hegan, C.A., of the firm of Webb, Read Hegan, Callingham and Company, were reappointed auditors.

The following were elected the Directors for the ensuing year:—Sir William Price, Messrs. John Galt, R. T. Riley, Geo. H. Thomson, E. L. Drewry, F. E. Kenaston, Wm. Shaw, W. R. Allan, M. Bull, Stephen Haas, Major-General John W. Carson, C.B.; J. S. Hough, K.C.; E. E. Cranyn, Hume Blake, K.C.; R. O. McCulloch.

At a subsequent Meeting of the Board, Sir William Price was elected Honorary President; Mr. John Galt, President; Mr. R. T. Riley and Mr. George H. Thomson, Vice-Presidents.

The Grip

(With apologies to James Whitcomb Riley)

That wretched influenza came to our house to-day,
He brought along a bag of pains and vowed he'd come to stay.
Now sister she's a sneezin' and Arthur' coughin' bad;
Seems like is the worst attack our brother ever had.
The doctor says, be careful, keep away from them that's ill;
And if you have bad feelin's, be sure to take a pill.
And hold your distance well when their sneezin' roundabout,
For the grip germs'll git you if you don't watch out,
Accordin' to directions you should keep quite warm and dry;
And, though you like it very much just take one piece of pie;
An' cut out all the hearty foods and swallow down fresh air:
An' shun the crowded places like you would a lion's lair!
And keep away from people who have sniffles in the head—
Or else no doubt you'll have to stay for several days in bed.
In short avoid all places where the sick bugs are about,
For the grip germs'll git you if you don't watch out.
But if to all my cautions you refuse to lend an ear,
Don't be surprised if some day you are smitten plain and clear.
A chill, unpleasant, seizes you, you shiver and you shake;
Some more ills come to pain you, you are burning and you ache;
A sneezin' and a coughin' hard, your fever rises fast—
Now Old Man Influenza has got hold of you at last.
To bed you go with potions vile and medicines about,
But like pigs, guess we've got you 'cause you didn't watch out.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

MILLER LAKE

(Too late for last week)

The Rev. Mr. Elsherington assisted by the Rev. Mr. Drinkhall, of Stratford, commenced the first meeting of the revival service on Tuesday but the weather so far has been very bad and no sleighing so that the attendance has not been very large.

A number of the children ann some of the older folks are having bad colds at present,

Mr Frank Stein was down to Stokes Bay on Friday with a load of wheat.

Speaking of wheat, there are a lot of people would like to know why wheat is only about 85c per bushel and flour going up to about the price it was last year. When wheat was $1.25 per bushel it would just about as well to have let the grafter grab on wheat as on flour, even better so.

Lindsay Township may have been a little slow in her boys enlisting, but now they see the need and no German gun will stop them.

Mr John Boyle is busy at present delivering hay to Stokes Bay.

Mr. H. Wardrope was a business visitor here on Tuesday.

Union Bank Report Good Profits and Expanded Business

The Union Bank of Canada, that old established institution which, originating in the city of Quebec, placed its headquarters a few years ago in Winnipeg in order to be more closely in touch with the growth of the great west, presents a remarkably satisfactory statment for the year ending Nov 30th 1915 It is worthy of note that, so sound is the business of this bank and so well-selected its assets that it has been able throughout the entire period of stringency and war difficulties to maintain sufficient profit to pay its customary dividends and bonus to keep up its contribution to Officers' Pension Fund, to make provision for depreciation of securities and other contingencies and not only to refrain from drawing upon its accumulated balance or its Rest Account but to add a substant. ial sum to the balance each year.

The profits this year amounted to $659,-693 as compared with $712,440 in 1914 and $750,095 in 1913—a very moderate shrinkage indeed in a year of universally diminished bank earnings. This represents 13.2 per cent on the capital stock of which 8% was distributed in dividends and bonus 3% was applied to Contingent Account war tax amounted to $45,730 and Pension Fund $10,000 leaving $106,976.75 to be carried forward at credit of Profit and Loss Account.

These very satisfactory profits were earned upon a usciness which is in a highly strong condition, and has been rendered considerably more liquid during the year. Deposits show a heavy increase over the figure of 1914, interest deposits five millions greater, non-interest deposits four and a half millions greater. As against these the total assets are altogether more than 90½ millions against 81¼ millions a year ago. There is a very great increase in the securities and call loan items which make up the liquid reserve which is 47.22% of liabilities to the Public. That this increase however, has not been secured at the expense of the commercial clients of the Bank is amply evident from the fact that current loans and discounts in Canada are $48,941,315 being less than two million below the figure of 1914 (which was $50,866,306) and considerably above the figure of 1913 namely $46,708,269. As evidence of the quality of the assets and of the improvement in credit conditions it may be noted that the amount of overdue paper has been greatly reduced and is now well below the figure which might be expected in proportion to the volume of the business.

Mr. Davidson, Oxenden. Receives a Letter From His Grandson

France, Dec. 18

Received your letter last night and very glad to get it. Well I am getting along fine so far. We came out of the trenches about a week ago, and we are now back quite a piece from the firing line in billets. I am billeted in a house with the rest of the troop, there are 27 of us in this house upstairs, the most of the regiment are in barns and it is pretty cold at times, so I think we are pretty lucky to be in a house. We had it pretty hard the last time we were in the trenches, they were pretty wet but they have long rubber boots for the front lines. The Germans shelled us pretty hard the last half day we were in but we came off pretty lucky, we only had one fellow killed he was in a dugout and the shell hit the corner of it, and caved it in on him. We got him out pretty quickly but he never spoke he died in a few minutes. Jack Arnott, Jack Young, Club Sherrit and I carried him out after dark and it is an awful job getting the wounded and dead back from the firing line, had to cross a creek, and the walk was washed away. Jack Arnott was walking ahead showing us the way and he fell into the creek right to the neck. Well I cannot tell you very much about things out here, but the country seems to be pretty low and it rains quite a lot, but I guess the artillery bombarding all the time has quite a lot to do with the rain at least they say it has.

So Bob has enlisted, I have been looking for a letter from him for a while, I haven't had one for about a month, if he got into the artillery he will be all right. I think the artillery is about the best thing to be long to over here. I had a letter from Donald R. and he told me he heard Bob had gone to join the artillery. Well I guess Jim will put in a pretty lonesome winter if he stays there alone. Well you folks don't need to worry any about me when you don't get any letters for sometimes when we are in the trenches it is pretty hard to write when everything is wet and the paper gets all wet, but if anything should happen to me you would get word inside of 6 or 8 days anyway and that is a lot quicker than you get my letters. So Walter Charles has got home all right, I had no idea he was hit as bad as he was. I heard he was here in France yet with the Strathconas, I haven't got anything yet from over there but a pair of gloves I think Bob sent, but there must be a heap of stuff on the road if it ever gets here. Well I think I will close for this time hoping this finds you all as well as it leaves me.

Address and Presentation.

A pleasant evening was spent on Monday, January 17, at the home of Mr and Mrs A. T. Perry, the occasion being a farewell to them, previous to their departure from Wiarton, and upon this occasion they were presented with the following address.

To Mr and Mrs A. T. Perry

It is with no small regret we learn of your intended departure from our midst, where you have been appreciated indeed.

We can truly say we are sorry to see you going away for in addition to your valuable service in every auxiliary of church work we regard you as warm personal friends. Now that our friendship is to be at long range, we ask you to accept these remembrances of our days spent together in Wiarton.

Although we feel that no material thing can express our regard at this time, yet we hope you will look beyond the material to the genuine feelings which exist between us.

We wish you to remember we will always have a deep interest in you, and we extend our best wishes for your future and we hope it may be all that you could wish for and everything we might anticipate for you.

Signed in behalf of members of the Saint's Church.

At Hymen's Altar

Spencer—Cheshire

A very pretty wedding took place Wednesday last, at the home of Mrs. H. H. Cheshire, Cedarhill, when her only daughter, Mildred May, was united in marriage to Norman W. Spencer, also of Cedarhill. The Marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. W. W. Prudham, it took place in the parlor which was beautifully decorated with flags and bouquets of carnations. At five o'clock the wedding music was played by Miss Ada Spencer, sister of the groom. The bride who was given away by her brother, Mr. William Cheshire of Wiarton, joined the groom, under the Union Jack. The bride was beautiful in a gown of ivory satin, with an overblouse of linon, trimmed with pearls, and wore a veil of Brussels net gathered in a pretty cap effect with a wreath of orange blossoms. Her only attendant was her little neice, Bernice Cheshire, who wore a dress of pale blue silk, and carried her bouquet of bridal roses, lily of the valley and maiden-hair-fern. After the ceremony a dainty dinner was served. Then the bride slipped away to don her travelling suit of navy blue serge and black velvet hat trimmed with ermine. A large number of handsome gifts were received showing the esteem in which the young couple were held. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a handsome pearl necklace, to the pianist a gold brooch, and to the flower girl a gold signet ring. Mr and Mrs. Spencer left on the 9.15 train for Owen Sound, intending to resume their journey the next day to Toronto, where they will visit friends. On their return they will reside at Cedarhill.

Letter From Pte. McFarlane.

Bramshatt Camp, Jan 15. 1916

Dear Editor—

Allow me space in your valuable paper for a few remarks as everything is quiet to-night I thought I would inform The Echo and my friends in Wiarton as to the wellfare of the 34th Battalion, everything is progressing fine over here all but the weather. It is an awful country for rain it rains on an average of about 15 days a month, I am beginning to long for a little snow for I prefer snow to mud any day. Our Battalion was inspected on Jan 12th by Lord Kitchner. He was very well satisfied with the way we were progressing and wished us all kinds of luck. I suppose you have all kinds of snow in Wiarton. Just a word about Pte. Burley the poor fellow has had very bad luck since he came over to England just returned from the hospital at West Cliff and he was informed today that he would very likely get his discharge, but I can assure the people of Wiarton that he would like to see this through, and it will also be an unable discharge. Was very pleased to hear of Dr. Hay's safe arrival, will run up to Shorncliff to see him later. I got The Echo from home to day and I can tell you it was a treat to hear the news from Wiarton. I suppose you have a large force in training at Wiarton, my advice to them is to stay in Wiarton as long as they can for there is a slight difference in the way they put you through your work in England, but I am not tired of it yet, just the same I will be glad to get my civies on again. We may go to France shortly if not this winter it will be in the Spring. I was pleased to hear of Pte. Plants safe return to his old town and I hope he will not be called back for I think he has done his share and done it splendidly. I will have to make this note short as news is scarce and it will soon be intoo report and lights out. Major Fletcher is getting along fine of course he has a busy time keeping the boys under check for there are a few bad eggs in this Batt. and I guess I am as bad as any of them and I get what's coming to me even if I do know him well it makes no difference with Major Dave. I was sorry to hear of Mr Heuthers death, but those things must happen to all of us. Any person wishing to correspond with me I would be pleased to hear from them for it is good to get a letter from my home town. We are just 30 miles from London, it is a fine place to spend your week-ends only it is hard on your cobalt. Will write another letter to your paper in a week or so. I will ring off this time wishing your paper good luck for the New Year.

I remain yours truly.
Pte. W. D. McFarlane,
Bramshott Camp,
Liphook Hants,

A Mother's Duty to Her Daughter

Her Health Must Be Carefully Guarded As She Approaches Womanhood

The mother who calls to mind her own girlhood knows how urgently her daughter is likely to need help and strength in the years between early school and womanhood. It is then that growing girls droop, become feeble, bloodless and nervous Nature is calling for more nourishment than the blood can supply. Signs of distress are plainly evident in dull eyes, pale cheeks weak and aching backs, fits of depression and often a dislike for proper food. These signs mean anaemia—that is bloodlessness.

The watchfull mother take prompt steps to give her the new, rich red blood her system calls for, by giving her Dr. Williams Pink Pills, which transform, weak, anaemic girls into a condition of Perfect, through the rich new blood these pills actually make. No other medicine has ever succeeded like Dr Williams Pink Pills; and thousands of weak, disheartened girls have proved their worth Miss Mabel Sinclair, Coburg, Ont. says:—

About three years ago I was a very sick, nervous and run down girl. At the least excitement I would tremble and faint away, and the slightest noise would annoy me, I had severe pains about the heart and would often take dizzy and smothering spells. I lost in weight and the colour all left my face. My mother got all sorts of medicine for me, but all failed to do me any good and was still going down hill. One day we read in the newspaper of a similar case cured by Dr. Williams Pink Pill and the next time my mother went to town she got three boxes. In a short time I felt the Pills were helping me, and from that on every day they helped me more. I took altogether nine boxes and felt like a new person. I was ready for all my meals gained in weight; the colour came back to my cheek, and I was again enjoying perfect health, and have ever since enjoyed that blessed condition. I earnestly advise all weak to give Dr. Williams Pink Pills a fair trial, and am sure they will do as much for them as they did for me."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

Walkerton

Walkerton is suffering from an epidemic of red cards. A score or more homes in various parts of the town are placarded "Measles". The cases are of a mild type and as every precaution is being taken by the authorities to prevent the spread of the infection, it is anticipated that the epidemic will soon be stamped out.

Mr James Coulter, Treasurer Arran, and one of the best known men in the township, passed away at the Bruce County Hospital about 4 o'clock on Tuesday morning last, at the age of 61 yrs 7 months and 22 days. The deceased who took ill with an acute obstruction of the bowels on Wednesday, was advised to undergo an operation in the early stages of the malady, but declined in the hopes that he would pull through without surgical treatment. He appears to have consented, however, when too late, for on being operated on Monday even his condition was found to be such that little hopes were entertained for his recovery, and the following Tuesday end active and interesting career closed.

Mr James O'Connor has sold his 100 acre farm on the Durham road, west of Walkerton, and lately occupied by Mr. Wm Lamberton, to Mr Frank Michlhausen, east of town for $5950.00 possession to be given on Feb 1st. Mr Lamberton sold this farm after working it for nine years to Mr O'Connor last April for $5350 making a margin of $450 and the latter after holding it for only ten months, and never putting a day's labor on the place sold it at an advance of $600.00 thus showing how the business game is worked.

Knox Church annual meeting was held in the school room on Wednesday evening of last week. The attendance was good. Mr. W. A. Rowand was chosen chairman and Mr D. McKechnie secretary. The reports from the different officers and organizations were heard with great interest. The income for ordinary running expenses was $3171.11 expenditures $3061.49 and liabilities $150.00 The membership is 494. The vote on church union resulted in a majority in favor of 82. About fifty whose church has been in connection with this congregation are either on the fighting line or training to take their places there places there, and have the earnest prayers of the congregation for their welfare. Inspiring reports were presented from the Sunday School, Cradle Roll, Bible Class Mission, Women's Missionary Society, and the Choir. A vote of thanks was rendered to Mr Leeson the leader, and the members of his choir for their splendid service of praise each Sunday and on special occasions. Mr. N. Robertson, Clerk of Session was also given a hearty vote of thanks for his untiring services on the Session Board. A special feature was the dainty luncheon served by the ladies at the close of the meeting. Officers elected for ensuing year were; Geo. McCay, treasurer; H. M. Lay, H. G. Hunter, Auditors; Managers for three years, H. M. R. H. McKay, W. J. McNally, R. E. Heughen and F. Rennie; for one year, Jos White.

Mayor Little stated in this connection that although the temperance meeting in Division Street Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening last was not very well attended, those present contributed about eighty dollars toward the expense of the campaign.

Rifle and Machine Gun Fire Superior to the Germans.

Enemy Patrols Are Showing Little Desire for Fighting—Canadian Patrols Have Been Very Active and Have Performed Notable Feats — Vancouver Man Wins Medal for Distinguished Conduct.

—EVENTS along Canadian Front

OTTAWA, Jan. 31.—Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes has received the following communique from the Canadian general representative in France:

"Canadian General Headquarters in France, via London, Jan. 30.—During the week, Jan. 19-26, the general situation on the Canadian front has undergone no material change. The weather has been mild and for the most part fine.

"The superiority of our artillery has been well maintained. Several direct hits have been obtained on hostile machine gun emplacements, and more than one enemy's trench mortar has been silenced by our fire.

"On Jan. 19 our first field artillery brigade combined with our howitzers in shelling a house used by the enemy as an observation post. One end of the building was completely demolished. Quantities of sandbags and lumber were observed among the ruins. The enemy's retaliation has not been very effective. On one occasion shrapnel hit his own parapets and his larger shells have repeatedly failed to explode.

"No combats between aeroplanes have been recorded over our lines. Several times hostile machines, acting in conjunction with the German artillery, have been beaten back by our anti-aircraft and machine guns. On the afternoon of Jan. 24 a Zeppelin crossed the Canadian area.

"Rifle and machine gun fire has been unusually brisk on both sides. Enemy snipers have been active, but our snipers have caused numerous casualties among the enemy. On Jan. 24 Lance-Corporal Mintie, of the 27th City of Winnipeg Battalion, by accurate shooting accounted for two Germans out of a party of five. The enemy working parties have frequently been detected by our observers and dispersed by the fire of our snipers and machine gunners.

"The enemy has displayed little enterprise in patrolling. The few German patrols encountered have in every case retired to their trenches on the approach of our patrols. Our reconnoitering parties and scouts have on various occasions cut the German wire and bombed the enemy working parties. The German bombs have twice been brought back to our lines by our patrols.

"On the night of Jan. 23-24 Scouts Bole, Gunn, and Matkin, of our 8th Winnipeg battalion, while near the enemy wire, observed two parties of Germans moving in the opposite direction. Crawling forward our scouts opened fire with revolvers on the enemy party of five, wounding one German and forcing the hostile patrol to retire. Shortly afterwards the enemy reappeared. Our scouts fired, killing one German. After returning to our lines for more ammunition the scouts again went out and observed stretcher-bearers carrying away dead and wounded.

"On the night of Jan. 24-25 a patrol of our 19th Western Ontario battalion, under Lieutenants Hooper and Burnham, cut a path through the German wire up to the enemy parapet. The location of the enemy working party was ascertained. After the return of our patrol our machine guns were turned on the working party. On the following night this patrol, passing through a gap cut in the wire, entered the German trench and creeping up to the German sentry endeavored to capture him. A scuffle ensued which aroused the enemy in nearby dugouts. Our patrol withdrew without a casualty.

"The Distinguished Conduct Medal has recently been awarded to Private Harris, of the 29th City of Vancouver battalion, for an exceptionally courageous act. Private Harris was attending the Grenade School in December and while throwing a live bomb slipped and fell. The bomb rolled into a trench in which a number of men were standing. All of those except one were able to gain cover. Harris, who saw that this man was unable to move, flung himself without hesitation on top of the bomb in an effort to save his comrade. Almost immediately the bomb exploded. Harris was very seriously injured and the other man's leg broken. Both men are reported to be doing well.

"Another deed of exceptional gallantry has recently been reported. On January 11 a large mortar shell was thrown into a trench of our Thirty-first Alberta battalion at a point where Private A. H. Jackson and a party of men were at work. The shells are dangerous and destructive. Realizing there was little chance for any of the party, Private Jackson threw himself on the bomb and at the risk of being blown to pieces, seized the burning base fuse and wrenched it out."

General Hodson Dies of Wounds.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Brig.-General George Benjamin Hodson, of the Indian army, who was wounded in the fighting on Gallipoli Peninsula, has died of his injuries, at Malta.

General Hodson, who was born in 1863, served with distinction in Egypt in 1882, in the Burmese expedition, on the north-west frontier of India, and in other campaigns. Before the war he was established at Lahore in India.

Must Pay the Penalty.

PARRY SOUND, Jan. 31.—Sheriff Armstrong has been notified that the law must take its course in the case of Arthur Richard Cassan, convicted of murder. The hangman is here and the execution will take place on Wednesday morning.

ZEPPELIN RAIDS PARIS.

Twenty-Four Persons Are Killed and Twenty-Seven Injured.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—A Zeppelin dirigible passed swiftly over a section of Paris Saturday night, dropping about a dozen great bombs, which killed 24 persons and injured 27.

The raid lasted about one minute and a half. The fog seriously interfered with the work of the Paris aerial guard.

The fact that only one German machine appeared leads to the belief that the Zeppelin was making a reconnoitring trip, and the supposition is that the Germans have in view a similar operation on a larger scale.

Fifty-two persons were killed or wounded in the raid, according to the more complete reports available yesterday. Nine women were killed and 14 wounded; 14 men were killed and 15 wounded. Included among the killed was a baby of 18 months. Two children were injured. Ten houses were damaged by the raiders. Three houses were scenes of eight killed and injured each. In another house seven persons were killed or injured.

One of the houses in which the most serious damage was done was a home in which the family had met to celebrate the return of a son, a Zouave, on leave of absence from the front. Around the table were the grandfather, 68 years old; his daughter, the latter's husband, and aunt, two sons, and a girl of 15 years. Seven mutilated corpses were found in the wreckage of the house.

Apparently the bombs carried by the Zeppelin were let loose indiscriminately and without thought of where they should strike.

GERMANS CELEBRATING.

Offensive on Western Front Marks Kaiser's Birthday.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The German offensive on the western front, coincident with the Kaiser's birthday, which began with the attack on the allied positions at Nieuport and continued with an attack in the region of Neuville-St. Vaast, attained success Friday in attacks at three points in Artois, to the north of the north-west of the Napoli farm, north-east of Neuville-St. Vaast; the second near St. Laurent, in the Arras sector, and the third in the sector of Frise, south of the Somme, 11 kilometres west of Peronne.

The offensive was the most powerful drive which has been made by the Germans in this theatre within a year. Its most important accomplishment, therefore, according to the German official report, taking of 1,859 feet of trenches in the Napoli farm sector, the taking of a group of houses in an assault on the St. Laurent district, and, most important of all, the capture of the village of Frise, with 4,000 yards of French trenches to the depth of 1,000 yards to the south. The prisoners made comprised 1,287 officers and men at the Napoli farm. Several prisoners were added to the list by a German detachment which penetrated the second line of French trenches south of Libons, and which then returned to the German lines. Among the prisoners are some British.

The same German statement announces the bringing down of an allied aeroplane south of Apremont.

MORE MEN WANTED.

Britain's Call for Twenty Thousand Will Be Filled at Once.

OTTAWA, Jan. 31.—Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes announced last night that twenty thousand more troops Canada have been asked for by the War Office and will be despatched from the Dominion within the next two or three months. An offer of more troops was made some time ago, following the rapid progress made in the training centres of the Dominion, and the War Office has accepted the offer up to a total of twenty battalions, for which accommodation is being provided in England. The battalions will be selected in the order of merit, those that have shown the most efficiency being the likely ones for first choice. They will be sent over as soon as the necessary transports have been provided.

Anti-German Rioting in Switzerland.

LAUSANNE, Jan. 31.—Notwithstanding the presence of troops, rioting again broke out Friday night in the vicinity of the German Consulate. More than 100 arrests were made.

The disturbance occurred after a brief period of tranquility, following two previous outbreaks. There was rioting in front of the residence of the German Consul, R. Ehlinger, as well as near the Consulate. The disorders began at eleven o'clock, and it was two hours later before the police, assisted by Landwehr, restored order.

Camille de Coppet, President of the Republic, arrived at Lausanne to make an investigation.

No Reply to Note.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Tension over the Lusitania issue continued to exist last night in Administration circles in the absence of official confirmation of the press reports from Berlin that Germany is preparing to send to the United States a new note which will meet the demands of the American Government.

That the German Embassy has likewise received nothing to substantiate these reports was indicated by the fact that Count von Bernstorff is still absent from Washington.

Gas Stove Caused Death.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 31.—Hector Eleckson, an employe of the Crown Electric Company, of this city, was found dead from asphyxiation in his room at noon yesterday. In the room was a gas stove, from which fumes had evidently been escaping since the night before. An inquest was decided unnecessary. Eleckson's wife and two children live at 2336 Clark street, Montreal.

BULGAR CAMP BOMBED

Czar Ferdinand's Troops Were Thrown Into a Panic.

French, British, and Italian Marines Have Occupied the Greek Fort of Karabar at Salonica—Turks and Bulgarians in Thrace Now Number 150,000 — Premier Briand Postpones His Visit to Rome.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—An Athens despatch says:

"Allied aviators flew over the camp of the German and Bulgarian troops at Bazarli, north-west of Lake Doiran, dropping bombs and doing considerable damage, according to reports here. Many soldiers were killed. The enemy troops were thrown into a panic. The aviators returned safely to their base."

The French official report says:

"On Jan. 28 a flotilla of 14 French aeroplanes dropped projectiles on the enemy encampments at Bazarli, to the north of Lake Doiran."

Athens confirms the occupation by marines from French, British and Italian warships of the Greek fort of Karabar, which guards the entrance to Salonica harbor. The occupation took place early yesterday morning. It marks the first appearance of Italian and Russian forces on Greek soil and the first land operations in which troops of all four of the allied nations have participated.

The landing was effected over the protest of the Greek commander. According to the Athens despatches, the allied warships appeared in the gulf of Salonica off the peninsula at daybreak. Boats were quickly sent ashore with 2,000 marines, the Greek commander being notified by messenger of their intention. He withdrew his troops at once, after protesting.

A number of Greek officials who are reported to have joined the commander of the fort in their protests against the action, have declared that it was carried out by the forces of all four nations with the purpose of intimidating Greece by a show of the power of the Quadruple Entente.

Reuter's correspondent at Petrograd sends the following:

"The Novoe Vremya says that from what it has learned through a good diplomatic source there is reason to believe that the Turkish army which joined the Bulgarians in Thrace aggregates, together with the Bulgarians, 150,000 men."

The visit of Premier Briand of France to Rome has been postponed until early in February. This is said to be, in spite of the reports to the contrary, because the situation in Albania is much improved, the Austrian advance southward being held in abeyance by the flooded country. It is explained in official quarters that because of these conditions Durazzo is not at present threatened and no attack on Avlona is imminent.

TO JOIN BRITISH.

Russian Forces Are Not Far Now From Kut-el-Amara.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A Petrograd despatch says: "The Russian Caucasian operation is widening, fanlike, to the westward, south-westward, and southward, with the possibility, according to semi-official opinion, of a juncture being formed with the British Mesopotamia expedition.

"The Russian advance is pushing west of Melasghert, where the important town of Khynysaks, 50 miles south of Erzerum, has been captured. At the same time progress is reported in the direction of Van, and likewise toward Urumiah, where it is officially announced that the Turks have been repulsed with heavy losses. Further south-east, in the region of the Kandalanski Pass, south-east of Hamadan, another Russian victory is reported.

"Although a broken mountainous country intervenes, the latter positions are not far removed from the head of the British column in the vicinity of Kut-el-Amara. It is pointed out that the Turks evidently fear a junction, this being indicated by the retreat towards Mush of a large part of their army that was recently reported to have been routed, the evident purpose of the move being to cover Bitlis and Diarbekar.

ENGULFED IN MARSHES.

Germans Around Pinsk Are in a Terrible Condition.

LONDON, Jan. —A Reuter despatch from Petrograd says that prisoners taken during the last few days by the Russians confirm reports of the terrible condition of the German troops in the Pinsk marshes, where a rapid thaw released such vast quantities of subterranean water that all the enemy works have been wrecked as completely as if they had been bombarded by heavy batteries.

Not only have thousands of caissons, quantities of munitions, and numerous guns been engulfed, the despatch says, but various entrenched detachments of troops, and often large ones, have been cut off, and, having been unable to extricate themselves from the marshy labyrinth, they perished miserably.

Enemy Losses Heavy.

ROME, Jan. 31.—The official statement issued by General Headquarters yesterday reads:

"Along the entire front artillery activity has been favored by clear weather. On the middle Isonzo one of our batteries bombarded the railway station at Santa Lucia, in the Tolmino sector.

"Enemy hostile artillery fired a few shells on the village of San Martino di Quisca, causing some casualties among the inhabitants. Prisoners confirm that heavy losses were suffered by the Austrians, particularly by the 37th Landwehr Regiment, during the recent fighting on the heights west of Gorita."

Editorial

THE Canada Temperance Act has not been enforced very well in Goderich.

NEARLY all of the county local papers have raised their rates to $1.50 per year.

WARDEN McNabb makes the second Warden for Walkerton to give to the County.

BRUCE County has certainly set a pace for others to follow in the matter of giving to patriotic purposes. The councillors have come to the conclusion that the most fair way to meet the situation is by taxes, and debentures will be issued extending over a period of 20 or 25 years.

WALKERTON is making preparations for the whole Bruce battalion there next summer. How would it do to make Wiarton the centre of gravity? If Walkerton, however, shows up well in recruiting the honor may be conceded.

THE closing days of January in this district were like those of November. So far there has been very little cold weather and practically every cold spell has been followed by a thaw. There is no sign of ice in the bay now, and the ice harvest will probably be late.

The Few Who Remain

THE Bruce Battalion will make Calmostja clean sweep. Whatever may be the results in other parts of the County from Park Head to Tobermory there will not be very many by Spring who have not enlisted. At Cape Croker 41 are in training. This is a remarkable percentage. In other districts like Tobermory there have been splendid results, but while there are say 30 at Hepworth, 120 at Wiarton, 41 at Cape Croker and 10 Lions Head, there are still a number physically qualified, without any good reason, who should enlist. They are the few who remain, they are marked, marked for life, not for bravery, but for cowardice at the time when their King and Country needed their services. The parents who refuse to allow them to go are marked, not for sacrifice but for selfishness, willing to see others give their sons but selfishly refusing permission to their own. This brand of shame will never come off, it will live long after this war has been forgotten it will burn into the conscience and give one hundred times more pain than death. The few who remain, who will not enlist, have a most miserable life ahead of them

ODDITIES IN JAPAN

Natives Have a Topsy Turvy Way of Doing Many Things.

BATHING IS A SACRED RITE.

And Whenever a Native Has a Moment to Spare He Resorts to the Tub, With Its Peculiar Code of Ethics. Houses Without Windows.

I just can't get used to how turned around, upside down, inside out, topsy turvy, things are in Japan. A Japanese carpenter draws the plane toward himself, and a blacksmith sits down to work.

A Japanese blacksmith never knows the joys of getting tickets to the circus, for he hasn't any place for the advance man to paste up his three sheets. The whole front of a Japanese blacksmith shop is open, with other buildings jammed up so close on each side that the circus man couldn't get a poster in.

A Japanese book begins on our last page and finishes on our first paragraph. And their sentences begin at the top of the page and read down, like long columns of figures. They wear white to funerals and judge poetry by the beauty of the handwriting.

Japanese houses haven't any chimneys, so you may see a whole plateau of houses with not a single curl of smoke as far as the eye can reach. The Japanese cooking is done outside the house in a little charcoal stove. They have no stoves to keep themselves warm, only little hibachis, gallon jars with charcoal in them covered with fine ashes. There isn't enough heat in one to singe a miller, and whenever they get too cold they take a warm bath.

Bathing is a sacred rite. Whenever they have a spare moment they run and take a bath. When business is dull they hurry to a public bathhouse and jump in. If they miss one train they take a bath while waiting for the next. They take hot baths—steaming, sizzling hot. And the strange thing is they don't do the bathing in a tub. They have little foot baths about the size of crocks that they use for washing themselves, and when they are thoroughly clean they climb into the tub.

If you should get into the tub first the proprietor would break into tears and tell you that you were bankrupting him, for the same water is used all evening, no difference how many guests the hotel has.

After soaking awhile they crawl out, steaming all over, gently blot themselves, get into kimonos and sit around bare ankled. One would think that before the evening was over a fleet footed runner would have to be dispatched for medical assistance, but instead of that they never catch cold!

When I got here and was invited into a Japanese home I found that they hadn't any chairs. In fact, there isn't a stick of furniture a foot high in a Japanese house. You have to sit on the floor. A person of my build was never meant for sitting on the floor. When I get down on the floor and try to draw up to a Japanese table my feet are so in the way that I can't get up to where there is anything doing. The waitress has to walk around my feet to bring me the viands. By the time the meal is over she is pretty well fagged out.

A Japanese house hasn't a single window. And it's only the most stylish of houses that have a pane of glass. A person who has a pane of glass somewhere in his house sets the social pace in that neighborhood. Instead of glass they have paper pasted on sliding frames, and through the paper the light filters. Naturally one wonders how they keep the rain out. This is little trouble, for outside the paper walls are a series of wooden doors, which also slide back and forth.

When time comes to retire you look around for the bed, but there isn't one in sight. It is rolled up in a drawer, and the Japanese wouldn't know a bedstead from a quilting frame.

To make the bed ready the servant opens the drawer and unrolls the quilts on the floor, putting a tomato can looking thing under one end for a pillow. Then she shuts all the paper windows and pulls to all the wooden slides so that not a breath of air can get in and the bed is ready. Money in the palm wouldn't persuade a Japanese to sleep with the window open.

Their theory is that during the day the air becomes full of dust and germs so that if you keep your windows sealed during the night none of the germs can get in.—Homer Croy in Leslie's Weekly.

Queer Spelling.

Jack was looking over the dictionary and once he laughed aloud.

"Why are you laughing?" asked Dot. "Is your book interesting?"

"No, not interesting," answered Jack, "but amusing. It spells words so different from the way I spell them."

THE BATTLE OF LIFE.

Life can be made a success. It is not a question of climbing above poverty; it is a question of understanding life. So many of us have been lured away and fascinated by what turn out to be phantoms and false gods. We have had to wheel back and begin over again and fight along against tremendous odds, and yet with all that life can be made a success, for success consists in doing right, in doing the best you can with what you have. Fight until the end.

BREATHING IN THE WATER.

In Doing It Properly Lies the Secret of Success in Swimming.

The way to avoid drowning, according to a swimming teacher, is to learn how to swim. Good swimmers don't drown. They might die of chill or starve to death, but as for drowning—pooh!

"How about cramps?" he was asked. "Even good swimmers have cramps."

"Cramps needn't cause a moment's worry. I've seen thousands of good swimmers seized with cramps, and never a one was drowned. All they did was to turn over on their backs and either wait for help or paddle with their free limbs. I've never heard of a swimmer having cramps in both legs and arms. Even then his case would not be hopeless.

"There never was a case of drowning that was caused by cramps. That may seem surprising after the countless water tragedies that have been blamed on cramps. Death in the water is caused by chill or strangling.

"People strangle to death because they are ignorant of the proper method of breathing. When they sink beneath the water they hold their air passages shut. When they come to the top they have to breathe out the air they've used while under water. As breathing out takes fifty times as long as breathing in, they have no time to get a fresh supply of air before they go under again. This keeps up until they breathe in under the water and thus strangle to death.

"The process should be reversed. Breathe in for the second you are above water; then breathe out through the nostrils while under the water, and you can keep it up until you starve to death.

"Nine-tenths of swimming is breathing, and movement is only one-tenth," says the expert.

Nuremberg.

Nuremberg was once almost the richest and most famous town in Europe. The well known saying of Pope Pius II. that a Nuremberg citizen was better off than a Scottish king was justified by the accounts that have been preserved of the town and its burghers. In the fifteenth century there came from Nuremberg the first watches, known as "Nuremberg eggs;" the first cannon, the first gun lock, the first wire drawing machine, the clarinet, certain descriptions of pottery and the art of painting on glass. For 800 years its walls defended the valley of the Pegnitz against all enemies. Four hundred towers once topped the walls, but only about a third of them now remain.

Children and Night Life.

Night life militates against children's health and growth to a greater extent than has been realized.

Overstimulation in place of rest and sleep, which growing children need, tends to undermine even the strongest constitutions. It needs no physiologist to perceive that the ravages of night life help materially to reduce measurements of weight, height and chest and to weaken heart, lungs and eyes. * * * Moreover, their education suffers. Children who are out until midnight must report at school the next morning although tired and mentally dull. Night life destroys the habits of industry. Loitering and loafing becomes rooted into a habit.—From "Streetland."

Precaution.

"I can't stay out late tonight, boys. It's breadmaking night at home."

"Don't tell us you have to make the bread, Henpeck?"

"It's not that, but the rolling pin is too handy."

The Case of Solomon.

The One—I can't understand why old man Solomon was considered such a very wise mortal when he married 700 times.

The Other—Well, that's enough to put any man wise.

The Specification.

"That incorrigible gossip, Mrs. Gaddy, says she wants to talk business to you."

"I don't doubt it, but it will be everybody else's but her own."

So to Speak.

"How's that young man I see calling on you lately?"

"He's a pill, but he brings me lots of candy."

"Trying to sugar coat himself, as it were."

Domestic Diplomacy.

"Why do you insist upon having the servant call you at 7 o'clock every morning? You never get out of bed at that hour."

"No, but I want to make sure the servant is awake."

A Gentle Hint.

Young Man—Your twin daughters seem absolutely inseparable. The Mother—Oh, I don't know. A young man with half a million, like yourself, ought to make good as a separator.

Expressed Differently.

"Madam, you ought to go to a warmer climate."

"For once, doctor, you and my husband are agreed, but he expresses the idea in more emphatic language."—New York Press.

Helped Out.

Smith—Goldmore is a very generous old fellow. Do you know, he's always helping somebody out.

Jones (sadly)—Yes. I went to see his daughter the other night, and he helped me out, too.

County Council

The opening session of the County Council for 1916, was held in Walkerton, commencing on the 25th as per Statute.

All members were present except W. D. B. McDonald of Tiverton, absent through bereavement in his family. Time and the Electors had dealt gently with the members since last year with the result that there were but four changes among the members instead of the usual ten or twelve changes.

The election of a Warden was at once proceed with, the following being nominated: Dr. Wilkinson, D. Phelan, David Scott, G. Kastner, A. E. McNab, E. Kuntz, D. J. Izzard, M. Ellsinger, J. E. Grant, W. H. Brown and Jas. Douglas. All of whom withdrew except Messrs. McNab, Izzard and Douglas, and Mr. McNab was elected Warden.

Mr. McNab thanked the members for the honor done him and the town he represented and outlined a number of important matters likely to engage the attention of the Council this year, mentioning particulary Patriotic matters, Good roads and Hydro Electric.

The Standing Committees were appointed as follows; Finance—Messrs. Kastner, Brown, Grant, Anderson; Nesbitt, Doering and Forbes.

Road and Bridge—Messrs. Cass, Weir, Johnson, Izzard, Sinclair, Ellsinger, Kuntz, Whicher and Wilkinson.

Equalization and Salaries—Messrs. Douglas, McDonald D. A., Whicher; Hunter, Craig, Dobson and Ferguson.

House of Refuge—Messrs Kuntz, Ellsinger and the Warden.

Petitions and By-Laws—Messrs Scott, Munn, Ballachey, Phelan and McDonald D A.

Education and Printing—Messrs Ballachey, Burns, Christie, Douglas, Doering, Munn and Rutledge.

Property—Messrs Nesbitt, Izzard, Phelan, Dobson and Burns.

Warden's—Messrs Brown, Forbes and Ferguson.

The usual grants were made, of $75, to each Agricultural Society; $150 to the Childrens Aid Society; $500 to the four Northern Townships; $25 to the Sick Childrens' Hospital; $25 to each Farmers' and Women's Institutes. All newspapers were ordered for House of Refuge and usual Library grants made.

Hugh McLaren and W. J. Taylor were appointed County Auditors; A.E. McNab and Norman Robertson to the Board of Criminal Audit; H. McLaren, Port Elgin, M.E. Boose, Chesley, F. Sallery, Kincardine, H. M. McLay, Walkerton and Wm. Becker, Wiarton, High School Trustees. F. M. Hicks, Southampton; A. Gilmore, Tara, and H. A. Doupe, Lucknow, were appointed on Board of Examiners.

The only changes made in salaries of officials was an increase of $50 in the Keeper and matron of the House of Refuge.

A long communication was read from the Ontario Dept. of Public Works urging the County to adopt the Good Road System, and pointing out the benefits. Mr. Anderson, of Lucknow, took up the question urging that some action be taken. He pointed out that this question had been before the Council for some years but nothing had been done. Had the scheme been adopted the County would have received from the Government $130,000 od account of the bridges alone that we have had to build, which the County had to pay for anyway. The Government has now increased the portion it pays to 40% and also pays 20% of the cost of maintenance Many other Counties have entered into the scheme and all are well satisfied. The Engineer of the Department, in his letter, points out that with the material Bruce has for roads the cost in this County would not be half what it is in some Counties not so favored with good material. Messrs Kastner and Hunter also urged action to be taken at once.

A Committee of Messrs Cass, Anderson and Hunter was appointed to look fully into the matter and report at June Session.

Patriotic matters again loomed large and the opinion seemed pretty general that while the County had done fairly well it had not done what it could or should. It was also pointed out that as it was Subscriptions were continually being asked for and those easily got as were called upon to bear a good deal more than their fair share, whereas others though they may be as willing to give were not asked on account of being more difficult to get at. It was felt that if the County made the grant everyone would then be asked to contribute his or her fair share and no more. It was decided to increase the County grant from $4,000 a month to $7,5000 a month while the war lasts. This amount will be divided, $2,500 to the 160th Overseas Battalion of Bruce, $2,500 to the Red Cross, $1,000 to the Belgium Relief Fund and the balance to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The money therefor will be raised by debenture as required, payments being spread over ten years, the Council thinking the future might well bear a part of it.

Messrs Nesbitt and Weir asked the County to assume the bridge on the 6th con., of Brant, claiming it is a county bridge. A committee was appointed to investigate and report.

The usual number of accounts were presented for payment, and repairs to bridge authorized.

It was decided to recommend that J. H. Armstrong be dismissed as a county Constable.

The Council was entertained by Mr. J. Rowland to lunch at the Soldier's Tea Rooms and by the Ladies of the Presbyterian church at a banquet in the basement of the church where they met the 160th Batt. and enjoyed a very pleasant hour. The council thoroughly believe that if the men of Walkerton and vicinity "deliver the goods" on their part to be delivered as efficiently, freely and smilingly as the ladies do their part, that section of the county, at any rate will do their share. The council was much pleased with having the opportunity of meeting the regiment and are quite satisfied that the men in the regiment will fully uphold the honor of County they represent. They are indebted the Knox church congregation for the opportunity of meeting with the regiment.

P. A. MALCOMSON.
County Clerk.

Why Best for Babies?

"Granny" Chamberlain

"I am often asked why Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is best for babies. Well, there are several reasons:

First: It is perfectly harmless and can be given with every confidence to the youngest or most delicate child.

Secondly: It contains no alcohol, opium, chloroform, morphine or any other narcotic.

Thirdly: Children like it, and no persuasion is needed to get them to take it.

For the above reasons alone it is impossible to get a better medicine for babies than

WHEN THE BLOOD IS PURE.

These Disease Germs Are Rarely Able to Infect Our Tissues.

The popular notion that the prompt healing of a cut or other wound is an evidence of purity of blood has a sound scientific basis. When the skin is broken germs in large or small numbers are thereby admitted to the sacred precincts of the tissues from which they are ordinarily excluded by the dense structure of the skin. When the tissues are maintained in a healthy state by pure and vigorous blood the few germs which enter are quickly destroyed, so that the formation of pus, or so called suppuration, does not occur, but when the blood is not pure, so that the serum and the cells are not able to make the necessary active defense, the germs grow and develop, suppuration occurs and the wound, if large, may require a long time to heal.

We might represent this by picturing in our mind a glass globe filled with water and fishes and other small creatures swimming about in it. Now imagine that indigo, ink or coloring matter of some other sort is dropped into the water. It will immediately become tinged, and if the coloring matter is of a poisonous character the fishes will soon show uneasiness and unless relieved by a replacement of the impure water by a fresh supply will soon die. This is just the condition of the living cells of the body when bathed in impure blood. The stomach cells which secrete the gastric juice, the muscle cells which contract, the liver cells which make bile, the brain cells which think—every one is definitely and seriously injured by the impurities brought in contact with it. Impure blood, then, must be regarded as the foundation of a large portion of all the diseases from which human beings suffer.—J. H. Kellogg, M. D., in Good Health.

Sending a Man to Coventry.

The expression "sending to Coventry" had a military origin. It arose, so it is said, in the days of Charles I., when the inhabitants of Coventry strongly objected to any intercourse with the military quartered in in their town, and a woman known to speak to a man in a scarlet cloak was at once the subject of a scandal. So rigid were the natives that the soldier was confined to the mess room for conversation. Thus the term "sending a man to Coventry" if you wished to shut him from society took root in the English language.—London Chronicle.

Progress In Lunacy.

A few months ago, at a council meeting in a certain small town, a well known alderman astonished the members by saying:

"Gentlemen, we have been sending our lunatics to —— asylum for a long time now, and it has cost us a great deal of money, but I am glad to be able to tell you that we have now built an asylum for ourselves."

Some Hope of Finish.

"Which do you prefer, a preacher who preaches extemporaneous sermons or a preacher who reads his sermons?" asked Smith.

"I prefer the preacher who reads his sermons," replied Brown. "He can tell when he gets to the end of his sermon."

A Fatal Omission.

"This," said the editor, "describes the invention in graphic style, but you haven't made it complete."

"No," said the reporter.

"No. You haven't said that it is destined to revolutionize the industry."

Gone!

Modern Child—What do they mean by a long winter evening? Mother—A portion of the day which existed before the era of movies and talking machines.

Good Reason Too.

Chollie—And you like a beard on a man's face?

Mollie—Yes, on some men.

"But it hides the face."

"Yes; that's the reason I like a beard."

Alligator Eggs.

More than 100 eggs have been found in one alligator. They are eaten in the West Indian islands and on the west coast of Africa. They resemble in shape a hen's egg and have much the same taste, but are larger.

Artichokes.

The artichoke, which originally came from Barbary, is not a botanical species, but a variety of the thistle, which grows spontaneously all along the African coast of the Mediterranean from Morocco to Palestine.

Feeling the Pulse.

It is a popular error to think that the pulse may be felt only at the wrist. It may be felt in any superficial artery—for instance, at the temple, in the neck or behind the ankle, on the inner side.

"Will you share my portion?" asked the poor young man.

"I fear yours is only a half portion," said the girl gently. "You will need it all for yourself."

Hardening of the Arteries

An Interesting Explanation of How This Dreaded Condition is Brought About.

You take out the garden hose in the spring, turn on the water, and if the rubber has got hard and brittle the tubing bursts and water spurts out in all directions.

The arteries of the human body may be likened to small rubber pipes, which go everywhere through the body and carry blood to the hands and feet, as well as to the nerves, muscles and vital organs. They carry all the blood in the human system, and if this blood is hardened with the poisons left over when the liver and kidneys are not properly performing their filtering work, these poisons form a deposit on the inside walls of the arteries.

The deposit thus formed gradually thickens and hardens the walls of the arteries. The tiny blood vessels of the liver are affected, and thence comes that fatal disease—cirrhosis of the liver. The cells of the kidneys become starved for want of blood, and Bright's disease gets its start.

In health the arteries have the elasticity of rubber, and expand, contract or elongate, as required by the demands of the blood pressure. Hardened, the arteries are like so much brittle rubber tubing. The blood pressure comes on, the tubing bursts, and the resulting blood clot on the brain causes apoplexy.

It will be plainly seen that the cause of trouble is in the inefficient condition of the liver and kidneys. When these filtering organs are kept healthy and active, and the bowels regular in the removal of waste matter, there is no chance for such dreadful conditions as hardening of the arteries bring about.

As in all forms of serious disease, prevention is the only wise course to follow. You can positively depend on Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of liver and kidneys, and also ensure the regularity of movement of the bowels. It is only by the activity of these organs that the blood can be kept pure and free from uric acid and other substances which form deposits in the arteries and at other points in the human system, causing pain, suffering and serious disease.

When you think of the scores of common ills, such as colds, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, backaches, etc., which arise from a torpid condition of these organs, you will better understand the reason why Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the favorite family medicine in many thousands of homes. By keeping the liver, kidneys and bowels active they cure the common ills of life, and prevent serious disease. One pill a dose. 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

CHAPTER XIV.

I Am Invited to Spend Money.

SHORTLY after 9 o'clock the next morning a sly faced man in overalls accosted me in the hall.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Smart," he said in fairly good English. "May I have a word with you? I have a message from Mr. Pless. I am an agent of the secret service. Yesterday I failed to gain admission as a visitor, today I come as a laborer."

"Is it necessary for Mr. Pless to resort to a subterfuge of this character in order to get a message to me?" I demanded indignantly.

"It was not necessary yesterday, but it is today," said he. He leaned closer and lowered his voice. "Our every movement is being watched by the countess' detectives. We are obliged to resort to trickery to throw them off the scent. Mr. Pless has read what you had to say in the newspapers, and he is too grateful, sir, to subject you to unnecessary annoyance at the hands of her agents. He would have you to meet him secretly tonight at the Kempf hotel across the river. It is most important that you should do so and that you should exercise great caution. I am to take your reply back to him."

For an instant I was fairly stupefied. Then I experienced a feeling of relief so vast that he must have seen the gleam of triumph in my eyes. The trick was mine, after all.

"You may tell Mr. Pless that I shall be there at 8," said I. The agent departed. When he was safely out of the room I explained the situation to Poopendyke and then made my way through the secret panels to the countess' rooms.

She was ready for the subterranean journey in quest of treasure attired in a neat walking skirt, with her bony hair encased in a swimming cap as a guard against cobwebs.

"Then you don't intend to send out the statements?" she cried in disappointment. "You are going to let every one think you are his friend and not mine?"

I stood over her, trying my best to scowl. "You know better than that. You know I—I am as loyal as—as can be. Hang it all!" I burst out impulsively. "Do you suppose for a minute that I want to hand you over to that infernal rascal now that I've come to—that is to say, now that we're such ripping good friends?"

She looked up at me very pathetically at first. Then her expression changed swiftly to one of wonder and the most penetrating inquiry. Slowly a flush crept into her cheeks, and her eyes wavered.

"I—I think I can trust you to—to do the right thing by me," she said, descending to a banality in her confusion.

I held out my hand. She laid hers in it rather timidly, almost as if she was afraid of me. "I shall not fail you," said I without the faintest intention to be heroic, but immediately conscious of having used an expression so trite that my cheek flamed with humiliation.

For some unaccountable reason she arose hastily from the chair and walked to the window. A similar reason no doubt held me rooted rather safely to the spot on which I stood. I have a vague recollection of feeling dizzy and rather short of breath. My heart was acting queerly.

"Why do you suppose he wants to see you?" she asked after a moment, turning toward me again. She was as calm as a summer breeze. All trace of nervousness had left her.

"I can't even supply a guess."

"You must be very, very tactful," she said uneasily. "I know him so well. He is very cunning."

"You may trust me implicitly to do the right thing," said I beamingly. "And now what do you say to our trip to the bottom of the castle?"

She shook her head. "Not with the house full of spies, my dear friend. We'll save that for another day. A rainy day perhaps. I feel like having all the sunshine I can get today. Tonight I shall be gloomy and very lonely. I shall take Rosemary and Jinko out upon the top of the tower and play all day in the sun."

I had an idea. "I am sure I should enjoy a little sunshine myself. May I come too?"

She looked me straight in the eye. There was a touch of dignity in her voice when she spoke.

"Not today, Mr. Smart."

A most unfathomable person!

I found Mr. Pless at the Kempf at 9 o'clock. He welcomed me with great warmth. He called me "dear old fellow" and shook hands with me with more heartiness than I had thought him capable of expressing. A smallish old gentleman was with him. I was informed that he was one of the greatest lawyers and advocates in Vienna, and Mr. Pless' personal adviser in the "unfortunate controversy."

"So you knew who I was all the time I was at Schloss Rothhoefen," said Mr. Pless, smiling amiably. "I was trying to maintain my incognito so that you might not be distressed, Mr. Smart, by having in your home such a notorious character as I am supposed to be. I confess it was rather shabby in me, but I hold your excellent friends responsible for the trick."

"It is rather difficult to keep a secret with women about," said I evasively.

"But never difficult to construct one," said Mr. Schymansky, winking. I think Schymansky was the name.

"By the way," said I, "I have had no word from our mutual friends. Have you seen them?"

Mr. Pless stiffened. His face grew perceptibly older.

"I regret to inform you, Mr. Smart, that our relations are not quite as friendly as they once were. I have reason to suspect that Mr. Smith has been working against me for the past two or three days, to such an extent, I may say, that the ambassador now declines to advise your government to grant us certain privileges we had hoped to secure without trouble. In short, we have just heard that he will not ask the United States to consider anything in the shape of an extradition if the countess is apprehended in her own country.

"I fancy you are wondering why I sent for you, Mr. Smart," said Mr. Pless

"I am."

"Am I to assome that the newspapers were correct in stating that you mean to support my cause with—I may say, to the full extent of your power?"

"It depends on circumstances, Mr. Pless."

"Circumstances?" He eyed me rather coldly, as if to say, "What right have you to suggest circumstances?"

"Perhaps I should have said that it depends somewhat on what my powers represent."

He crossed his slender legs comfortably and looked at me with a queer little tilt of his left eyebrow, but with an unsmiling visage. He was too cocksure of himself to grant me even so much as an ingratiating smile. Was not I a glory seeking American and he one of the glorious? It would be doing me a favor to let me help him.

"I trust you will understand, Mr. Smart, that I do not ask a favor of you, but rather put myself under a certain obligation for the time being. It is quite impossible for me to prosecute the search for my child without financial assistance from outside sources. My funds are practically exhausted, and the banks refuse to extend my credit. You have publicly declared yourself to be my friend and well wisher. I have asked you to come here tonight, Mr. Smart, to put you to the real test, so to speak. I want $100,000 for six months."

While I was prepared in a sense for the request, the brazenness with which he put it up to me took my breath away.

"Really, Mr. Pless," I mumbled in direct contrast to his sangfroid, "you—you surprise me."

He laughed quietly, almost reassuringly, as he leaned forward in his chair the better to study my face. "I hope you do not think that I expect you to produce so much ready money tonight, Mr. Smart. Oh, no! Any time within the next few days will be satisfactory. Take your time, sir. I appreciate that it requires time to arrange for the—"

I held up my hand with a rather lofty air. "Was it one hundred and fifty thousand that you mentioned or"—

"That was the amount," said he, a sudden glitter in his eyes.

I studied the ceiling with a calculating air. "I am in a position to command my balance in bank. He watched me closely, almost breathlessly. At last, unable to control his eagerness, he said:

"At the usual rate of interest, you understand."

"What security can you give, Mr. Pless?" I demanded in a very businesslike way.

"Oh, you Americans!" he cried, the face beaming with premature relief. "You will pin us down. I see. I do not wonder that you are so rich. I shall give you my personal note, Mr. Smart, for the amount secured by a mortgage—a supplementary mortgage—on the Chateau Tarnowny."

Tarnowny! Now I remembered everything. Tarnowny! The name struck my memory like a blow. What a stupid dolt I had been! The whole world had rung wedding bells for the marriage of the Count Maris Tarnowny, scion of one of the greatest Hungarian houses, and Alina, the nineteen-year-old daughter of Gwendolen and Jasper Titus of New York, Newport, Tuxedo, Hot Springs, Palm Beach, and so forth —Jasper Titus, the banker and railway magnate, whose name as well as his hand was to be seen in every great financial movement of the last two decades!

My pleasant little mystery had come to a sharp and rather depressing end. A joyous enthusiasm had attended me while I worked in the dark; now a dreary reality stared me in the face. The sparkle was gone.

My cogitations were brief. The count after waiting for a minute or two to let me grasp the full importance of the sacrifice he was ready to make in order to secure me against personal loss blandly announced that there were but two mortgages on the chateau.

"You wish me to accept a third mortgage on the place?" I inquired, pursing my lips.

"The chateau is worth at least a million," he said earnestly. "But why worry about that, Mr. Smart? My personal note is all that is necessary."

"Just a moment, count," I said, leaning forward in my chair. "May I inquire where and from whom you received the impression that I am a rich man?"

He laughed easily. "One who indulges a whim, Mr. Smart, is always rich. Schloss Rothhoefen condemns you to the purgatory of Croesus."

"Croesus would be a poor man in these days," said I. "If he lived in New York he would be wondering where his next meal was to come from. I am not a rich man."

He eyed me coolly. "Have you suddenly discovered the fact, sir?"

"What do you mean?"

"I suggest a way in which you can be of assistance to me, and you hesitate. How am I to take it, sir?"

His infernal air of superiority aggravated me. "You may take it just as you please, Mr. Pless."

"I beg you to remember that I am Count Tarnowny, Mr."—

I arose. "The gist of the matter is this: You want to borrow $150,000 of me. That is"—

He hastened to correct me. "I do not call it borrowing when one gives ample security for the amount involved."

"What is your idea of borrowing, may I ask?"

"Borrowing is the same thing as asking a favor, according to our conception of the transaction. I am not asking a favor of you, sir. Far from it. I am offering you an opportunity to put a certain amount of money out at a high rate of interest."

"Well, then, we'll look at it in that light. I am not in a position to invest so much money at this time."

"Suppose that I were to say that any day inside the next three or four weeks would be satisfactory to me," said he, as if he were granting me a favor. "Please be seated, Mr. Smart."

"Thank you. I fear it is impossible for me to remain."

"I shall be disappointed. However, another time if not tonight, I trust. And now to come to the point. May I depend upon you to help me at this trying period? A few thousand will be sufficient for present needs, and the balance may go over a few weeks without seriously inconveniencing me."

I actually was staggered. My choler was rising.

"I may as well tell you first as last, Count Tarnowny, that I cannot let you have the money. It is quite impossible. In the first place, I haven't the amount to spare; in the second"—

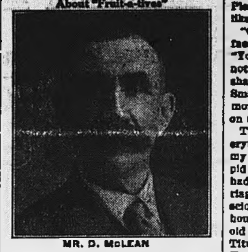
"Enough, sir," he broke in angrily. "I have committed the common error of regarding one of you as a gentleman. Dash me, if I shall ever do so again! There isn't one in the whole of the United States."

"You will do well, sir, to keep a civil tongue in your head," said I, paling with fury.

"I have nothing more to say to you, Mr. Smart," said he contemptuously. "Good night. Francois, conduct Mr. Smart to the corridor."

Strangely enough, I did not recover my sense of speech until I was well out into the corridor. Then I deliberately took a gold coin out of my pocket and pressed it into the valet's hand.

"Kindly give that to your master with my compliments," said I in a voice that was intended to reach Tarnowny's ear.



Mr. Poopendyke was waiting for me in the courtyard on my return.

"What is the matter with you?" I demanded irascibly. "What's up? What are you doing out here with a lantern?"

"I was rather cautious," he said, a note of relief in his voice. "I feared that something unexpected might have befallen you. Five minutes ago the—

"You will do well, sir, to keep a civil tongue in your head."

Mr. Pless called up on the telephone and left a message for you. It rather upset me, sir."

"He did, eh? Well, what did he say?"

"He merely commanded me to give you his compliments and to tell you to go to blazes. I told him that you would doubtless be at home a little later on and it would sound very much better if it came from him instead of from me. Whereupon he told me to accompany you, giving rather explicit directions. He appeared to be in a tremendous rage."

I laughed heartily. "I must have got under his confounded skin, after all," I said.

The countess gave a little sigh of relief when I dashed in upon her a few minutes later. She had it all out of me before I had quite recovered my breath after the climb upstairs.

We sat down at the table. "Now tell me everything all over again," she said.

CHAPTER XV.

I Am Informed That I Am In Love.

POOPENDYKE stared for a long time at the portrait of Ludwig the Red. "Isn't it odd that the countess, an American, should be descended from the old Rothhoefens? What a small world it is, after all?"

I became wary. "Nothing odd about it to me. We've all got to descend from somebody."

"I dare say. Still it is odd that she should be hiding in the castle of her ances"—

"Not at all, not at all. It just happens to be a handy place. Perfectly natural.

"Perfect rot," I added without rime or reason.

He grinned. "Nevertheless it's the general opinion that you are," said he. I sat up very straight. "What's that?"

"You're in love," said he succinctly. It was like a bomb.

"You're crazy!" I gasped.

"Don't think we're all blind, Mr. Smart."

"We?" I murmured, a curious dampness swalling me.

"That is to say, Britton, the Schnicks and myself."

"The Schnicks?" It was high time that I should laugh. "Ho, ho! The Schnicks! Good Lord, man—the Schnicks!"

"The Schnicks are tickled to death over it," said he. "And so is Britton."

Collecting all the sarcasm that I could command at the instant I inquired, "Are you, Mr. Poopendyke—are you not tickled?"

"Very," said he.

"Well, I'm not!" said I savagely. "What does all this nonsense mean? Don't be an ass, Fred."

"Perhaps you don't know it, Mr. Smart, but you are in love," said he so convincingly that I was conscious of an abrupt sinking of the heart.

"The deuce you say!" I exclaimed rather blankly.

"Oh, I've seen it coming! For that matter, so has she. It's as plain as the nose"—

I leaped to my feet, startled. "She? You don't— Has she said anything that leads you to believe— Oh, the deuce. What rot!"

"No use getting angry over it," he said consolingly. "Falling in love is the sort of thing a fellow can't help, you know. You are heels over head in love with the Countess Tarnowny and"—

"Shut up, Fred! You're going daffy from reading my books or absorbing my manuscripts or"—

"Heaven is my witness. I don't read your books, and I merely correct your manuscripts. God knows there is no romance in that! You are in love. Now, what are you going to do about it?"

"Do about it?" I demanded.

"You can't go on in this way, you know," he said relentlessly. "She won't"—

"Why, you blithering idiot," I roared, "do you know what you are saying? I'm not in love with anybody. My heart is—is— But never mind! Now, listen to me, Fred. This nonsense has got to cease. I won't have it. Why, she's already got a husband. She's had all she can stand to the way of husb"—

"Rubbish! She can stand a husband or two more, if you are going to look at it in a literal way. Besides, she hasn't a husband. She's chucked him. Good riddance, too. Now, do you imagine for a single instant that a beautiful, adorable young woman of twenty-three is going to spend the rest of her life without a man? Not much! She's free to marry again, and she will."

"Admitting that to be true, why should she marry me?"

"I didn't say she was in love with you. I said you were in love with her."

"Oh," I said, and my face fell, "I see."

He seemed to be considering something. After a few seconds he nodded his head decisively. "Yes, I am sure of it. If the right man gets her she'll make the finest, sweetest wife in the world. She's never had a chance to show what's really in her. She would be adorable, wouldn't she?"

The sudden question caught me unawares.

"She would?" I said, with conviction.

"Well," said he slowly and deliberately, "why don't you set about it, then?"

He was so ridiculous that I thought for the fun of it I'd humor him.

"Assuming that you are right in regard to my feelings toward her, Fred, what leads you to believe that I would stand a chance of winning her?" It was a silly question, but I declare I hung on his answer with a tenseness that surprised me.

"Why not? You are good looking, a gentleman, a celebrity and a man. Bless my soul, she could do worse."

"But you forget that I am—let me see—thirty-five, and she is but twenty three."

"To offset that, she has been married and unhappy. That brings her about up to your level, I should say. Her father ought to pay what he owes. He gave a million to get one husband for her. He ought to give a million to be rid of him, so that she could marry the next one without putting him to any expense whatsoever. I told her I thought it was the cheapest and quickest way out of it, and she said, 'I wonder!'"

"Have you been discussing her most sacred affairs with her, you blithering"—

"No, sir," said he, with dignity. "She has been discussing them with me."

I have no recollection of what I said as I stalked out of the room. He called out after me, somewhat pleadingly, I thought:

"Ask Britton what he has to say about it."

Things had come to a pretty pass! Couldn't a gentleman be polite and agreeable to a young and charming lady whom circumstances had thrown in his way without having his motives misconstrued by a lot of snooping, idiotic menials whose only sent in life sprung from a temperamental tendency to belittle the big things and enlarge upon the small ones?

Unexpectedly I met Britton!

"Britton, what's all this gossip I hear going the rounds of the castle behind my back?" I exclaimed.

Confound him, he looked pleased! "It's quite true, sir; quite true."

"Quite true!" I roared. "What's quite true, sir?"

"Isn't it, sir?" he asked, dismayed.

"Isn't what?"

"I mean to say, sir, isn't it true?"

"My God!" I cried, throwing up my hands in hopeless despair. "You—you—wait! I'm going to get to the bottom of this. I want the truth, Britton. Who put it into that confounded head of yours that I am—er—in love with the countess? Speak! Who did it?"

He lowered his voice, presumably because I had dropped mine to a very loud whisper. I also had glanced over both shoulders.

"Begging your pardon, sir, but I must be honest, sir. It was you as first put it into my head, sir."

"I?" My face went the color of a cardinal's cap.

(To Late for Last Week.)

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr and Mrs Wm. Kay on Tuesday of last week, when Mr Jensen entertained a large number of his friends at an oyster supper. In spite of the fact that the night was cold, those that were invited put forth every effort to be present and a very pleasant evening was spent in amusements consisting of music and games. After supper a toast was proposed to the host and everyone joined heartily in singing "For he's a jolly good fellow." Those who were fortunate enough to be present enjoyed themselves very much and unanimously vote Mr Jensen not only "A jolly good fellow" but also a man of his word in fulfilling a long standing promise.

The friends of Miss Bessie Kay took this opportunity of presenting her with a Toilet Set and a Fountain Pen before her departure for the West. Miss Kay will be missed very much among the young people here.

WOULD OBEY ORDERS

The foreman swore at Cassidy for not fully loading up his hod. The hod, he said, would hold so many bricks, and Cassidy must take a full load up the ladder every trip.

One morning the supply of bricks ran out and Cassidy, after gathering every brick in sight, found he still was short of the proper number. He yelled up to a workman on the fifth story.

"What do you want?" asked the workman.

"Throw me down wan brick," shouted Cassidy, "to make good me load."

To make friends of men show them how to make money; to make friends of women show them how to become beautiful.

NORTH KEPPEL

Miss Mary Gunson, of Coldwater, Michigan, is at home for a few days.

Owing to the severe storm last Tuesday the funeral of the late Mrs. Gunson was postponed until Thursday. Deceased was an old and highly respected resident of Keppel. leaves a family of five sons and two daughters to mourn her loss. The funeral was largely attended notwithstanding the inclement weather.

Mr. James Walker, of Owen Sound, has been stopping with Mr. and Mrs. James Litster for several days.

Weather conditions last Tuesday prevented the removal of the remains of Mr. Robert Stewart from White Cloud Island. Interment took place the following Thursday at North Keppel cemetery.

Friends of Mr. James Litster regret to learn he is suffering from a severe attack of grip and a general break down in health. His daughter, Mrs. J.S. Walker, of Owen Sound, arrived home on Sunday

Born—In North Keppel on Tuesday Jan 18th. 1916, to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Haskell, a daughter.

The Common People.

Coronets, miters, military display, the pomp of war, wide colonies and a huge empire are, in my view, all trifles, light as air and not worth considering, unless with them you can have a fair share of comfort, contentment and happiness among the great body of the people. Palaces, baronial castles, great halls, stately mansions, do not make a nation. The nation in every country dwells in the cottage, and unless the light of your constitution can shine there, unless the beauty of your legislation and the excellence of your statesmanship are impressed there on the feelings and condition of the people, rely upon it, you have yet to learn the duties of government.—John Bright.

Beating Off a Dog.

If a dog springs for a man the latter should guard his face with his arm and try to meet the animal with his forearm. With his right hand he should attempt to catch one of the animal's front paws. The paw of a bulldog is ultra sensitive. If it can be caught a vigorous squeeze will make the animal howl for mercy and retire discomfited.

Oak Wood.

The oak is a historic wood. As early as the eleventh century it became the favorite wood of civilized Europe, and specimens of carving and interior finish have come down to us from that early day, their pristine beauty enhanced by the subduing finger of time.

Giving Due Credit.

"Willie, I hope your teacher appreciates how much I teach you at home."

"That's what I keep tellin' her, ma. She said yesterday, 'I wonder where you learn your bad manners, Willie,' and I said right away, 'Ma teaches 'em to me.'"

A Wise Child.

"Johnny, do you know that your mother has been looking for you?" asked the neighbor next door.

"Sure I do," replied Johnny. "That's the reason she can't find me!"

She Was So Precise.

"Do you go in for aviation?" he asked the Boston beauty.

"No, not for aviation. One goes in for sea bathing, but for aviation one goes up."

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Hope to hear of our teacher soon recovering from the grippe.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

The high quality of Purity Flour comes from First—The selected wheat we use. Second—This wheat, milled to a rigid standard under the closest supervision of miller and chemist.

The Split Infinitive.

The split infinitive is the term used to designate the infinitive form of the verb that generally begins with the preposition "to," when separated by a qualifying adverb or phrase, as in the following: "To briefly designate," "to readily understand," "to suddenly and completely change front," "he knew not which to most admire," "to sweetly sing," "to humbly walk." This use is held by literary critics and grammatical purists to be highly improper, but it occurs abundantly in English literature, from the time of Shakespeare to the present day. Nearly every standard author is guilty of it, and it is very general in popular speech. The splitting of the infinitive is often dictated by a sense of rhythm, the placing of the qualifying adverb after the verb and before the weak adjunct or object which follows the verb resulting often in disharmony of rhythm or stress.

Fixing the Fairies.

Remnants of the cave men living in hidden places in the forests, avoiding the more civilized human beings about them, but seen occasionally by these, were probably the first of the fairies, according to A. E. Peake in a paper that appears in the report of the Prehistoric Society of East Anglia.

Long before the Danes came to the British isles Ireland was infested by a people called the Danaans, probably the earliest of the Celts or possibly antedating them. The word Danaan, according to the London Lancet, may be rendered "fairy." They were of puny stature, but their heads were as large as ours, as is proved by the skulls found in the bogs. With their little pointed caps and their retiring ways they were only vaguely known to their neighbors, and when they died out they were dimly remembered and soon became a legend.

Cairo Street Warnings.

In oriental countries the recklessness of drivers of vehicles and their disregard for foot passengers are very marked, but in Cairo they have a series of curious cries with which they warn a footman. They specify the particular part of his anatomy which is in danger, as thus: "Look out for thy left shin, O uncle!" "Boy, have a care for the little toe on thy right foot!" "O blind beggar, look out for thy staff!" And the blind beggar, feeling his way with the staff in his right hand, at once obediently turns to the left. "O Frankish woman, look out for thy left foot!" "O burden bearer, thy load is in danger!" "O water carrier, took out for the tail end of thy pigskin water bottle!"

The Wolf's Den.

One of the most grewsome among animal homes is the wolf's den. This is simply a hole dug in the side of a bank or a small natural cave, generally situated on the sunny side of a ridge and almost hidden by bushes and loose bowlders. Here the wolf lies snug. In and about his doorway lie the remains of past feasts, which, coupled with his own odor, make the wolf's den a not very inviting place. Nevertheless there is something so dread and mysterious about this soft footed marauder that it even lends a fascination to his home.

"Ough."

An exchange prints the following list of words ending in "ough" and adds the pronunciation of the more obscure words, so far as ascertainable from the dictionaries: Messrs. Gough (goff), Hough (huff) and Clough (cluff), though tough enough, thought through the day that they would visit Mr. Brough (brow), who, having a hiccough (hiccup) and a cough, lived in a clough (cloff or clow), with plenty of dough and a tame chough (chuff) kept near a plough in a rough trough, hung to a bough over a lough (loch). A slouch (sluf) of the bank into the slough (sloo) injured his thoroughbred's hough (hock).

No wonder the foreigner shudders at those four terrible letters!

Strong Even In Death.

A yew tree almost destitute of branches or bark grows abundantly in the Caucasus to a height of from fifty to sixty feet and a diameter of a little over two feet. It grows slowly, but its timber is almost indestructible except by fire. It is considered superior in durability, appearance and toughness to mahogany, which it otherwise somewhat resembles. In some large forests of this tree it is very difficult to distinguish the live trees from the dead ones, the latter being very numerous and said to stand for 100 years after death without exhibiting decay.

Base Deception.

Family Physician—I am afraid, Mrs. Gaybird, your husband cannot last much longer. The trouble with your husband, madam, is that he has overdrawn his account at the bank of vitality. Mrs. Gaybird—I felt sure he was deceiving me about something. Doctor, I give you my word, I never knew he had any account there.

John Hay on Stanton.

In "The Life and Letters of John Hay" is this plaintive note to Nicolay: "My dear Nico—Don't, in a sudden spasm of good nature, send any more people with letters to me requesting favors from Stanton. I would rather make the tour of a smallpox hospital."

The Obliging Proprietor.

"Won't you please give me an order?" pleaded the persistent drummer.

"Certainly," replied the crusty proprietor. "Get out!"

Was Willing.

Smith—You and Jones don't seem to be as friendly as you were. Does he owe you money? Brown—No, not exactly, but he wanted to.

The Gooseberry.

Gooseberry bushes were originally called gorseberry bushes, from the plants having prickles similar to those of the gorse shrub.

Discouraging.

Jester—Poor old Skinflint has his troubles! Jimson—What! Why, he's making barrels and barrels of money! Jester—I know, but the price of barrels has gone up.

Knew What His Few Days Meant.

Quackly—By the bye, have you got $10 about you that you don't need for a few days? Smackly—I have, but I might need it some time.—Exchange.

A Pretty Hot Story.

Chabert, the fire king, who was a popular favorite in London over eighty years ago, claimed to be able to swallow arsenic and other poisons with impunity. Visitors to his entertainment were requested to come provided with phosphorus, arsenic and oxalic acid, which he proceeded to consume before their eyes, taking an antidote afterward which was supposed to neutralize their effects. Then, to show that he was as impervious to heat as to poison, he would take a raw leg of lamb into an oven heated to 220 degrees and remain inside until the joint was cooked, when it was carved and handed around to the audience. The performance concluded by Chabert rubbing a red-hot shovel on his head and face and allowing any one who wished to drop molten sealing wax on his tongue and hands.—London Mail.

Eskimo Candy.

Tallow is the Eskimo's candy. It is put up in bright red packages made out of the feet of a waterfowl. The women cut off the red feet of this bird, which is called the dovekie, draw out the bones and blow up the skin so as to make pouches, which they fill with reindeer tallow for their little folk. None of the food that the Eskimos eat seems very inviting to us, but they are extremely fond of it and are very apt to overeat. It is said by explorers who have gone into Greenland that it is no uncommon sight to see an Eskimo man who has eaten an enormous meal of the raw frozen flesh of the reindeer, seal or walrus lying on his back and eating blubber until he cannot move.—Exchange.

More Than One.

The clergyman of a country village, reprehending one of his parishioners for quarreling with his wife so loudly and frequently as to be a source of perpetual disturbance to the neighborhood, in the course of his exhortation remarked that the Scriptures declared that man and wife were one.

"Aye, that may be, sir," answered Hodge, "but if you were to go by when me and my wife are at it you'd think there were twenty of us."—London Globe.

Consolation.

The mistress, not wishing to offend her cook, who had been with her but two weeks, announced in a low, well modulated voice, "I am sorry, Ellen, but the master found fault with your cooking today."

"Lor', I don't take no notice of 'im, ma'am. It's his blessed nature to find fault. Ain't he always finding fault with you?"—Argonaut.

Masonry Weights.

Granite or limestone masonry, well dressed, weighs 165 pounds per cubic foot; mortar rubble weighs 154 pounds, dry rubble 128 pounds and well dressed sandstone masonry 144 pounds.

Some Authors and Their Names.

There are authors who make the most of their names, and there are others who don't. When W. W. Jacobs was commencing his literary career and hoping to "make a name" why did he not make the best of the one he got at the font? What a splash he could have made with William Wymark Jacobs!

It is almost as bad as Gilbert's neglected name, which was Schwenck. But perhaps that was too near "swank" for a modest man. Rutherford Crockett would have served the author of "The Stickit Minister" well, but he was content with S. R. Sir Arthur Pinero's second name is Wing, Silas Hocking's is Kitto, Jerome K. Jerome's is Klapka, and Gilbert Chesterton's "K" stands for Keith. Charles Dickens was christened Charles John Huffham.

It is a remarkable fact that nearly all the greater novelists are simply styled—Henry Fielding, Jane Austen, Walter Scott, Charles Reade, George Meredith, Thomas Hardy. William Makepeace Thackeray ignored his second name.—St. James' Gazette.

What Becomes of That Cent?

A farmer comes to town with thirty apples, which he sells three for a cent, getting, of course, 10 cents for them.

Another farmer, also with thirty apples, sells them two for a cent, getting 15 cents for his. They get 25 cents in all.

The next time they come in, with thirty apples apiece, they meet at the edge of town and put their apples together, making sixty apples. One man having sold two for a cent, the other three for a cent, they decide to sell them five for 2 cents.

They do so and when they're through find out they have received but 24 cents.

The problem is, Why did they not get as much for their apples selling them five for 2 cents as they did when they sold them separately, or, what becomes of the cent?

Fire and the Lodgepole Pine.

Fire, the arch enemy of the forest, is the very life of the lodgepole pine, for cessation of fires would in time practically eliminate the species from the forest. Following a sweeping fire it is found that the lodgepole pine is the first tree at work to make good its loss. On the blackened limbs of the fire killed tree are scores of cones stuck closely to the branches. Within these cones lie fertile seeds waiting for nature to set them free. The fiery whirlwind sweeps by, and in a few hours the brown bits of tissue-like seeds silently climb out of their sheltering homes and make a flight to the earth. Being exceedingly light, thousands are sometimes blown for miles. An earth cleaned for their reception is found by the germs of new woods life.

Wiarton Seven too Fast for Owen Sound Soldiers

The game Wednesday night last between the 147th Battalion, Owen Sound and the Wiarton team was a whirlwind game from start to finish although the score 12—1 in favor of the home boys would make it appear a tame affair to those who were not present. The first fifteen minutes looked as though it was going to be a difficult job for either side to score there was close checking, good combination and hard buck checking and the puck was kept pretty well to the centre of the ice. However Allan Ashley got away and scored the first goal, and Dad Ashley poked another into the nets before the gong sounded, giving the home boys a lead of two goals.

The second period opened fast, the visitors working hard to score, but in this period, as in the first, Nimmo shut them out, and the Reds added three more to the tally. The most exciting individual rush of the whole game when Barrett took the rubber from end to end and shot. The goal keeper stopped the shot but Barrett got the puck on the rebound, took it right around the nets and scored

The third period started off with six men on each side. McDonald broke one of his skates and Kreutzweiser got hurt towards the end of the second period, so they just manned off for the rest of the game. The Owen Sound boys are a big bunch and began to loose steam, but they fought bravely on to the end and were rewarded with one lonely goal. If they fight as well when they get to the trenches as they fought for that goal, the Grey Battalion will make a name for itself. The ice was keen and it is well known that the Wiarton team are speed demons on good ice, so when the crowd got there and saw the ice it was a foregone conclusion what would happen to Owen Sound. Mathieson played a great game and "Rick" Rock, who was on the team for the first time this season, was right up to his old form and never played a better game in his life, scoring six of the twelve goals. Oliver starred for the visitors, while Kreutzweiser and Creighton showed up well, in fact they all worked hard and deserve credit for the way they played the game to a finish, even if it was a losing one for them.

W. A. McCord, of Toronto, refereed the game and gave satisfaction to all, especially so when he got mixed up in a scrimmage and piled up on the ice with two or three of the players. He is Irish though and appreciated the joke as well as the crowd did. The line up

| Wiarton | | Owen Sound |

The Owen Sound Collegiate V.S. Wiarton High School

The Owen Sound Collegiate boys were defeated to the tune of 11—2 in the Wiarton rink, on Friday evening. This was a great defeat as Owen Sound was very confident of winning. The game was good, and clean playing, very few penalties being imposed. The line up—

Owen Sound—Goal Hershy. Defence Day and Smith, Rover Eberle, Centre Pround, Wings Mitchel and Kennedy.

Wiarton—Goal Ewald, Difence Lawrence and Sinclair, Rover Sutherby, Centre Rowan, Wings Lennox and Quigley. Referee Clayton Wright. Half time score 6—1 Full time score 11-2

The hockey(O.H.A.)situation in this district is now a tie up between Wiarton, Markdale and Owen Sound In order to break the deadlock Wiarton and Markdale will play a sudden death game in Owen Sound Friday evening.

Letter From Jack Hyatt.

A letter from Lance Corporal Hyatt now in Belgium. He enlisted at Vancouver in the 29th. Batt. at the beginning of the war. He was raised in the home of W. J Rout having come to him a boy of seven years, when his parents died, and after being in Vancouver for three years was about to return home when the war broke out.

Somewhere in Belgium, Jan 16.

Dear parents,—

Received your most welcome letter, was glad to hear from you and to know you are all well.

We came out of the trenches last night for a few days rest again, which is very acceptable. It's some time since we first went in and most of us are alive yet, but it is very remarkable when there are so many deadly things flying about You wake up in your dug-out and find yourself in a pool of water once in a while, but we are tough. In answer to your questions I think there is more demand for pipes and tobacco. than for cigaretts, but we get pretty well supplied for that good old McDonald is what the Canadian boys want and can't get much of.

The Red Cross are certainly doing good work in Canada, everybody is doing their bit and we boys certainly appreciate what they are doing As for myself if I could go home tomorrow I would not go while this war is raging and I think all the Canadians have much the same feeling. Although we are all fed up with it, but we will never give in as long as there is a man left. That is the spirit of the bunch here and they go about their work happy despite the mud and slush.

You asked me for a description of the country and the people as I find them. I think it is one of the best agricultural parts of the world I have ever seen, the soil is of a marvelously rich clay loam suitable for anything, the country is rolling there are small strips of timber here and there, just enough for home convenience, and very rich in coal mines so they are well supplied in fuel. The land is farmed by a most industrious people, not a nook or cranny is left uncultivated although their system of work is altogether different from ours, yet the result is equally as good if not better. They seem to be a very hardy race of people especially the women as 75% of the work outside is done by them. You will see them out in all kinds of weather, with a gunny sack for a cape and wooden clogs for boots, and you scarcely ever see an unhealthy looking person. They are very generous hearted toward us, some of them cannot do enough for one. Although there are some pro-Germans representing themselves as Belgians, but they are few and have been found out to be Spies. The buildings are practically all made of brick and tile or thatched roofing and are very old but strong, they are mostly all two story buildings and built much the same style as the ones at home. The straw roofs is the only thing that strikes us as funny, which is an art in itself. It is also amusing the way they drive their horses, instead of using two reins they only use one straight line, and drive them by jerks. Dog-teams are used to a great extent for coasting and it is wonderful the loads they can draw. Well I could go on telling you things but it would take too much paper and time, but hope to see you all again and then explanations will be easy.

I received your Xmas parcel. I cannot express what joy the little gifts from dear Canada bring to us boys in the trenches. I am enjoying the socks sent by the ladies of Wiarton, the gift I am pleased to say I have received, with many thanks to the Red Cross workers, and am enjoying the comforts derived from good home knit socks, and as I am an Old Wiarton Boy I have a very warm spot in my heart for that part of the globe. Please thank all the ladies for their kindness and a share for all your goodness to me. I remain lovingly your Jack.

Irregularities in Albemarle.

A small typewritten notice has been posted in a few places in the township proclaiming Thursday, February 11th as Nomination Day to fill the vacancy in the Council caused by the resignation of Councillor Adams, and the Election, if any, will be held on the 17th. In this connection the wonder is why a typewritten notice should have been posted, because it is so small, insignificant and indistinct that very few would take notice of it. Nominations bills would cost about $2 50 and 15 cents in postage would send them to every part of the township. Every one who passed by would see them, and as the object of the notice is to let the people know, so that they can be present at the Nomination, the printed bill would seem to be the most desirable. Surely a full attendance at this meeting is desirable but the whole procedure is irregular. Councillor Adams has not yet resigned. It is true that he tendered his resignation. but neither the clerk nor the reeve has the power to accept the resignation, and arrange for a new election. The resignation has to be accepted by the Council and the Council has not yet met. The following from the Municipal Act is the law on this matter, so nothing can be done at Colpoys tomorrow towards filling a vacancy which as yet does not exist. However the boys will all be at Colpoys and the fun will be to find out who is responsible for the blunder. The Act says—"A member of a Council, with the consent of the majority of the members present at a meeting, entered upon the minutes of it, may resign his office and his seat in the Council".

A few years ago when Mr. John Ashcroft was reeve he had a copy of the Revised Statutes of Ontario which he kept by his side day and night. He carried it under his arm as he went to the Council, it was on the table as he ate his meals, he slept with it under his pillow. Where is the book now? It is badly needed.

If this illegally called meeting at Colpoys determines to bring out a canvidate then Samuel Adams will stand. Should he not be elected he can protest the election, but there should be no doubt of his election. His friends in every part of the township should rally to his support. The question still to be answered is why is Sam Adams not wanted in the Council?

Death of Mrs. W. J. Mason

One by one the early pioneers of this district are passing away. They came here when this country was a vast wilderness, they endured all the hardships incidental to pioneer life, and lived to see their children enjoying the advantage of which they had been deprived. About 42 years ago Mr. and Mrs. W J. Mason settled on the Oliphant road, where by industry they made for themselves a most comfortable home They were married in England and had recently landed in Canada having spent one year in Waterloo. And here the deceased lived and was most highly respected by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance She had not been well for the past year but her death was rather unexpected The deceased is survived by a husband and one son. Interment took place Tuesday in Bayview cemetery and the services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. McEwan

At Hymen's Altar

McLeod—Beattie

A very pretty wedding took place at 662 Street East. Owen Sound, when Lily Isabella, youngest daughter of the late Dr. Wm Beattie and of Mrs. Beattie, was united in marriage to Roderick James McLeod son of the late Rev. Donald McLeod and of Mrs. Leod, formerly of Prieville, now of Calgary.

Promptly at twelve o'clock, noon the bride entered the drawing-room on the arm of her brother Percy H. Beattie, to the strains of Lohengrins wedding march which was rendered by Miss Marjorie McDonald on the violin, accompanied by Miss Lily McDonald, Nieces of the bride.

The bride looked charming in a gown of embroidered net over satin, with veil and orange blossoms carring a shower bouquet of roses and lilies-of-the-valley. They were unattended and took their place in front of a bank of ferns where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Peter T. Pilkey, M.A. of Knox Church.

The groom's gift to the bride was a neck-lace of pearl set in platinum and to the violinist an emerald ring and to the pianist a ruby ring.

After the signing of the register the bride and the groom led the way to the dining-room where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served, the tables were beautifully decorated with smilaxe and white roses.

The happy couple left, amidst showers of confetti on the 3.10 train for Toronto, Buffalo and other points. The brides going away costume was a navy blue suit of gaberdine, with hat to match.

The out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. McLeod and family of Allenford Mr. and Mrs. P.H.Beattie of Port McNicoll and Dr. and Mrs. McDonald and family of Annan.

The presents were numerous and costly showing the high esteem in which the young couple were held. On their return they will reside in Owen Sound.

The Town Council

Mr Goldie Walker informed the council that he has taken over the "movie" and asked that in view of the Provincial license that the town license be remitted. The "movie" he claims is a great thing for the town and should be encouraged. However he addressed an unsympathetic audience and was told that unless this building is put in different shape, so that it is a fit and proper place to take strangers, the seating arrangements bettered, the walls and the stage, that the town will not even grant a license.

Chief Moore, of the fire brigade, who is solicitous for the welfare of his men, appeared before the council and asked for a grant towards securing a pool table, and he was given $75, the pool table to be the property of the town.

The town band which has been re-organized was given $25.

The new chief made his monthly report and during this month he has not made any arrests. Ex-chief Glover is being continued as night watchman at a salary of $30 per month.

Soldiers Worship at Baptist Church

Last Sunday morning the soldiers worshipped at the Baptist Church, and as the Rev. Mr McEwan looked upon them he said "Young men, I feel that this is the greatest moment in my life. I am addressing a number of men who are going to die for me". He then took his text from Proverbs, "My Son Give Me Thine Heart" Here are a body of men seeking the right kind of training. God wants the heart that he may train it, that He may shield it, that He may cleanse it. He told the men to rely upon God, and instanced how the sword of the Lord and of Gideon had won. It is always profitable to look to the Lord in times of personal peril or national danger.

Grey and Bruce Counties

CLIPPED FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES

Walkerton

Judge Klein addressed the County Council here last week and stronly urged that the High Constable of Bruce be compelled to reside in Walkerton, as this is the headquarters of the justice system of the county and where the leading button welder of the force should be on the job. Stationed as he is at Wiarton, the big noise in the police system is out of touch with the main works, and hence is not available when and where he is most needed. He now does practically nothing for the $100 salary he draws, for while he is supposed to take inmates to the House Refuge here he is too far away to do the work and local constables have to be employed at extra cost to the county. The Judge cited a long list of his duties and showed that a saving of about $200 could be effected yearley by the county through the residence of such an offical here. The County Council, we understand, will request High Constable Ward to move to Walkerton in the near future, that he may be the moreable to perform his duties.

A deserter from the 160th Bruce Battn. Hon was arrested by the constable at Clifford and brought on Monday morning to the Walkerton jail, where he remained until Wednesday morning, when he was ushered before Col. Weir and sentenced to nineteen days, which means that he will lose his pay for that period and must report regularly each day to the Battalion headquarters.

The marriage of Miss Vera Wesley, youngest daughter of Mr. Wm. Wesley of the Herald-Times, to Capt Arthur W. Mc Nally, Adjutant of the 160th Bruce Battalion, was solemnized in Toronto on Tuesday of last week, Rev. Bryon H. Stauffer, of the Bond Street Congregational Church, officiating. The groom is the eldest son Mr. and Mrs W J. McNally of Brant

Dr. J.S.Peed a popular Walkerton dentist, died in the Bruce County Hospital about 7 o'clock on Friday morning last, from a week's illness of pleural pneumonia. Born in Oakville about 39 years ago, the deceased moved where his parents to Toronto, where he was raised and educated. Graduating from the Toronto Dental College in 1900, he practiced for four years in that city; coming to Walkerton about twelve years ago and taking over the practice of the Dr. J. E Price, which he has successfully conducted until his death. He was married about seven years ago to Miss Edith Vogan of Walkerton, who survives him with one daughter, Edith.

The magnificent gift of $90,000 yearly for patriotic purposes as long as the war lasts, which was made by the Bruce County Council here last Thursday, is one of the greatest war-time episodes that any rural municipality has yet pulled off in Ontario. An instance of the magnitude of the gift may be learned from the fact that it exceeds by $12,000 the entire revenue raised for all county purposes in 1914, which was the opening year of the Great War. Bruce boys all over the world will feel a glow of pride when they see the way the old home county is doing "its bit" in this fight. The award includes a grant of $1500 to the Bruce Battalion for recruiting purposes, $500 to assist the 160th Band in buying instruments and $500 towards fixing up the school building at Walkerton as an Officers' Training School. The rest of money is divided as follows: $2500 to Red Cross, $1600 to Belgium Relief and the balance to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The ladies of the Presbyterian Church entertained the County Council and the Soldiers here to a magnificent spread in the basement of the Church on Thursday night when after partaking of the good things provided, a splendid program was given which included speeches from the chairman. Rev. Thos. Wilson, Judge Klein, Warden McNab, Major Moffat John Rowland, H. M. Lay, Capt. Shaw, Capt. McNally and Reeve Anderson of Lucknow, together with a recitation from Miss Marie Havill and a vocal solo from Lieut Roy Whitehead.

Mr Thos Bell who had just recovered from illness, was striken last Saturday with pneumonia and on Saturday his condition was critical, but we are pleased to report that he has been steadily improving since that time.

The formal opening of the club room in the town hall for the soldiers of the 160 Bruce Battalion was held on Friday afternoon. The ladies of the Patriotic Society have done much to make the room comfortable and attractive for the boys in khaki. The walls are decorated with flags, pennants, hunting and pictures; tables and chairs have been provided and games, papers and magazines, and some cots for the boys to rest upon. Most of the furnishings were donated by kind friends. On Friday afternoon the recruits marched in and took their seat at the tables which were decorated for the occasion, and along with some visitors were addressed by Mr J C. Eckloe on behalf of the ladies. Sandwiches, cakes and tea were then served which continued up to 6 o'clock. The collection taken by the ladies to help pay expenses amounted to $15.80

BIG MUNITION ORDER.

First Call Since Establishment of Canadian Commission Received.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—An order for eight hundred thousand eighteen-pounder shrapnel shells has just been received by the Imperial Munitions Board from the British Ministry of Munitions.

This is the first large order which has come to Canada since the present Imperial Munitions Board succeeded the old Shell Committee, the Board's energies having been directed chiefly toward hastening deliveries on orders placed some time ago. It is probable that the new orders will be allotted in the form of renewals to firms which are already engaged in the manufacture of these shells.

The munitions industry in Canada has developed a greater capacity for turning out eighteen-pounder shrapnel shells than for the manufacture of any other, and is well able to take care of the large order which has just been received.

PREPARING FOR ATTACK

Mackensen Has Established His Headquarters at Monastir.

Despatch From Rome Says Teuton Drive on Salonica is Now Imminent If It Has Not Already Begun—Artillery Duel in Progress Near Doiran—Fierce Fighting is Going on in Albania.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Field Marshal von Mackensen has assumed command of the Austro-German army destined to attack the allied expedition at Salonica. He has established his headquarters at Monastir.

Meanwhile Gen. Gallwitz has gone to Sofia, where he is inspecting the defences and entrenched camps surrounding the Bulgarian capital. He is also looking over the Bulgarian fortifications along the Danube and on the Aegean Sea. It is considered probable that Gen. Gallwitz will command the Turco-Bulgarian forces that are to co-operate with the northern armies in the drive on Salonica.

A Rome despatch says: "The attack on Salonica is believed to be imminent. New formed Bulgarian regiments, officered by Germans, are now concentrating at Xanthi and Gumudjina, on the Dedeagatch-Salonica railway in Bulgaria, while the Austrian troops are moving out of Montenegro towards Monastir, leaving less than 60,000 behind to occupy the country. The invasion of Albania will therefore probably be held in abeyance for some time.

The inauguration of an offensive movement by the German and Bulgarian forces which have been stationed along the Greek frontier is reported in a Salonica despatch to Paris.

It is said an artillery duel has been in progress for two days in the neighborhood of Doiran, and that the British heavy guns are dominating those of their adversaries.

A despatch to the Rome Idea Nazionale from Durazzo says that strong Austrian contingents are crossing the Sanjak on their way to join the forces which are to attack Salonica, and that light Austrian columns are bivouacking, without advancing, between the Rivers Matt and Ishni, in Northern Albania.

Fierce Fighting in Albania.

ROME, Feb. 7.—The situation in Albania is unchanged. A squadron of Austrian cavalry has occupied the town of Kroja, about 12 miles northeast of Durazzo, while Bulgarian irregulars are nearing Elbassan, but the Italians and the troops of Essad Pasha have as yet not come in contact with the invaders. Fierce, merciless fighting is going on in the interior of Albania between Christian and Mosiem. Albanian tribesmen and armed bands here been recruited by the Bulgarians and financed by the Austrians and Germans. These bands are now infesting central and southern Albania, massacring the inhabitants who are friendly to Essad Pasha, burning towns and villages, and looting them of all things of value, such as domestic utensils made out of copper. These things are well paid for by the invaders, who are much in need of copper. The Austro-German and Bulgarian officers are systematically organizing massacres, applying the experience acquired by them in the invasion of Serbia, which, they boast, is now practically depopulated.

During the Serbian campaign only five hundred prisoners were taken by the invaders. Of the remainder of the population the majority was massacred. Now the same fate threatens Albania unless the Albanians co-operate with the Austrian and Bulgarian armies against the Italians.

RELIEF FORCE HALTED.

Trench Operations Now Being Carried on Along Tigris.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The correspondent of the British press in Mesopotamia, telegraphing from Basra, Asiatic Turkey, under date of February 2, emphasizes the hard task of the Kut relief force. He says the climatic conditions compare with the worst experienced in France in the Winter of 1914. In few campaigns have the British and Indians been so severely tried. Lack of cover in the flat country exposes the advancing troops to rifle fire at 2,000 yards.

At the present time, owing to the recent halt, the conditions are becoming like those in France. Communicating trenches have been cut and for the moment the operations are confined to sniping and artillery fire. The Turkish official statement reads:

Irak front, near Felahie, there has been a small artillery and infantry battle. Near Kut-el-Amara there is no change in the situation."

Russian Destroyers Escape.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 7.—A Russian official statement issued Saturday night says that two Russian destroyers patrolling the southern coasts of the Black Sea came under the fire of coast batteries and were simultaneously attacked by a submarine. The destroyers, the statement says, by manoeuvering cleverly, easily repulsed the attacks and steamed out of danger.

King George Attends Requiem.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—King George Saturday made his first public appearance since he suffered his injury from an accident while reviewing the British troops in France last October. His Majesty attended a performance of Verdi's Requiem in memory of the soldiers who have fallen in the war.

Young Boy Killed.

MILVERTON, Feb. 7.—David, the eight-year-old son of Noah Schuits, of Honey Grove, five miles from Milverton, was killed at his father's farm Saturday by falling on a hay fork.

BRINGING UP GUNS.

Russians Are Beginning Another Drive on Galician Front.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—On the Galician front the Russians are bringing up large numbers of guns and huge quantities of munitions for another offensive against the Stripa, which is expected to take in the line as far as the Bessarabian frontier.

Further to the north, along the Styr, the opposing forces have shown little activity, but in the Riga district and along the Dvina to Dvinsk there have been local engagements of some severity, but without influence on the general situation.

On one section of Gen. Ivanoff's front Russian scouts discovered a system of enemy mines, connected it by wire with their own trenches and exploded it in forty minutes. Both in Galicia and Bukowina vain attempts were made by the enemy to win back craters taken from him on Thursday night.

The Germans have established a branch of the Krupp gunworks at Shavli, in Kovno, at which a large part of the male population, as well as a number of French prisoners, are forced to work according to statements made by German soldiers who have been taken prisoner by the Russians.

The movements of the German military forces in the Dvinsk region seemed to be disorganized and to lack all method, says the Russky Invalid, and this is ascribed by the newspaper to an insufficiency of German forces and to the bad state of the roads.

A despatch received here yesterday reported that 450 Germans were drowned crossing the frozen Dvina River for an attack on Dvinsk when the ice was broken by heavy Russian fire.

CURZON VISITS KING ALBERT

It is Believed to Be Answer to German Peace Offer to Belgium.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—There is much speculation here regarding the reasons underlying the visit of Earl Curzon and General Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief of the British forces in France, to Albert, King of the Belgians, which was announced by the Official Press Bureau.

Almost coincident with the official announcement comes a despatch from The Hague forwarding Berlin advices regarding negotiations said to be in progress between Germany and King Albert for the signing of a separate treaty of peace between Germany and Belgium. These negotiations, the Berlin advices are quoted as saying, have made important progress in the past ten days. In spite of denials they add, King Albert had consented to consider tentative peace proposals if such proposals contain guarantees for the complete restoration and independence of Belgium. The Dutch correspondent understands that Germany is willing to make these concessions if the negotiations can be concluded before spring. Time is made an important consideration in the discussion.

Nor is Germany unwilling to make even further concessions in order to obtain Belgian neutrality, according to the reported current opinion in Dutch diplomatic circles. Diplomats at The Hague have obtained from sources, the reliability of which they do not question, the information that Germany is willing to restore the destroyed Belgian cities and to pay a large sum of money to the Belgian Government for the further restoration of the country on the condition that the word "indemnity" shall not be used in connection with such payments.

'WARE FOUL PLAY!

British and Neutral Ships Warned by the Board of Trade.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Board of Trade has issued an official warning to ship owners and merchants of the possibility "of foul play on British and neutral ships through the machinations of enemy agents," who in numerous instances are declared to have caused fires and explosions.

The warning says that great ingenuity has been displayed in endeavoring to work damage to vessels. In one case it was found that the wood used for packing purposes had been so treated that it would burst into flame under slight friction. Ship owners are requested in the warning to satisfy themselves that no firm having enemy interests shall have anything to do with the handling of a ship or cargo in which they are interested.

A Bordeaux despatch yesterday said: "A small metal tube supposed to be a bomb has been found on the British steamship Hannington which arrived here last Friday, four laden from New York. The tube was concealed among some sacks of flour where it is thought to have been placed after the steamer left New York. An investigation is being made."

Italians Clash With Austro-Bulgars.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphs: "An Austrian report says that the Austrians and Bulgarians have effected a junction in Albania and have attacked mixed forces of Italians and Serbians, which, outnumbered, were obliged to retreat to Fieri (a little less than 12 miles due north of Avlona, the invaders' objective). It is stated that the enemy has occupied Elbassan."

Prince von Buelow Returns.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—An Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that Prince von Buelow, former German Chancellor, who went to Berlin to attend the recent session of the Prussian Herrenhaus, has returned to Lucerne. Berlin newspapers explain that the protracted stay of the Prince in Switzerland, which has given rise to reports of peace projects, is due to the ill health of the Princess.

TO INVESTIGATE FIRE

Government Provides For Appointment of Commission.

R. A. Pringle Will Be Chairman of Tribunal to Make an Exhaustive Report on the Origin of the Fire Which Destroyed the Parliament Building at Ottawa—Allen Suspect Released—Ministers Hold Accident Theory.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7.—An order-in-Council was passed Saturday providing for the appointment of a commission under the Inquiries Act to investigate the origin of the fire which destroyed the Parliament Building on Thursday night, with the death of seven persons, and all circumstances relating thereto. The inquiry will be in charge of two, or possibly three, men, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been asked to name one of the commissioners. It is understood that R. H. Pringle, K.C., ex-M.P., of Ottawa, has been nominated by the Cabinet to act on the commission.

The commission will begin work at once, and will be given a free hand to employ all means necessary to a thorough investigation. The services of the Dominion police and of any detective agency deemed of use will be utilized. The investigation will probably last several weeks, and a report to Parliament is not expected until some time next month. Meanwhile, although there are all sorts of sensational stories current as to the presence of suspicious characters about before the fire, bomb explosions during the fire, impending arrests, etc., there is as yet no official or well-authenticated evidence bearing out the theory of incendiarism, and Charles Strony, who was held at Windsor as a suspect, has been released.

Fire broke out again Saturday night in the quarters of the Speaker of the Senate, and the firemen, who thought that they had extinguished the last embers just a few hours before, were again summoned. This time the job of extinguishing was made complete.

Although the eastern block is being specially guarded at present by a company of soldiers and extra police guards, a small fire was discovered there Saturday close to the Privy Council elevator. It was promptly extinguished. It may have been due to a smoldering ember in some of the salvage brought over from the Senate side of the Parliament Buildings on the night of the fire. But Ottawa, in its excited state, sensed another enemy attack.

Meanwhile, however, no chances are being taken, and there are additional guards at the capital at all places where fires or bombs might do damage. The waterworks system and the gas plant, and Government House, as well as the departmental buildings, have been put under increased and more rigid surveillance.

CAMEROONS FIGHT ENDS.

900 Germans and 14,000 Colonial Troops Flee Into Spanish Guinea.

MADRID, Feb. 7.—Nine hundred Germans and 14,000 of their colonial troops from the German colony of the Cameroons, have crossed the border into Spanish Guinea, according to an official announcement made here yesterday. The troops have been disarmed and interned.

This is taken here to indicate that the Franco-British campaign in the Cameroons is nearing a conclusion.

The Franco-British campaign against the Cameroons, a German protectorate in western equatorial Africa, was begun in the spring of 1915. French and British official reports have told of the occupation of Ngaundere, one of the chief interior trading stations, which from its situation, climate, and the number of roads converging from it was the centre of German resistance; of the taking of Tibati, 137 miles from the Nigerian border, and the more recent capture of the towns of Daing, Meiban, Lolodorf, and the retirement of large convoys into Spanish Guinea.

GUN WORKS DESTROYED.

Huge Austrian Plant at Skoda Blown Up By Melinite.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Chronicle has the following from Milan: The Secolo says from Bucharest says that, according to information received there from a trustworthy source, a terrific explosion of melinite occurred in the famous Austrian arsenal of Skoda. Three factory buildings, including that set apart for the manufacture of the recovered 305-millimetre hydraulic guns, were blown into the air. One hundred and ninety-five employes perished in the ruins.

The Skoda works turned out the big guns that battered forts in Belgium and northern France to pieces, and helped in a large measure to give the foe the initial successes he gained over the Allied forces.

R. R. Creelman Dead.

TORONTO, Feb. 7.—Mr. Adam Rutherford Creelman, K.C., for many years a prominent lawyer in Ontario, and later counsel for the C. P. R. at Montreal, died at his home in the latter city Saturday after a prolonged illness. The late Mr. Creelman, who was also a director of the C.P.R., was in his 67th year. He was born at Richibucto, N.B., where he received his early education before he came to Toronto and became a pupil of the late Hon. Adam Crooks, Q.C. He rose rapidly in his profession, became one of the leaders of the bar in Ontario, and a member of the law firm of McCarthy, Osler, Hoskin, and Co. In 1901 Mr. Creelman was appointed general counsel for the C. P. R. at Montreal, and subsequently became a director of the company.

THE Walkerton Telescope says, W. L. Bland was here last week. He took out a captain's commission for the 160th Bruce regiment. He is a son of the late L. T. Bland, formerly M.P. and is giving up his big farm and interests over near Kincardine to go and fight for King and Country How can Britain lose when men of Bland's type come forward?

IN the death of Mr. Wm. Wesley, Walkerton, February 4th Bruce County has lost its oldest publisher and yet his age was only 62. The deceased had been connected with a number of papers viz The Old Leader, Toronto, The Collingwood Messenger, The Ridgetown Standard and The Bruce Herald and Times at the time of his death. The old publishers of the county have nearly all passed away and a much younger set have taken their places. As a publisher, he brought out every week in The Bruce Herald and Times one of the very best edited of local papers in the Province, and his work in everything was done with much care and efficiency. The Echo extends cordial sympathy to the surviving members of the family.

PREACHERS must not get too optimistic and declare every soldier who has died fighting for his country has gone to Heaven. They can scarcely quote chapter and verse for this statement. A contradictory condition arises here. The Hun who dies fighting the British has been told that Eternal Glory awaits him and the Breton who dies fighting the Hun has been assured the same thing. A British soldier who dies on the firing line to-day, dies for liberty and for practically the same reason that our Lord died for nearly two thousand years ago. This may save him, the world is not his judge, but one thing is sure and that is faith and a consistent life will not be a disadvantage.

Miss Kathleen Gregg entertained a number of her young friends on Thursday evening. About twenty guests sat down to a well filled table and enjoyed the dainty repast. The evening was spent with games and music and a very pleasant time was enjoyed

A very jolly time was spent by the soldiers and young people in the basement of the Presbyterian church Thursday evening. The choir and Bible Class had prepared a very interesting programme which was enjoyed by all. The programme consisted of, selections by the town orchestra, the soldiers gave two glees "By Order of the King" and "Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies". Pte McCallum recited and was encored three times. Pte. L. Plante sang a solo. Misses J. Lawrence and Lillian Ebert sang solos. Pte. Petter, a recitation. Programmes were made so that each soldier was introduced to the young people, during the evening. There was a "menageries" contest, Miss D. McKenzie and Pte. Vestie Hahn winning the prizes. Lovely refreshments were served, the orchestra accompanied the clatter of cups and saucers by very sweet music. The entertainment ended at the "soldiers hour" eleven o'clock and all spent a very jolly time.

Get your heavy shirts at Whit Moores and remember that those who buy woollen underwear now for next year are the ones who will profit by so doing. New goods as well as being inferior quality are simply bound to be higher. You have no one to blame but yourself next season if you have to pay a sweet price for poorer goods. There are not enough sheep in the world to supply the requirements of the armies at present engaged in the war. One reason you should buy from Whit Moore is that he has not advanced his price and you have his entire stock to select from.

Formosa Sure to Respond to Call Made For 160th

Big Patriotic Meetings in German Village in Bruce Will Have Effect

JUDGE KLEIN PLEADS CAUSE OF LIBERTY

Col. Weir Shares With Village Honor Following Signing Up of Record Number of Men

To-night a big patriotic and recruiting meeting was held in the village of Formosa. The settlers in this locality are largely Alsatians and in the village itself there is but one English inhabitant. As truly as they are German, in a much higher and truer sense are they Canadians, as stated, their young parish priest, Father Brohman, who has raised the standard of patriotism to a high level. Father Cummings, of Walkerton, in detail showed them that in no country in the world to-day have the Roman Catholics their full rights as under British rule. Protestant England to-day is fighting alongside of Catholic France, against Protestant Germany on behalf of Catholic Belgium. Were Germany to win in this war the rights of the church would be subject to the whims of the kaiser, with no security.

Judge Klein, the only judge in Canada of German birth, and a Roman Catholic outlined in detail what true loyalty meant and what the Germans of this county owed to British rule So many of the old settlers of this district had left Germany to escape oppression and had enjoyed all the privilege of British protection ever since.

Worked His Way Up

"Forty years ago to-day," said the judge, "I came to Formosa, a boy starting in life, and worked two years in the Village of Formosa and what success I have had in life I owe it to no small degree to the inspiration received while living among these old settlers, who have passed beyond, and nothing, could give me more pleasure than to see their children and grandchildren standing up for liberty and freedom.

Col. Weir stated that the militia department had congratulated him and the staff. More men had enlisted in Bruce County in the same time than in any other county in Ontario. He wished Formosa to share the credit. The battalion is up to 830.

Friend of Soldiers

John Rowland, Walkerton, who is the greatest enthusiast in the county and has spent more time and money in the interest of the comfort of the soldiers than any other resident, made a personal appeal for recruits. He had one son in the trenches and another going.

Mrs. Rowland entertained the visitors and band at a banquet in the evening.

Granny's Talk to Young Mothers

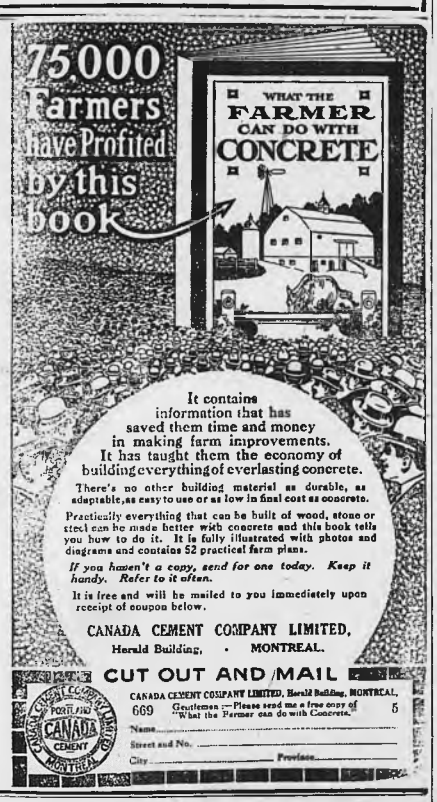
"Granny" Chamberlain "Few young mothers realize the extent to which a cold lowers the system and makes it susceptible to contagious diseases. It has been proven that the majority of diseases arise from germs, but it is not widely known that a healthy system will repel their attacks.



Mothers should never allow a cold to run for twenty-four hours without attention. If this is made a rule there will be less sickness for young mothers to worry over. A good reliable medicine for coughs, colds, croup and bronchitis should always be kept in the home where there are children. You may say that you have no confidence in cough medicines, but that is because you have never tried

This medicine is thoroughly reliable and has stood the test of nearly half a century. " No, it will not hurt the children—there is nothing in it that would even injure the baby."

Earth Exposes

Ellis Old Earth of Ours Has Had More Than One Ice Age.

Every one with intelligent interest in the history of the world on which he lives has heard of "the glacial epoch," or the ice age. The inhabitants of the northern portion of the United States have no doubt a general understanding that the gravel hills and ridges and the huge bowlders with which they are familiar are due to an irresistible invasion from Canada by "the great ice sheet" at a date just preceding that which geologists term "recent," yet many thousands of years ago.

It is, however, not strictly correct to speak of the "ice age" or the "glacial epoch," for there have been many of them. It is now known that even this latest or pleistocene glacial epoch has several important divisions, and in the Rocky mountain region it appears that important changes in the form and height of the mountains, due to a wearing down by erosion, took place between the glacial subepochs.

More than fifty years ago it was recognised by English geologists that certain masses of gravel and breccia and certain planed and grooved rock surfaces in rocks of Permian age in India indicated a glacial epoch vastly older than that of the Canadian ice sheets, but it is only within the last thirty years that geologists have learned that glacial conditions have recurred at many different times in the earth's history. The evidence of this has been found in all continents in Europe, Africa, Asia, Australia, South and North America. The formation of great ice sheets took place at different periods in the larger divisions of geologic time back to the proterozoic—that is, to the age of the oldest known sedimentary rocks, a great many million years ago.

Glass Razor Strap.

"The best razor strop I ever had was a piece of glass," said the boss barber, as he sharpened the razor with a pull in it. "An old barber gave it to me, and I tell you it worked fine. Unfortunately I let it fall and broke it, and I have never been able to get one like it. There's some kink in the grinding which I can't seem to figure out. In these days a good razor strop is a mighty hard thing to find, and I would give a good deal if I could only get that piece of ground glass back again. It sure did put a cutting edge on the razor."

No, He Had No Opinion.

"Before we take you on the jury, Mr. Smith, we must ask whether you have formed any opinion of the prisoner's guilt or innocence."

"No," said Smith grimly. "No, I ain't formed no opinion."

"And, Mr. Smith, have you or have you not any conscientious objections to capital punishment?"

"No," said Smith, more grimly still, "not in this case."—London Opinion.

Very Likely.

"Our ancestors had very few boards of health, insanity commissions and so on."

"Perhaps it is just as well. Probably they would have locked up Sir Isaac Newton, Copernicus and also Christopher Columbus."

Great Difference.

"Some say that marriage is a lottery with us."

"That's a step above the south sea islanders, where they marry a girl to the man who can offer the most cocoanuts. There it's a raffle."

Military Pensions in Servia.

Servian soldiers enjoy a pension, granted only to invalid cases. The ordinary veteran who does not suffer some injury which would render him invalid does not receive a pension, military service in Servia being compulsory. Invalid pensions in Servia are paid by the year—that is, each applicant who is granted a pension receives a certain sum each year. In case the soldier receives injuries which would render him partially invalid he receives only part of the yearly amount, most likely one-half, but in case of the soldier being totally invalid he gets the full amount.

One on the Stenographer.

The other day a little stenographer in a downtown office in Boston begged some workmen who were putting up a new telephone not to place it so high on the wall as they were doing.

"You see," she said, "I have to use it as much as any one, and I am so short that I can hardly reach it."

"Oh, well, miss," said the humorist in charge of the work, "you can raise your voice, can't you?"—Boston Transcript.

Definitions.

Miser, a man who kills two birds with one stone and then wants the stone back.

Tact, the art of saying nothing when there is nothing to be said.

Epigram, an artistic way of saying something that is not true.

Delirious.

The Wife—Oh, doctor, I think Henry is much better this morning. He took my hand just a minute ago and called me his own little tootsy wootsy. The Doctor—The case is more serious than I thought. It's a very bad sign when a patient becomes delirious.

A Difference.

"I am told that Jones is a regular knock. Is that true?"

"No; I would hardly say that. A knock, you know, never gets down to details."

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Many people think flaxseed merely wonderful stock food. It's good for human beings, too, in fact, is the most nutritious seed grown. Dr. Jackson discovered an electrical treatment for deodorizing flaxseed removing all flavor. There is no reason for not eating, and every reason why it should be used daily. 25 per cent of Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is deodorized flax seed. ### Stormy Weather Hard on Baby

The stormy, blustery weather which we have during February and March is extremely hard on children. Conditions make it necessary for the mother to keep them in the house. They are often confined to over-heated, badly ventilated rooms and catch colds which rack their whole system. To guard against this a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will not fail to break up colds and keep the health of the baby in good condition till the brighter days come along. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Oh, but Donal', it 'swerawrang to work on Sabbath ," protested the good woman ."Ye ought to use screws."

Tonic Treatment For the Stomach

The Modern Method is Most Successful in Treating Indigestion

The old-fashioned methods of treating indigestion and stomach troubles are being discarded. The trouble with the old-fashioned methods was that when the treatment was stopped the trouble returned in an aggravated form. The modern method of curing indigestion and other stomach troubles is to tone up the stomach to do nature's work. Every step toward recovery is a step gained, not to be lost again. The recovery of the appetite, the disappearance of pain, the absence of gas,—are all steps on the road to health that those who have tried the tonic treatment remember distinctly. Dr. Williams Pink Pills are a blood-builder, tonic medicine, every constituent of which is helpful in building up the digestive organs, and is therefore the very best remedy for chronic cases of stomach trouble. Thousands of cases like the following prove how successful this treatment is:—Miss Amy Browning, Cornith, Ont., says:—"I have found such great benifit from Dr. Williams Pink Pills that I would be ungrateful if I did not publically say a good word in their favour. I was badly run down and my stomach was in a very bad condition. All food distressed me, and left me disinclined to eat. I suffered from nausea and dizziness and frequent sick headaches, and this was further aggravated by pains in the back and sides. I was in this condition for several years, and although I had got medicine from several doctors it did not help me. Then I heard of Dr. Williams Pink Pills and began taking them. I am glad to say that they soon helped me, and now I as well as ever; can eat all kinds of food, with relish, and have not an ache or pain."

You can get these Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxs for $2.50 from The Dr. William Medicine Co Brockville, Ont.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1913, by George Barr McCutcheon.

"You, sir. It's as plain as the nose on your"—

"That will do, Britton," I commanded. He remained discreetly silent. "That will do, I say." I repeated somewhat testily. "Do you hear, sir?"

"Yes, sir," he responded. "That will do, you says."

"Ahem! I—ahem!"

Five minutes later I was at her door, my heart in my mouth. A sudden, inexplicable form of panic took possession of me.

After some deliberation I came to a decision. The proper thing for me to do was to show all of them that their ridiculous suspicions were wrong. Resolutely I marched downstairs.

For some two long and extremely monotonous days I toiled. I could not deny to myself that I was missing those pleasant hours with the countess. I did miss them. I missed Rosemary and Jinko and Helen Marie Louise Antoinette and Bluka.

Blatchford came to the door.

"A note for you, sir, if you please," said he. He was holding the salver almost on a level with his nose.

My heart—my incomprehensible heart—gave a leap that sent the blood rushing to my face.

"Thank you, Blatchford; that will do."

"I beg your pardon, sir, but there is to be an answer."

"Oh!" said I.

I tore open the envelope.

I managed to dash off a brief note in a fairly nonchalant manner. Blatchford almost committed the unpardonable crime of slamming the door behind him, he was in such a hurry to be off with the message.

Then I went over and stood above Mr. Poopendyke.

"Mr. Poopendyke," said I slowly, darkly, "what do you know about those violets?"

He quailed. "I hope you don't mind, Mr. Smart. It's all right. I put one of your cards in so that there couldn't be any mistake."

Halfway up the winding stairways I paused in some astonishment. It had just occurred to me that I was going up the steps two at a time and that my heart was beating like mad.

I reflected. Here was I racing along like a schoolboy, and for what? What occasion was there for such unseemly haste? In the first place, it was now but a few minutes after 11, and she had asked me for luncheon. There was no getting around that. At best luncheon was two hours off. So why was I galloping like this? The series of self inflicted questions found me utterly unprepared. I couldn't answer one of them.

After ten minutes of serious, undisturbed consideration of the matter I came to the final conclusion that it was not love, but pity, that had driven me to such abnormal activity. It was nonsense to even argue the point.

For an hour and a half by my watch, but five or six by my nerves, I paced the lonely, sequestered halls in the lower regions of the castle. Two or three times I was sure that my watch had stopped, the hands seemed so stationary. The third time I tried to wind it I broke the mainspring, but as it was nearly 1 o'clock not much harm was done.

That one little sentence, "Have you deserted me?" grew to be a voluminous indictment. I could think of nothing else. There was something ineffably sad and pathetic about it. Had she been unhappy because of my beastly behavior?

At last I approached her door. Upon my soul, my legs were trembling! I experienced a silly sensation of fear. I hesitated; then, plucking up my courage and putting all silly questions behind me, I rapped resoundingly on the door.

The excellent Hawkes opened it. I started back in dismay. He stood aside impressively.

"Mr. Smart!" he announced.

I caught sight of the countess. She was arranging some flowers on the table. Blatchford was placing the knives and forks. Helen Marie Louise Antoinette stood beside her mistress holding a box of flowers in her hands.

What was it that I had been thinking out there in those gloomy halls? That she would greet me with a pathetic, hurt look and—

"Good morning!" she cried gayly. Hurt? Pathetic? She was radiant! "So glad to see you again. Hawkes has told me how busy you've been."

"Awfully, awfully busy," I murmured. Was it relief at finding her so happy and unconcerned that swept through me? I am morally but shamelessly certain it wasn't.

"Don't you think the roses are lovely in that old silver bowl?"

"Exquisite!"

"Blatchford found it in the plate vault," she said, standing off to admire the effect. "Do you mind if I go on arranging them?" she asked, and without waiting for an answer resumed her employment.

"Bon jour, m'sieur," said Helen Marie Louise Antoinette over her mistress' shoulder. One never knows whether a French maid is polite or merely spiteful.

"It seems ages since I saw you last," said the countess in a matter of fact tone, jigging a rose into position and then standing off to study the effect, her head cocked prettily at an angle of inquiry.

It suddenly occurred to me that she had got on very well without me during the ages. The discovery irritated me. She was not behaving at all as I had expected.

"There hasn't been a great deal of news," I said.

She dropped a long stemmed rose and waited for me to pick it up.

"Thank you," she said. "Oh, did it prick you?"

"Yes," said I flatly. Then we both gave the closest attention to the end of my thumb, while I triumphantly squeezed a tiny drop of blood out of it. I sucked it. The incident was closed. She was no longer interested in the laceration.

"So you thought I had deserted you?" I said, and was a little surprised at the gruffness in my voice.

"The violets appeased me," she said, with a smile. For the first time I noticed that she was wearing a large bunch of them. "You will be bankrupt, Mr. Smart, if you keep on buying roses and violets and orchids for me."

So the roses were mine also! I shot a swift glance at the mantelpiece, irresistibly moved by some mysterious force. There were two bowls of orchids there.

"But they are lovely!" she cried, noting the expression in my face and misconstruing it. "You are an angel."

That was the last straw. "I am nothing of the sort!" I exclaimed, very hot and uncomfortable.

"You are," was her retort. "There! Isn't it a lovely centerpiece? Now, you must come and see Rosemary. She adores the new elephant you sent to her."

"Ete"— I began, blinking my eyes. "Oh—oh, yes, yes! Ha, ha! The elephant!" Good heavens! Had that idiotic Poopendyke started a menagerie in my castle?

I was vastly relieved to find that the elephant was made of felt and not too large to keep Rosemary from wielding it skillfully in an assault upon the hapless Jinko.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Count and Herr Schwartzmuller.

OUR luncheon was not as gay nor as unconventional as others that had preceded it. The countess vainly tried to make it as sprightly as its predecessors, but gave over in despair in the face of my cacklebrity. Her spirits dropped. She became strangely uneasy and, I thought, preoccupied.

"What is on your mind, countess?" I asked rather grimly, after a painful silence of some duration.

She regarded me fixedly for a moment. She seemed to be searching my thoughts. "You," she said very succinctly. "Why are you so quiet, so funereal?" I observed a faint flush of red in her cheeks and an ominous steadiness in her gaze. Was there anger also?

I apologized for my manners and assured her that my work was responsible. Would I come to see her the next day?

"But don't think of coming, Mr. Smart," she declared. "If you feel you cannot spare the time away from your work."

"My dear countess," I exclaimed, displaying a livelier interest than at any time before, "I shall be delighted to come. Permit me to add that my work may go hang."

Her face brightened. "But men must work," she objected.

"Not when women are willing to play," I said.

"Splendid!" she cried. "You are reviving. I feel better. If you are going to be nice I'll let you stay."

"Thanks. I'll do my best."

She seemed to be weighing something in her mind.

"If you don't mind what the servants are saying about us, Mr. Smart, I am quite sure I do not."

I caught my breath.

"Oh, I understand everything," she cried mischievously, before I could stammer anything in reply. "They are building a delightful romance around us. And why not? Why begrudge them the pleasure? No harm can come of it, you see."

"Certainly no harm," I floundered.

"The gossip is confined to the castle. It will not go any further. We can afford to laugh in our sleeves, can't we?"

"Ha, ha!" I laughed in a strained effort, but not into my sleeve. "I rejoice to hear you say that you don't mind. No more do I. It's rather jolly."

"Fancy any one thinking we could possibly fall in love with each other," she scoffed. Her eyes were very bright. There was a suggestion of cold water in that remark.

"Yes, just fancy," I agreed.

"Absurd!"

"But of course, as you say, if they can get any pleasure out of it why should we object?"

"Well, we are bosom friends once more, are we not? I am so relieved."

"I suppose Poopendyke told you the—the gossip."

"Oh, no! I had it from my maid. She is perfectly terrible. All French maids are. Mr. Smart. Beware of French maids! She won't have it any other way than that I am desperately in love with you. Isn't she delicious?"

"Eh?" I gasped.

"And she confides the wonderful secret to every one in the castle, from Rosemary down to Jinko."

"Then my soul!" I murmured.

"And so now they all are saying that I am in love with you," she laughed. "Isn't it perfectly ludicrous?"

"Perfectly," I said without enthusiasm. My heart sank like lead. Ludicrous? Was that the way it appeared to her? I had a little spirit left. "Quite as ludicrous as the fancy Britton has about me. He is obsessed by the idea that I am in love with you. What do you think of that?"

She started. I thought her eyes narrowed for a second. "Ridiculous," she said very simply. Then she arose abruptly. "Please ring the bell for Hawkes."

I did so. Hawkes appeared. "Clear the table, Hawkes," she said. "I want you to read all these newspaper clippings, Mr. Smart," she went on, pointing to a bundle on a chair near the window. We crossed the room. "Now that you know who I am, I insist on your reading all that the papers have been saying about me during the past five or six weeks."

I protested, but she was firm. "Every one else in the world has been reading about my affairs, so you must do likewise. No, it isn't necessary to read all of them. I will select the most lurid and the most glowing. You see there are two sides to the case. The papers that father can control are united in defending my action; the European press is just the other way. Sit down, please. I'll hand them to you."

For an hour I sat there in the window absorbing the astonishing history of the Tarnoway abduction case. I felt rather than observed the intense scrutiny with which she favored me.

At last she tossed the remainder of the bundle unread into a corner. Her face was aglow with pleasure.

"You've read both sides, and I've watched you, oh, so closely. You don't believe what the papers over here have to say. I saw the scowls when you read the translations that Mr. Poopendyke has typed for me. Now I know that you do not feel so bitterly toward me as you did at first."

I was resolved to make a last determined stand for my original convictions.

"But our own papers—the New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago journals—still voice in a way my principal contention in the matter, countess. They deplore the wretched custom among the idle but ambitious rich that made possible this whole lamentable state of affairs. I mean the custom of getting a title into the family at any cost."

"My dear Mr. Smart," she said seriously, "do you really contend that all of the conjugal unhappiness and unrest of the world is confined to the American girls who marry noblemen? Has it escaped your notice that there are thousands of unhappy marriages and equally happy divorces in America every year in which noblemen do not figure at all?"

Then suddenly she changed the subject.

"I have some pleasant news for you," she said. "My mother will be here on Thursday. You will not like her, of course, because you are already prejudiced, but I know she will like you."

"I hope she will like me," I added, feeling that it was necessary.

"She was a Collingsett, you know."

"Indeed!" The Collingsett family was one of the oldest and most exclusive in New York.

"You will like my father," she said. "He loves me more than any one else in the world—more than all the world. He would buy off the count tomorrow if I would permit him to do so. Of late I have been thinking very seriously of suggesting it to him. A million is nothing to my father."

There came a sharp rapping on the door at this instant. "Goodness! You'd think Sherlock Holmes himself was at the door!" she cried.

I went to the door.

"Can you come down at once, Mr. Smart?" Poopendyke said in a voice not meant to reach the ears of the countess.

"What's up?" I questioned sharply.

"The jig, I'm afraid," he whispered.

"Good Lord! Detectives?"

"No. Count Tarnoway and a stranger."

"Impossible!"

The countess, alarmed by our manner, quickly crossed the room.

"What is it?" she demanded.

"The count is downstairs," I said. "Don't be alarmed. Nothing can happen. You"—

She laughed. "Oh, is that all? My dear Mr. Smart, he has come to see you about the frescoes."

"But I have insulted him."

"Not permanently," she said. "I know him too well. He is like a leech. He has given you cling to relieve and therefore regret your action of the other night. Go down and see him."

Poopendyke volunteered further information. "There is also a man down there, a cheap looking person, who says he must see the Countess Tarnoway at once."

"A middle aged man with the upper button of his waistcoat off?" she asked sharply.

"I—I can't say as to the button."

"I am expecting one of my lawyers. It must be he. He was to have a button off."

"I'll look him over again," said Poopendyke.

"Do. And be careful not to let the count catch a glimpse of him. That would be fatal."

"No danger of that. He went at once to old Conrad's room."

"Good! I had a note from him this morning, Mr. Smart. He is Mr. Bangs of London."

"May I inquire, countess, how you manage to have letters delivered to you here? Isn't it extremely dangerous to have them go through the mails?"

"They are all directed to the Schenicka," she explained. "They are passed on to me. Now go and see the count. Don't lend him any money."

The count was waiting for me in the loggia.

"It is good to see you again, old fellow," he said, with an amiability that surprised me. "I was afraid you might hold a grievance against me. You Americans are queer chaps, you know."

Consummate assurance! I had not touched a drop of anything that night.

"I assure you, Count Tarnoway, the little tiff, as you are pleased to call it, was of no consequence. I had quite forgotten that it occurred. Sorry you reminded me of it."

The irony was wasted. He beamed. "My dear fellow, shall we not shake hands?"

There was something irresistibly winning about him, as I've said before. We shook hands with what seemed to be genuine fervor.

"I suppose you are wondering what brings me here," he said as we started toward the entrance to the loggia, his arm through mine. "I have not forgot a promise, Mr. Smart. You may remember that I agreed to fetch a man from Munchen to look over your fine old frescoes and to give you an estimate. Well, he is here, the very best man in Europe."

"I am sure I am greatly indebted to you, count," I said, "but after thinking it over I've"—

"Don't say that you have already engaged some one to do the work," he cried in horror. "My dear fellow, don't tell me that! You are certain to make a dreadful mistake if you listen to any one but Schwartzmuller. He is the last word in restorations. He is"—

I checked him. "I have virtually decided to let the whole matter go over until next spring. However, I shall be happy to have Mr Schwartzmuller's opinion. We may be able to plan ahead."

A look of disappointment flitted across his face. The suggestion of hard old age crept into his features for a second and then disappeared.

"Delays are dangerous," he said. "My judgment is that those gorgeous paintings will disintegrate more during the coming winter than in all the years gone by. They are at the critical stage. If not preserved now—well, I cannot bear to think of the consequences. Ah, here is Herr Schwartzmuller."

Just inside the door, we came upon a pompous yet servile German who could not by any means have been mistaken for anything but the last word in restoration.

For ten minutes I allowed them to expatiate on the perils of procrastination in the treatment of rare old canvases and pigments, and then, having formulated my plans, blandly inquired what the cost would be.

"I should say not more than 150,000 marks, perhaps less," said the expert, rolling his calculative eye upward and running it along the vast dome of the hall as if to figure it out in yards and inches.

The count was watching me with an eager light in his eyes. He looked away as I shot a quick glance at his face. The whole matter became as clear as day to me. He was to receive a handsome commission if the contract was awarded.

"Nearly $40,000, in other words," said I reflectively.

"They are worth ten times that amount, sir," said the expert gravely.

I smiled skeptically.

"Hohendahl was once offered $250,000, Mr. Smart," he said.

"Why didn't he accept it?" I asked bluntly. "He sold the whole place to me, contents included, for less than half that amount."

"It was years ago, before he was in such dire straits," he explained quickly.

A terrible suspicion entered my head. I felt myself turn cold. If the frescoes were genuine they were worth all that Schwartzmuller declared; that being the case why should Hohendahl have let them come to me for practically nothing when there were dozens of collectors who would have paid him the full price?

"As a matter of fact, Count Tarnoway," I said, resorting to unworthy means, "I have every reason to believe that Hohendahl sold the originals some time ago and sent them replaced on the ceilings by clever imitations. They are not worth the canvas they are painted on."

He started. "Impossible!" he cried sharply.

"By no means impossible," I said calmly, now sure of my ground. "To be perfectly frank with you, I've known from the beginning that they are fakes. Count Hohendahl confessed to me at the time our transaction took place that the frescoes were very recent productions. The originals, I think, are in London or New York." I saw guilt in the face of Herr Schwartzmuller. I looked straight into the German's eyes and said, "Now that I come to think of it, I am sure he mentioned the name of Schwartzmuller in connection with the"—

"It is not true! It is not true!" roared the expert without waiting for me to finish. "He lied to you! We—the great firm of Franz & Schwartzmuller—we could not be tempted with millions to do such a thing."

I went a step farther in my deductions. Somehow I had grasped the truth—this pair deliberately duped to swindle me out of $40,000. They knew the frescoes were imitations, and yet they were urging me to spend a huge sum of money in restoring canvases that had been purposely made to look old and dingy in order to deceive a more unwise purchaser than I.

"Moreover, Count Tarnoway, you are fully aware of all this."

"My dear fellow"—

"I'll not waste words. You are a scoundrel!"

He measured the distance with his eye and then sprang swiftly forward, striking blindly at my face.

I knocked him down.

Schwartzmuller was near the door, looking over his shoulder as he felt for the great brass knob.

"Mein Gott!" he bellowed.

"Stop!" I shouted. "Come back here and take this fellow away with you!"

Tarnoway was sitting up, looking about him in a dazed, bewildered manner.

At that moment Poopendyke came running down the stairs, attracted by the loud voices. He was followed closely by three or four wide eyed gitanos who were working on the second floor.

I Knocked Him Down.

"In the name of heaven, sir!"

"I've bruised my knuckles horribly," was all that I said. I seemed to be a part of a dream myself. I had never knocked a man down before in my life.

Interesting Letter from Lieut. Robt. Simmie

Bramshott Camp, Jan 20th. 1916

Editor Canadian Echo.

Dear Sir—

It is quite a difficult task to give you a description from camp life, our surroundings and impressions of England, but I will try and give you an account in a general way.

We had a very pleasant trip over and landed at Plymouth on Sunday morning 1st. of Nov. 1915. It took us considerable time to disembark and it was two o'clock before the first train pulled in, the second, which carried our company, did not leave for an hour later. I had to remain until the next morning to assist the transport officer. The public were not allowed down to the dock consequently we did not see much sign of life, but the next morning as our train passed through the city life seemed to suddenly spring from every window and doorway and we were cheered and waved as we went on our way.

It began to rain in the morning and kept it up all day which made it rather disagreeable. We passed through Exeter on our way and were there met by the mayoress Free lunches were given to the men and we were told that up to that time 800,000 lunches had been provided for troops passing through. We eventually arrived at Liphook, Hants Co. in the south of England about 7.30 p. m. It was very dark and rainy and we had a march of two miles to our camp. Our huts were already except for a thorough scrubbing and the next day was in consequence a general clean up day.

We very soon got settled and down to work. The huts the men occupy are long frame buildings accommodating about fourty men each. Our camp is a very good one. When we arrived there were only two or three battalion here but since then quite a number have arrived and now we have quite a large camp.

We are located in a particularly picturesque as well as historical part of England. Liphook, our village, boasts of having the oldest inn in England, The Royal Anchor, and immediately in front of this is a very large spreading chestnut tree and it is claimed that it is what gave Longfellow the inspiration to write his poem "The Village Blacksmith" Nearby is the old Bumshott Parish Church, the original building is still in use, although it has been enlarged the oldest portion still in good condition was built in 1230 and the remainder in the 13th century. The old quaint custom of bell ringing is still in force Right in the centre of the church the chimes are placed and six old "chapples" dressed in little white coats chime away for about half an hour before each service.

The roadways are indeed more than wonderful. Along this church road is one of the old Roman roads in perfect state of preservation It is so worn down that one almost thinks he is going through a tunnell. On each side beautiful hedges of holly and the trees almost meet over head. It is along this road that many of the old time high-way robberies occurred as it is the main road between London and Portsmouth. What strikes one most in the matter of roads is the splendid condition in which they are kept and on the other hand the apparent lack of anything pertaining to system in the laying out of same. Hardly any place through here can you find a straight roadway of more than a quarter of a mile.

Shortly after we got our new homes in shape our men were granted a six day furlough spreading over a couple of weeks so as not to have too many away at one time.

Now as to work here. Shortly after we arrived officers special courses were put on and ever since some of our officers have been taking these. They range from one week to three months in length. This of course leaves us short in our companies and those not thus engaged are kept busy. Our drills comprise platoon company and battalion drill and we have some of this each day. A great deal of stress is paid to physical training and beyond fighting and musketry occupies about two hours each day. Trench digging is carried on by companies under a special officer also bomb throwing. Ronto marches with full equipment is worked in about twice a week and night work twice. The ranges are about six miles away and the days we are shooting we have to get up at five o'clock, breakfast at 5.30 so as to leave here at six. We are there all day and return home about 6 p. m. The soup kitchens, which were given to us by Stratford, Galt and Woodstock, are much appreciated as it enables the men to have a good hot meal down there each day. A canteen of good hot stew is what a soldier enjoys if he has been out in the rain all day. I say rain because it rains here practically every day but we do not let that interfere with training.

The country and scenery are indeed beautiful but the climate is just about as bad as it is possible to imagine. We have had very few days without rain ever since we landed. In consequence many of our men have had bad colds but they are beginning to get naturalized and from now on they will be troubled less.

Last week I was fortunate in securing my furlough and seized the opportunity to visit England and Scotland. My first impression of London, Eng was one of wonderment but the most striking feature of all is "a dark London." One can read of this in the press and hear of it from friends but he must see it to realize what it means. When the lights are turned out every window in hotels, shops, clubs and residences must be shaded with heavy curtains, the trams and trains have their windows darkened and the street lights are cut to a minimun and those that remain are shaded by painting the tops and sides of them. In spite of this trafic still hustles along. There is absolutely no confusion which one from Canada must admire. When you see all the precautions that are being taken you then realize that Britain is at war. I visited Westminster Abbey, St. Pauls Cathedral. the Tower of London, Bank of England and many other points of interest. London certainly is a wonderful city but there are so many interesting places to go to that one is almost confused. It would take months to see London so you can readily understand that only in a day or so one can see but very little.

I just spent one day at Edinburgh which is a very pretty city. While there I visited Edinburgh Castle. I spent New Years Eve at Perth. New Years Eve in Scotland is a big day and I was curious to see how it was spent. I learned that towards midnight the people gather in the main street where a cross is inlaid in the pavement and and it was there the people assembled to see the old year out and the New Year in. It was sure some celebration, the enthusium of a good hockey match in Wiarton is not to be compared to it. Close to Perth is Huntingtower castle, St. Johnstons Tower, Kinnoul hill, Almond Bank and Scone palace, where the Scottish Kings were crowned. Looking south from Kinoul Hill across strench tag and stranch Erin is one of the grandest views I have seen. Lord Mansfield the present owner of Scone palace is at present in residence but the keeper allowed me to visit the palace. From there I went to Sterling and visited the castle and the fields of Bannockburn all of which were of great interest to me.

The Wiarton boys that are with the 34th. Batt. are all getting along well. I see by the papers that the boys are playing hockey again this winter and I will be glad to hear of Wiarton winning the O. H. A. championship.

Yours truly

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

The Internal Nerves

The Nerves Which Drive the Machinery of the Body—the Heart, the Lungs, the Digestive Organs.

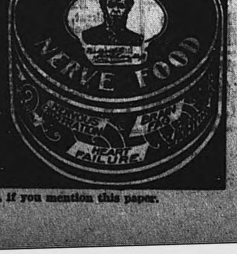
You prick your finger and know that it is the nerves which carry the painful sensation to the brain. You move your hand, and realize that the idea of movement started in your mind. But did you ever think that every beat of your heart and every breath of air taken into your lungs is dependent on a constant supply of nerve force?

It is the internal or sympathetic nerves which drive the machinery of the body, and from their derangement or exhausted condition arises weakness of the stomach, feeble action of the heart, or inactivity of liver and bowels.



When nerve force fails every organ of the body becomes more or less deranged. Indigestion, sleeplessness, headaches, irritability and nervousness are some of the first indications. You lose energy and ambition, find your work a drudgery, and grow weak and listless. As time goes on you become more and more helpless, until nervous prostration or collapse bring you to the sick bed, and long months are often necessary for the restoration of the exhausted nervous system.

Even in this extreme condition Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will usually cure if its use is persisted in, but how much wiser it is to heed the warning in the early stages and keep the nerve force at high-water mark.

No restorative has ever proven its worth in so many thousands of cases as has Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. What it has done for others it will do for you under similar conditions. By forming new, rich blood it nourishes the starved and depleted nerves back to health and vigor, and thereby overcomes the cause of weakness and diseases of the nerves.

Presentation at Purple Valley

On Friday night last week Mr. George Brain, Purple Valley, who has enlisted and is now in training at Lions Head, was presented with a wrist watch and an address by the residents of Purple Valley and McIvor. The presentation took place at the residence of Mr. W. C. Hambly. The following is the address

Private George Brain—

We the people of Purple Valley and McIvor wish to show our appreciation of your loyalty in enlisting at the present time, when Britain is in need of soldiers to fight her battles. There never has been a time since the Battle of Waterloo, when Britain had such a hard time to protect her Island and Colonies as the present This is a World's war. Britain is fighting for civil and religious liberties, and only for Britain and her Colonies, Germany would have had the whole of Europe under slavery and Canada would be one of the countries that she intended to conquer.

We wish to show our good will and respect, and sincerely hope that you may be able to fight a good fight and be spared to return in health and strength to our midst

This then is the earnest prayer of your friends and well wishers in this section.

We ask you to accept of this small token of our regard a wrist watch although you may be far away you will not be forgotten.

The following letter was received from the Reeve of Albemarle

John Tolmie Dead

The Result of a Fall

Last Wednesday evening, about 8 o'clock Mr. John Tolmie, Kincardine, Ex) M. P. for North Bruce was going down stairs to see to the furnace when he fell headfirst and struck the cement floor of the cellar which caused a fracture of the skull He lingered afterwards about 24 hours. It is a coincidence somewhat striking that he and the late Mr. Fred Harrison, Owen Sound, were the Liberal candidates for the ridings of North Bruce and North Grey in 1911, and that their death took place within a few days of each other. The late Mr. Tolmie was born at Balgowan, parish of Laggan Inverness-shire, Scotland, August 30 1845, and educated at the Balgowan School. He arrived in Canada in 1868, and spent his first sixteen years in this country on a farm. For almost thirty years he had been a salt manufacturer, being manager of the Ontario People's Salt & Soda Co Ltd in Kincardine.

The call of politics came early to Mr Tolmie, and he served first as Councillor for Bruce township for two years. Later he was Deputy Reeve of Kincardine for a year and Mayor for two years. He was first elected to the House of Commons in 1896 as an Independent Liberal candidate, and was re-elected in 1900. In the election of 1904 he was not a candidate, but in the bye election in 1906 he was returned for North Bruce by the handsome majority of 471 and re-elected in 1908, defeating Alex McNeil by 339. In 1911 he was defeated.

The news of Mr. Tolmie's death was learned with the most profound regret in all this district and particularly in North Bruce, which he represented many years and where he had so many friends. Few men have the big heart which he possessed. Defeat was something unknown to him before 1911, and after his defeat he was ready to shake hands with his opponents. And this readiness was not for effect. it was genuine. It was this big heart that won him so many friends, who to-day feel that in his death they have lost a personal friend,

The deceased, too, was a good member for North Bruce, and spared no effort to secure a just recognition of the claims of the riding to consideration at Ottawa. Although advanced in years at the earnest solicitation of his friends he had consented to become the standard bearer in the next Federal contest, but death has interposed and that big heart has gone to its reward.

The late Mr. Tolmie was twice married, and his second wife predeceased him a number of yearg ago He is survived by a son and daughter.

Fifty-seven thousand dollars worth of Bruce County 5½ per cent debentures were sold on Saturday by Warden A.E. McNab and County Treasurer Robertson to Wood, Gundy & Co. bond dealers, of Toronto, for a shade better than par. These debentures represent all the county debentures issued up to date, and constitute the balance of the Patriotic Fund of 1915. The debentures were offered in fall at 97 per cent and a little better than par was the best bid. Warden McNab and others counselled holding them and the result is that the county gets the money ½ per cent cheaper which is a big thing on the amount of money involved.

An invitation to the pastorate of Preston Methodist Church has been received by Rev D.A. Walker B.A. of this town, and is receiving his consideration. As a result, Bob, who is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland here, will return from the war zone shortly.

Owen Sound

The Anson recruiting meeting has had poor results so far, as one has been rejected and none of the others have signed up yet, and we think the rejected one should have a recognition button given him. The only man gone from Anson yet is John A Reilly the sixteen year old boy of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reilly of Anson. He is not an Anson boy having been born in the Irish Block, and of Irish and Canadian parentage.

His mother was born in Sydenham and his father in that famous province in Ireland, Ulster, which for its size has sent more fighting men in the front than any other place in the Empire. However we hope that others will follow in his lead.

So many of the local clerks have spoken to Col. McFarland regarding the formation of a clerk's platoon, that the colonel is seriously considering the advisability of authorizing the recruiting of such a unit. It is stated that many of the young men who are engaged as clerks in banks, stores and offices, would enlist if a clerk's platoon, to be composed solely of Clerkwer organized. The idea is that the platoon commander, platoon sergeants and all the non-coms and men in the platoon be clerks and it is thought that if the clerks were given an opportunity to enlist together in the platoon, many more of them would join the battalion. By joining one platoon, the men would be together all the time and the platoon would go to the front as a clerk's platoon. The platoon would be recruited from the whole county unless enough of the local clerks join to bring the platoon up to strength. It has been stated that the clerks do not make good soldier and that they are very backward in joining the colors, but the organization of a platoon composed entirely of clerks will give the clerks a chance to wipe out the stigma and show the pub ic that the clerks as a class make as good soldiers and are just as patriotic as any other class of young men in the country.

The grain market so far this week has been active. Yesterday morning oats were going at 40c an increase of two or three cent over the figures of the last week. The prices for other grains were: wheat $1.00 to $1.10; barley, 53 to 55c; peas $1.50 to $1.75; buckwheat, 65 to 75c. Hay was selling at from $14 to $15 a ton with the roadway, slightly upward. Butter was quoted at 28 to 29c per lb and eggs at 26 to 27c per dozen.

The Owen Sound monthly Horse Fair on Wednesday was a pronounced success both as regards the number of horses sold and the attendance of sellers, buyers and spectators. Farmers had been refusing to part with their horses at the prices offered about the first of the year with the expectation of getting more money later on, but seeing that that there was no appreciable increase in prices they apparently came to the conclusion that it would be better to sell than run the risk of meeting more unfavorable conditions in the Spring. About 100 horses exchanged hands at the Fair on Monday, no fewer than thirteen buyers being on hand from different parts of the province. Seventy-eight fine general purpose animals were shipped to Toronto on Tuesday morning. The prices ranged from $95.00 to as high as $160 for horses, that could be used for artillery purposes. No horses that could be used for remounts were offered. Horsemen are at a loss to know why most of the horses for British artillery purposes are being purchased in the United States while the French Government is getting its artillery supply principally from Canada. All the horses purchased here on Monday with the exception of six or eight will be shipped to France after undergoing inspection in Toronto as it has been found that this class of horses is better suited for artillery purposes.

The Acute Pain From Neuralgia

Permanently Cured Though the Use of Dr William's Pink Pills

A clever medical writer has said that "Neuralgia is a cry from the nerve for better blood". In other words, neuralgia is not a disease—it is only a symptom, but a very painful one. Neuralgia is the surest sign that your blood is weak, watery and impure, and that your nerves are literally starving. Bad blood is the one cause—rich, red blood the only cure. This gives you the real reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia. They are the only medicine that contains in correct proportions the elements needed to make rich, red blood. This new, rich blood reaches the root of the trouble, soothes the jangled nerves, drives away the nagging, stabbing pain, and braces up your health in other ways as well. In proof of these statement Mrs. A.T. Oulton Little Shemogue, N. B., says:—"A few years ago my mother was an intense sufferer from neuralgia, which was located in her face, head and shoulders. The pain, especially in her head, was intense. She doctored for some time without getting relief and there seemed to be no ceasing of the pain whatever. Instead it seemed to be extending and her whole nervous system became affected. Finally she decided to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills. After taking them for a while the pain in her head became less severe, and of course this was a great relief to her. Under the continued use of the Pills she felt herself growing better and stronger each day until she was no longer a sufferer and was completely cured, and has felt no symptoms of the trouble since;

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail post paid, at 50 c a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

And many a man who loves his sucking carries it around with him in a pocket flask.

ATTACKING WHOLE LINE

Germans on West Front Are Striving to Confuse Allies.

Most Vigorous of Teuton Assaults Are in the Champagne Region and North of Arras—Greatest Gain Has Been Made Between St. Souptet and Somme-Py—Other German Gains Lost Again in Counter-attacks.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—German attacks of varying intensity on various parts of the French and British lines from Belgium to the Vosges have made the past two days of great activity on the western front. The attacks ranged from minor encounters between reconnoitring parties armed with hand-grenades to assaults preceded by extensive artillery preparations and carried out by considerable bodies of troops. The most vigorous of these offensives were in Champagne and in the region north of Arras, where there has been almost constant fighting for days.

The greatest gain claimed by the Germans, they say was made between St. Souptet and Somme-Py. Here the German official statement claims the capture by storm of 700 yards of French positions, with 206 prisoners. The French communique issued last night says that the Germans gained a foothold in some advanced trench elements east of the road from Tahure to Somme-Py. These two references may refer to the same action.

Five separate assaults were made yesterday on the Vimy sector north of Arras. Four of the attacks failed, the Germans succeeding in the fifth attempt in penetrating the French positions west of Hill 140, but were driven out against by a counter-attack, so that the series of assaults resulted in no gain.

The German offensive extended as far north as Boesinghe, north of Ypres, where the Germans announce the capture of 40 British prisoners.

The French also made a gain in the sector to the north-east of the Butte-du-Mesnil, in Champagne, Saturday afternoon, occupying the German trenches on a front given by the French as about 300 metres (328 yards) and by the Germans as not quite 200 yards.

The attack was preceded by a heavy artillery fire, after which the French infantry column advanced, using hand grenades. The Germans made a counter-attack Saturday night, but were completely repulsed, having one officer and 64 men in the hands of the French.

The Germans, after artillery preparation, made several attempts to cross the Yser canal, near Steenstraate and Het Sas, but were repulsed. The Germans renewing their counter-attack in Champagne, penetrated a small salient between the Navarin and St. Souptet Roads, but were repulsed in attempts to retake the trenches occupied by the French Friday.

A German infantry attack was made also in the Vosges, north of Wissembach. This failed to reach the first line of the French positions.

A German attack on the British trenches near Pilckem, in Belgium, Saturday morning gave the attackers a footing in the trenches but bombing parties soon drove them out again. Two more German attacks made in the afternoon on the Pilckem Road were repulsed.

The German activity on the western front the last week has been more or less confusing. A week ago it seemed certain an offensive of great proportions would develop in the course of a few days. The intensity of the artillery fire increased rather than diminished, but it wavered little all the week. The Belgian, French, and British fronts were deluged under a rain of shells, which continued even last night. In one twenty-four hours the Belgians blocking the Yser passage between Dixmude and Nieuport withstood the effect of 20,000 high explosive shells. The bombardment of the fronts to the south was maintained in almost the same proportions.

FRENCH CRUISER SUNK.

Fears Expressed for Safety of the Amiral Charner.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—The following official statement was given out here yesterday:

"The Ministry of Marine fears for the fate of the cruiser Amiral Charner, which has been patrolling the Syrian coast. No news has been received from the cruiser since Feb. 8, when, according to a German telegram, a submarine sank a French warship."

The Amiral Charner under normal conditions carried a crew of 370. She was 347 feet long, 46 feet beam, and displaced 4,650 tons. She was armed with two 7.6-inch guns in turrets forward and aft, six 5.5-inch guns, four 9-pounders, four 3-pounders, six 1-pounders, and four torpedo tubes. She was laid down in 1891.

German Gunboat Sunk in the Congo.

HAVRE, Feb. 14.—The Belgian War Office announced last night that the German gunboat Hedwig von Wissmann was sunk in Lake Tanganyika. Two officers and 19 sailors were taken prisoner. The Belgian and British flotillas suffered no loss.

Lake Tanganyika forms the western border of German East Africa.

Fire at Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 14.—Fire broke out at 8.30 yesterday morning in the Northumberland Paper and Electric Co. building here, practically destroying the whole plant. The weather being six below zero, it was hard to fight the flames successfully, and the blaze spread with amazing rapidity. It is impossible as yet to arrive at the amount of damage done, but it is supposed to be pretty well covered by insurance.

ACTIVE AROUND ZEEBRUGGE

German Scout Vessels in North Sea. Sank British Mine Sweeper.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 14.—The Telegraaf says the German scout vessels in the North Sea are believed to have gone out of Zeebrugge, as it is known that some vessels which formerly were not at that port have been lying there under steam.

The British mine sweepers gave a good account of themselves when they were attacked, and inflicted damage on three of the enemy.

In the battle that followed the German attacks one of the British ships was separated from its companions, and has not been accounted for. It is understood that this vessel is the one which Berlin identifies as the "cruiser Arabia," stating that it was sunk by a torpedo.

The naval expert of the Daily Chronicle thinks that "the answer is to be found in the fact that the British warship Arabia is an unusual type of vessel, which might easily be mistaken for something else. She is an oil-driven vessel. A number of ships of this class began to appear on the high seas in recent years."

In addition to the British ship Arabia, another British vessel was sunk by a German torpedo boat in the North Sea, according to an official Admiralty report given out in Berlin Saturday night. The report, which is forwarded for publication by the Overseas News Agency, follows: "The Admiralty reports, relative to the sinking of the British cruiser Arabia, that a second English ship was sunk, which was hit by a torpedo. A German torpedo boat rescued the commander of the Arabia, also the surgeon, one officer, one non-commissioned officer and twenty-seven men. During the return, however, the surgeon and three men died because of long exposure in the sea."

THREATS TO ROUMANIA.

German Ambassador to Bucharest Opens Editorial Campaign.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Ungheni, on the Roumanian frontier, says:

Baron von Dem Bussche-Haddenhausen, the German Minister at Bucharest, who was entrusted with a special mission to Roumania by the German Government, has returned from Berlin, where he was received in audience by the Kaiser and has opened his campaign in his newspaper, Roumanie, by threatening Roumania.

"The Germanic powers," he says in his paper, "know how to strike swiftly and energetically."

He asks on which side Roumania is going to range herself, and declared that Germany wishes to know immediately.

The Times Bucharest correspondent, in a series of delayed despatches dated from Jan. 26 to Feb. 1, tells of purchases of wheat by the belligerent powers in Roumania. It appears from these despatches that Germany in a formal note to Roumania demanded the same rights for the purchase of cereals as accorded Great Britain, and proposed to purchase at the same price charged the British all the remaining stocks of Roumanian wheat and 10,000 wagon-loads of maize.

Roumania conceded equality of privileges, and, according to the newspapers, the Germans purchased by secret contract 400,000 tons of wheat for the purpose of preventing the realization of its sale to the British Government.

The Roumanian Government, the despatches add, will forbid the export of this wheat.

JUST A GREAT WAREHOUSE.

Holland is Overrun With German Merchants, Agents, and Spies.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The Daily Mail recently sent an investigator to Holland, as it had previously sent one to Scandinavia, to ascertain the effect of the British blockade.

This investigator contributes a three column article to The Daily Mail this morning, the gist of which is that the correspondent, after patient and careful enquiry, has come to the conclusion that Holland is being used by the Germans as a warehouse from which goods are taken daily to the German factories, cities, and troops.

He asserts that the Netherlands Overseas Trust, established under a pledge to control the imports so that Holland would import only for her own needs, has been a failure.

"The Dutch cities," he says, "are swarming with German merchants, agents, and spies, trading freely. Dutch commerce is inextricably entangled with German interests and German capital."

The correspondent supports his contentions by statistics and other evidence.

EXPLOSION IN FORT.

Russian Bombardment of Erzerum Has Marked Effect.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 14.—The advance of the Russian forces in the Caucasus continues. Yesterday's official report states that in actions near Erzerum the Czar's troops, advancing through deep snow and with the temperature sometimes 35 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, have forced almost inaccessible passes and continued to make progress. They took some dozens of officers and over 700 Turkish regulars prisoner and captured seven guns and in addition machine guns, ammunition wagons, and an ammunition store and many cattle.

A violent explosion was observed in one of the Erzerum forts after the Russian bombardment. The Turks were dislodged from a position near Ebnyzmskala (50 miles south-east of Erzerum), and the Russians occupied the town of Khopy after an engagement.

In Persia, in the region of Hamadan, the Russians occupied the town of Duletabad.

RUSSIANS DRIVE HARD

They Are Preventing Germans From Reinforcing West.

Both Czernowitz and Tarnopol are Threatened With Envelopment by the Advancing Slav Armies, Which Have Already Crossed the Dniester River—German Operations at Dvinsk Hampered by Floods.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The Russian armies along the entire front from Volhynia to Bessarabia are pursuing an offensive which if it does not result in immediate gains is expected to prevent the withdrawal of German forces from this front for service in the west. The offensive was undertaken simultaneously with the arrival of the Czar at the front.

The immediate objective of the Russians is the crossing of the Sereth, Pruth, and Dniester Rivers. Important progress has been made against Czernowitz, capital of Bukowina, and against Tarnopol, both of which are seriously threatened. The Russians have already thrown forces across the Dniester at Usciecko, this success not only aiding in the envelopment of Czernowitz, but interrupting an important line of communication between the armies of General Pflanzer and General von Bothmer.

Near Zale Szczky a Russian counter-attack routed the Austro-Hungarian troops and drove them back to a new line four miles to the rear of their former positions. The Russians also have captured important heights south-east of Isebroff, in the Stripa River district, commanding important railway connections. Both sides suffered heavily in the fighting, which resulted in the capture of this position.

The Russians are now attempting to throw large forces across the Dniester to the north-west of Czernowitz in their campaign against that city.

German efforts to continue the offensive on the Dvinsk front are hampered by the mild weather, which has threatened the German trenches in the marshy ground with inundation. French prisoners are being employed in drainage work in this region, according to German prisoners.

RAID ON ITALIAN TOWNS.

Fifteen Killed and Several Wounded by Austrian Aeroplanes.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—Austrian aeroplanes made a raid Saturday over Ravenna, and the neighboring towns of Codigoro and Bottrighe, in Northeastern Italy, near the Adriatic, A Havas despatch from Rome says fifteen persons were killed and a number of others wounded. Several women and children were injured.

A hospital and the Basilica of Sant' Apollinare at Ravenna were damaged.

The Church of Sant' Apollinare was erected in the years 535 to 538, and was consecrated in 549 by St. Maximian. It was restored in 1779, and is the largest of the basilicas still existing at Ravenna.

Zeppelin in Distress in North Sea.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail telegraphs: The Zeppelin L-20 was sighted off the west coast of Denmark, near Esbjerg (opposite the Island of France) to-day (Sunday). It tried to steer to the southward, but was unable to do so, and a strong wind drove it over the North Sea. It is stated that its engines were working irregularly.

SEEKING SEPARATE PEACE?

Rumor Regarding Bulgaria Not Believed in London.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—A report was received this afternoon from the Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company that Bulgaria is seeking a separate peace with the Allies. The despatch adds that the correspondent obtained confirmation of the report in Entente circles in the Greek capital.

The story is generally doubted here, and up to a late hour Saturday night could not be confirmed officially.

The Athens correspondent of The Daily Mail telegraphed that he had learned from two good sources that all of the Bulgarian forces are retiring from the Macedonian front and are going to the Roumanian frontier. He adds that German troops are replacing the Bulgarians in Macedonia.

This news, together with other important factors, tends to dispose of the story concerning Bulgaria's alleged overtures for a separate peace.

Germany Disclaims Outrage.

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—The charge that a German agent was responsible for the fire that destroyed the Canadian Parliament Buildings at Ottawa, is utterly false, the North German Gazette, official organ of the German Government, declared yesterday.

The paper added that the destruction of the buildings by such means would have been a "detestable and nonsensical crime."

Still Arming Vessels.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Passengersteamers of the Sicula Americana, an Italian line, are to be equipped with guns for defence. This fact was made known yesterday on the arrival of the liner San Giovanni. It is looked upon as Italy's answer to the new submarine war zone announcement of the Austrian and German Governments.

Distilleries as Munition Factories.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The Daily Chronicle yesterday stated that the Government will immediately requisition all the large whiskey distilleries in the country for use as munitions factories.

The Chronicle adds that the Government intends to prohibit the importation of barley for distilling purposes.

Makes Delightful Porridge

Many women who have purchased a package of Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal disregarded instructions to make the porridge without stirring. They made a poultice instead of a delightful porridge. The flax oil in Roman Meal has been changed into a tasteless and odorless resin by driving oxygen out of it by electricity. If stirred while hot this rieing again takes up oxygen from the air, becoming linseed oil, and making the porridge taste of linseed. The family will not eat it, and are deprived of the very best food on earth, and the most delicious if made properly. In justice to your family try it again and make the porridge as directed on the package. At grocers' 10 and 25 cents a package.

Have You Sent You Renewal Yet?

There are still some readers of The Echo who have not sent in their renewal subscriptions for 1916. We know that they intended to do so, and that the very smallness of the amount involved is just the thing responsible for it being overlooked. If they knew what a convenience it is to the publishers to have all renewals promptly, and what pleasure it gives the editor to see that his work is appreciated, they would certainly make a point of remitting by the earliest possible mail. The Canadian Echo is giving its readers big value for their money. Nearly all the local papers are now $1.50 per year, and while The Echo remains at $1, it must insist upon the payments being in advance.

Sore Throat

"You may not look upon it seriously, but a sore throat indicates a weakness in the bronchial tubes. If neglected it may soon develop into some chronic complaint.

People who are troubled in this way are most susceptible to influenza, contract pneumonia readily, and fall easy victims to consumption.

To remove this irritation, soothe and heal the inflamed membrane, there is nothing equal to

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

It gives tone to the weakened tissues of the throat, strengthens the bronchial tubes, and at the same time builds up the system. ## A Plea For Knitters

(By a Sock-Fiend)

When my work in the office is over
With a feeling related to glee.
Lock up my desk and wend homewards,
Where mother is waiting for me.
And then when our supper is over.
Beside the grate-fire we sit,
Each busy with wool and with needles,
And we knit and we knit and we knit.

The play has for me no attractions,
And how can I trip through the dance
When my thoughts are constantly flying
To my brave laddie "Somewhere in France"?
And I fancy I hear his voice calling,
'Mid the booming of murderous guns:
"Little girl, keep the home fires burning,
For the chaps who are facing the Huns."

Sometimes folks come over to our house
And my hubby displeases them so
That it's "Do stop that tiresome knitting,
It gets on my nerves, don't you know
But not till the boys in the trenches
Have no longer reason to fight,
Will I give up my hobby of knitting—
Now, won't you agree that I am right?

Embroidery's all right on occasion,
And crochet-work quite a fine art;
But in times of such imminent peril,
For that stuff I haven't the heart.
And there's many a girl in Wiarton
(Tho I don't want to give any knocks)
Who is spoiling good eyesight on doilies,
When she ought to be knitting warm socks,

Mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts
If you don't want the Huns to hold sway,
Forget the Pink teas and receptions,
They can bide a less perilous day.
Forget "bridge" was ever invented—
Get busy and learn how to knit—
And we'll all earn a share in the victory,
By faithfully doing our bit.

Keep Little Ones Well in Winter

Winter is a dangerous season for the little ones. The days are so changeable—one bright; the next cold and stormy, that the mother is afraid to take the children out for the fresh air and exercise they need so much. In consequence they are often cooped up in overheated, badly ventilated rooms and are often seized with colds or grippe. What is needed to keep the little ones well is Baby's Own Tablets. They will regulate the stomach and bowels and drive out colds and by their use the baby will be able to get over the winter season in perfect safety. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Co., Brockville, Ont.

Writer Visits St. Mihiel Salient

(Mail and Empire)

Everyone in the world who reads a newspaper has heard over and over again of the St. Mihiel salient, and a good description of this famous battle line is given by Richard Harding Davis, who is now in France as a representative of the New York Times. The town of St. Mihiel is slightly in advance of the lines of the German army commanded by the Crown Prince, but why the Germans should think it so important Mr. Davis cannot understand. He write:

"You expected to see an isolated hill, a promontory, some position of such strategic value as would explain why for St. Mihiel the lives of thousands of Germans had been thrown like dice upon a board. But except for the obstinacy of the German mind, or upon the part of the Crown Prince, the lack of it. I could find no explanation. Why the Germans wants to hold St. Mihiel, why he ever tried to hold it why if it so pleases him he should not continue to hold it until his whole line is driven across the border, is difficult to understand.

Of No Strategic Importance

For him it is certainly an expensive position. It lengthens his lines of communication and increases his need of transport. It eats up men, eats up rations, eats up priceless ammunition, and it leads to nowhere, outflanks no position, threatens no one. It is like an ill-mannered boy sticking out his tongue, and as ineffective. The physical aspect of St. Mihiel is a broad sweep of meadow land cut in half by the Meuse flooding her banks and the houses of the Ferme Mont Mose. On each side of the salient are the French. Across the battleground of St. Mihiel I could see their trenches facing those in which we stood. For, if St. Mihiel, instead of having the line of the enemy only in front, the German has it facing him and on both flanks flanking him as military strategist but merely as a perimeter, but if any German commander wants that kind of a position I would certainly make him a present of it."

Gas Attacks at Night

At St. Mihiel, Mr. Davis learned something new about gas attacks. He found out that the Germans now like to launch them at night. They know that the masks with which the French and British troops are equipped will prevent the gas from doing any damage, and that if the clouds are sent rolling toward the trenches in daytime, the men have enough time to snap on their protectors. At night, however, it is sometimes possible for the poison to flow into the French trenches before it is discovered, and if the men are not prepared they die almost instantly. The case was mentioned of a French officer, who, two hours after a gas attack descended to his shelter to get his field glasses. He went without his respirator but as some of the gas still lurked underground, he was killed before help could reach him. The news was flashed along the 500-mile front, and now after an attack the underground shelters are flooded by counter-irritants, which nullify the effect of the gas before the men are permitted to re-enter them.

Gallant French Troops

Speaking of the French soldiers who inhabit the chalk pits opposite St. Mihiel, Mr. Davis writes: "I have never seen better discipline or better spirit. There was not a single outside element to aid discipline or inspire morale. It had all come from within. It had all to spring from the men themselves and from the example set by their officers. The enemy fought them, the elements fought against them, the place itself was as cheerful as a crutch. The easy climbed from their feet to their thighs, was ground into their uniforms, clung to their hands and hair. The rain chilled them, the wind, cold, damp, and harsh, stabbed through their great coats. Their outlook was upon graves, their resting place dark caverns, at which even a wolf would look with suspicion. And yet they were all smiling, eager, alert. In the whole command we saw not one sullen or wistful face. It is an old saying, "So the Colonel so the regiment." But the spirit I saw on the heights of the Meuse is true not only of that Colonel and of that regiment, but of the whole 500 miles of trenches and of all France."

How Generals Fight

He was deeply impressed by the General of the division, who had under him 170,000 men and fifty miles of trenches. Outside his headquarters there were no gendarmes, no sentinels, panting automobiles or foam-flecked horses. He dwelt in a quiet chateau, and looked just like a gentleman of culture who had returned from a walk round his estate. His courtesy was undisturbed, his mind tranquil. Every day he visits some of the trenches, for as a brother General said some time before, when remonstrated with for appearing in the front line trenches, "My men like to see me here". A moment later he was killed, but his example was not forgotten, and perhaps he did as much for France as though he had lived. The headquarters, one nurse, is connected with the battle-front by means of telephone wires. Its chief equipment seems to be maps. On these maps, as though on a checker-board the general makes his moves, but once the war council is ended and the orders given he goes calmly to the front to share the dangers of his men. So the French are ably led. "Our Generals do not send us where they will not go themselves"

Re-Elected by Acclamation

Last Thursday was Nomination day at Colpoys to put a candidate in the field for the council, the vacancy having been caused by the resignation of Mr. Samuel Adams, who had been obliged to resign, or become disqualified. The nomination proceedings were not altogether a love past. There had been too much firing from the trenches, for one side to call the other side "brother" but everything passed off O. K. and the casualty list was nil. There were a number nominated but everyone withdrew in favour of Samuel Adams, who was handed back his with all the honour of office.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1911, by George Barr McCutcheon.

Tarnoway struggled to his feet and faced me, quivering with rage. I was dumfounded to see that he was not covered with blood. But he was of a light, yellowish green. I could scarcely believe my eyes.

"You shall pay for this!" he cried. The tears rushed to his eyes. "Coward, beast, to strike a defenseless man!"

His hand went swiftly to his breast pocket, and an instant later a small revolver flashed into view. It was then that I did another strange and incomprehensible thing. With the utmost coolness I stepped forward and wrested it from his hand. I say strange and incomprehensible for the reason that he was pointing it directly at my breast and yet I had not the slightest sensation of fear. He could have shot me like a dog. I never even thought of it.

"None of that!" I cried sharply. "Now, will you be good enough to get out of this house and stay out?"

"My seconds will call on you"—

"And they will receive just what you have received. If you or any of your friends presume to trespass on the privacy of these grounds of mine I'll kick the whole lot of you into the Danube. Hawkes, either show or lead Count Tarnoway to the gates. As for you, Mr. Schwartzmuller, I shall expose"—

But the last word in restorations had departed.

CHAPTER XVII.

I Am Forced Into Being a Hero.

SITTING alone in my study late in the afternoon smoking a solitary pipe of peace, I remembered Mr. Bangs, the lawyer, the man with the top button off. What had become of him? His presence or, more accurately, his absence suddenly loomed up before me as the forerunner of an unwelcome invasion of my preserves. He was no doubt a sort of advance agent for the Titus family and its immediate ramifications.

Just as I was on the point of starting out to make inquiries concerning him there came to my ears the sound of tapping on the back of Red Ludwig's portrait.

I rushed over and rapped resounding by upon Ludwig's pudgy knee. The next instant there was a click, and then the secret door swung open, revealing the eager, concerned face of my neighbor.

"What has happened?" she cried.

I lifted her out of the frame. Her gaze fell upon the bandaged fist.

"Mr. Bangs spoke of a pistol. Don't tell me that he—he shot you!"

I held up my swollen hand rather proudly. It smelled vilely of arnica.

"This wound was self inflicted, my dear countess," I said, thrilled to her expression of concern. "I had the exquisite pleasure—and pain—of knocking your former husband down."

"Oh, splendid!" she cried, her eyes gleaming with excitement. "Mr. Bangs was rather hazy about it, and he would not let me risk telephoning. You knocked Maria down?"

"Emphatically," said I.

She mused. "I think it is the first time it has ever happened to him. How—how did he like it?"

"It appeared to prostrate him."

She smiled understandingly. "I am glad you did it, Mr. Smart."

"If I remember correctly, you once said that he had struck you, countess."

Her face flushed. "Yes, on three separate occasions he struck me in the face with his open hand. I—I testified to that effect at the trial. Every one seemed to look upon it as a joke. He swore that they were—were love pats."

"I hope his lack of discrimination will not lead him to believe that I was delivering a love pat," said I grimly.

"Now tell me everything that happened," she said, seating herself in my big armchair. Her feet failed to touch the floor.

When I came to that part of the story where I accused Tarnoway of duplicity in connection with the frescoes she betrayed intense excitement.

"Of course it was all a bluff on my part," I explained.

"But you were nearer the truth than you thought," she said, compressing her lips. After a moment she went on: "Count Hohendahl sold the originals over three years ago. I was here with Maria at the time of the transaction and when the paintings were removed. Maria acted as an intermediary in the deal. Hohendahl received $200,000 for the paintings, but they were worth it. I have reason to believe that Maria had a fourth of the amount for his commission. So, you see, you were right in your surmise."

"The infernal rascal! Where are the originals, countess?"

"They are in my father's villa at Newport," she said. "I intended speaking of this to you before, but I was afraid your pride would be hurt. Of course I should have spoken if it came to the point where you really considered having those forgeries removed."

"He will challenge you," she went on nervously. "He has fought three duels. He is not a physical coward." Her dark eyes were full of dread.

I hesitated. "Would you be vitally interested in the outcome of such an affair?" I asked. "I mean on Rosemary's account. He—he is her father, you see. It would mean"—

A slow flush mounted to her brow. "That is precisely what I was thinking, Mr. Smart. It would be—unspeakably dreadful."

I stood over her. My heart was pounding heavily. She must have seen the peril that lay in my eyes, for she suddenly slipped out of the chair and faced me, the flush dying in her cheek, leaving it as pale as ivory.

"You must not say anything more, Mr. Smart," she said gently.

A bitter smile came to my lips, and I drew back with a sickening sense of realization. There was nothing more to be said. But I now thoroughly understood one thing—I was in love with her!

I was something of a philosopher. I submit that my attitude at the time of my defeat at the hands of the jeweler's clerk proves the point conclusively. Quite before I knew it I was myself again, a steady, self reliant person who could make the best of a situation, who could take his medicine like a man.

She was speaking of the buttonless lawyer, Mr. Bangs. "He is waiting to see you this evening, Mr. Smart, to discuss ways and means of getting my mother and brothers into the castle without discovery by the spies who are undoubtedly watching their every move."

I drew in another long, deep breath. "It seems to me that the thing cannot be done. The risk is tremendous. Why not head her off?"

"Head her off? You do not know my mother, Mr. Smart. She has made up her mind that her place is here with me, and there isn't anything in the world that can head her off, as you say."

"But surely you see the danger?"

"I do. I have tried to stop her. Mr. Bangs has tried to stop her. So has father. But she is coming. We must arrange something."

I was pacing the floor in front of her. She had resumed her place in the chair.

"My deepest regret, countess, lies in the fact that our little visits will be—well, at an end. Our delightful little suppers and"—

"Oh, but think of the comfort it will be to you—not having me on your mind all of the time! I shall not be lonesome; I shall not be afraid; I shall not be forever annoying you with selfish demands upon your good nature. You will have time to write without interruption. It will be for the best."

"No," said I positively. "They were jolly parties, and I shall miss them."

She looked away quickly. "And if all goes well I shall soon be safely on my way to America. Then you will be rid of me completely."

I was startled. "You mean that there is a plan afoot to—to smuggle you out of the country?"

"Yes. And I fear I shall have to trouble you again when it comes to that. You must help me, Mr. Smart."

I nodded slowly. Help her to get away! I hadn't thought of that lately. The prospect left me rather cold and sick.

"I'll do all that I can, countess."

She smiled faintly, but I was certain that I detected a confession—a rather abject challenge in her eyes. "You will come to see me in New York, of course."

I shook my head. "I am afraid we are counting our chickens before they're hatched. One or the other of us may be in jail for the next few years."

"Heavens!"

"But I'll come to see you in New York if you'll let me," I cried, trying to repair the damage I had done. "I was jesting when I spoke of jail."

Her brow was puckered in thought. "It has just occurred to me, my dear friend, that even if I do get safely away you will be left here to face the consequences. When it becomes known that you sheltered me the authorities may make it extremely uncomfortable for you."

"I'm not worrying about that."

"Just the same, it is something to worry about," she said seriously. "Now, here is what I have had in mind for a long time. Why don't you come with me when I leave? That will be the safest plan."

"You are not in earnest!"

"Assuredly. The plan is something like this: I am to be taken by slow stages overland to a small Mediterranean port. One of a half dozen American yachts now cruising the sea will be ready to pick me up. Doesn't it seem simple?"

"It seems simple enough," said I. "But there are a lot of 'ifs' between here and the little port you hope to reach. It will not be an easy matter to manage the successful flight of a party as large as yours will be."

"Oh," she cried, "I shall be quite alone, except for Rosemary and Blake—and Mr. Bangs."

"But your mother? You can't leave her here."

"You will have to smuggle her out of the castle a day or two in advance. It is all thought out, Mr. Smart."

"By Jove!" I exclaimed, with more irascibility than I intended to show. "If I succeed in doing all that is expected of me, I certainly will be entitled to more than an invitation to come and see you in New York."

She arose and laid her fingers upon my bandaged hand. The reckless light had died out of her eyes.

"I have thought that out, too, Mr. Smart," she said quietly. "And now, goodby. You will come up to see Mr Bangs tonight?"

Considerably mystified by her remark, I said I would come, and then assisted her through the opening in the wall. She smiled back at me as the portrait swung into place.

* * * * * * *

Bangs was a shrewd little Englishman. As I shook hands with him—using my left hand with a superfluous apology—I glanced at the top of his waistcoat. There was no button missing.

"The countess sewed it on for me," he said drily, reading my thoughts.

I stayed late with them, discussing plans. Mrs. Titus and her sons were to enter the castle under cover of night, and I was to meet them in an automobile at a town some fifteen kilometers away, where they would leave the train while their watchers were asleep, and bring them overland to Schloss Rothhoefen. They would be accompanied by a single lady's maid and no luggage. A chartered motorboat would meet us up the river a few miles, and—well, it looked very simple! All that was required of me was a willingness to address her as "mother" and her sons as "brothers" in case there were any questions asked.

This was Tuesday. They were coming on Thursday, and the train reached the station mentioned at half past 12 at night. So you will see it was a jolly arrangement.

As we said good night to the countess on the little landing at the top of the stairs she took my bandaged paw between her two little hands and said:

"You will soon be rid of me forever, Mr. Smart. Will you bear with me patiently for a little while longer?" She seemed strangely subdued.

"I can bear with you much easier than I can bear the thought of being rid of you," I said in a very low voice. She pressed my clumsy hand fervently, and I felt no pain.

"You have been too good to me," she said in a very small voice. "Some day, when I am out of all this trouble, I may be able to tell you how much I appreciate all you have done for me."

An almost irresistible—I was about to say ungovernable—impulse to seize her in my arms came over me, but I conquered it and rushed after Mr. Bangs as blind as a bat and reeling for a dozen steps or more. It was a most extraordinary feeling.

Bangs was chattering in his glib English fashion as we descended to my study, but I did not hear half that he said.

One remark of his brought me rather sharply to my senses.

"If all goes well," he was saying, "she should be safely away from here on the 14th. That leaves less than ten days more, sir, under your hospitable roof."

"Less than ten days," I repeated. "This was the 5th of the month. "If all goes well. Less than ten days."

Again I passed a sleepless night.

She came to visit me at 12 o'clock the next day. I was alone in the study, Poopendyke was showing Mr. Bangs over the castle.

"I came to dress your hand for you," she said as I helped her down from Red Ludwig's frame.

Now, I have neglected to mention that the back of my hand was swollen to enormous proportions, an unlovely thing.

"Thank you," I said, shaking my head. "but it is quite all right. Britton attended to it this morning. It is good of you to think about it, countess."

"You will never let me do anything for you," she said. Her eyes were velvety. "It isn't fair. I have exacted so much from you, and"—

"And I have been most brutal and unfeeling in many of the things I have said to you," said I desperately. "I am ashamed of the many wounds I have given you. My state of repentance allows you to exact whatsoever you will of me, and when all is said and done I shall still be your debtor. Can you, will you pardon the coarse opinions of a conceited ass? I assure you I am not the man I was when you first encountered me."

She smiled. "For that matter, I am not the same woman I was, Mr. Smart. You have taught me three things, one of which I may mention—the subjection of self. That, with the other two, has made a new Aline Titus of me. I hope you may be pleased with the transfiguration."

"I wish you were Aline Titus," I said, struck by the idea.

"You may at least be sure that I shall not remain the Countess Tarnoway long, Mr. Smart," she said, with a very puzzling expression in her eyes.

My heart sank. "But I remember hearing you say not so very long ago that you would never marry again," I railed.

She regarded me rather oddly for a moment. "I am very, very glad that you are such a steady, sensible, practical man. A vapid, impressionable youth, during this season of prophinquity, might have been so foolish as to fall in love with me, and that would have been too bad."

I think I glared at her. "Then—then, you are going to marry some one?"

She waited a moment, looking straight into my eyes. "Yes," she said, and a delicate pink stole into her cheek, "I am going to marry some one."

I muttered something about congratulating a lucky dog, but it was all very hazy to me.

"Don't congratulate him yet," she cried, the flush deepening. "I may be a very, very great disappointment to him and a never ending nuisance."

"I'm sure you will—will be all right," I floundered. Then I resorted to gaiety. "You see, I've spent a lot of time trying to—to make another woman of you, and so I'm confident he'll find you quite satisfactory."

She laughed gaily. "What a goose you are!" she cried.

I flushed painfully, for, I give you my word, it hurt to have her laugh at me. She sobered at once.

"Forgive me," she said very prettily, and I forgave her. "Do you know we've never given the buried treasure another thought?" she went on, abruptly changing the subject. "Are we not to go searching the st?"

"But it isn't there," said I, steeling my heart against the longing that tried to creep into it. "It's all balderdash."

She pouted her warm red lips. "Have you lost interest in it so soon?"

"Of course, I'll go any time you say," said I, lifelessly. "It will be a lark, at all events."

"Then we will go this very afternoon," she said, with enthusiasm.

My ridiculous heart gave a great leap. "This very afternoon," I said, managing my voice very well.

She arose. "Now I must scurry away. It would not do for Mr. Bangs to find me here with you. He would be shocked."

I walked beside her to the chair that stood below the portrait of Ludwig the Red and took her hand to assist her in stepping upon it.

"I sincerely hope this chap you're going to marry, countess, may be the best fellow in the world," said I, still clasping her hand.

She had one foot on the chair as she half turned to face me.

"He is the best fellow in the world," she said.

I gulped. "I can't tell you how happy I shall be if you—if you find real

"I want to be happy! I want to be loved!"

happiness. You deserve happiness—and love."

She gripped my hand fiercely. "I want to be happy! I want to be loved! Oh, I want to be loved!" she cried, so passionately that I turned away, unwilling to be a witness to this outburst of feeling on her part. She stepped her hand out of mine and a second later was through the frame. I had a fleeting glimpse of a calm, adorable smile. "Goodby!" she called back in a voice that seemed strangely choked. The spring in the gold mirror clicked. A draft of air struck me in the face. She was gone.

"What an infernal fool you're com-ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong and active.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

I said to myself as I stood there staring at the black hole in the wall. Then I gently, even caressingly, swung old Ludwig the Red into place. There was another click. The incident was closed.

A very few words are sufficient to cover the expedition in quest of the legendary treasures of the long dead barons. Mr. Bangs accompanied us. Britton carried a lantern, and the three Schmicks went along as guides. We found nothing but cobwebs.

"Conrad," said I as we emerged from the last of the underground chambers, "tell me the truth. Was there ever such a thing as buried treasure in this abominable hole?"

"Yes, mein herr," he replied, with an apologetic grin, "but I think it was discovered three years ago by Count Hohendahl and Count Tarnoway."

We stared at him. "The deuce you say!" cried I, with a quick glance at the countess. She appeared to be as much surprised as I.

"They searched for a month," explained the old man guiltily. "They found something in the walls of the second tier. I cannot my what it was, but they were very, very happy, my lady." He now addressed her. "It was at the time they went away and did not return for three weeks, if you remember the time."

"Remember it!" she cried bitterly. "Too well, Conrad."

She afterward invited Mr. Bangs and me to dine with her that evening. She also asked Mr. Poopendyke later on.

Poopendyke! An amazing, improbable idea entered my head. Poopendyke!

CHAPTER XVIII.

I Traverse the Night.

THE next day I was very busy, preparing for the journey by motor to the small station down the line where I was to meet Mrs. Titus and her sons. It seemed to me that every one who knew anything whatever about the arrangements went out of his way to fill my already rattled brained head with advice.

Just before leaving the castle for the ferry trip across the river that evening I was considerably surprised to have at least a dozen brand new trunks delivered at my landing stage. It is needless to say that they turned out to be the property of Mrs. Titus, expressed by grande vitesse from some vague city in the north of Germany. They all bore the name "Smart, U. S. A.," painted in large white letters on each end, and I was given to understand that they belonged to my own dear mother, who at that moment, I am convinced, was sitting down to luncheon in the Adirondacks, provided her habits were as regular as I remembered them to be.

I set forth with Britton at 9 o'clock in a drizzling rain. At half past 11 o'clock we were skidding over the cobblestones of the darkest streets I have ever known, careening like a drunken sailor, but not half as surely, headed for the Staatsbahnhof, to which we had been directed by an object in a raincoat who must have been a policeman, but who looked more like a hydrant. It was pouring pitchforks.

"Britton," said I wearily, "have you ever seen anything like it?"

"Once before, sir," said he. "Niagara falls, sir."

At half past 12 the train from Munich drew up at the station, panted awhile in evident disdain and then moved on.

A single passenger alighted—a man with a base viol. There was no sign of the Tituses!

We made a careful and extensive search of the station, the platform and even the surrounding neighborhood, but it was quite evident that they had not left the train. Here was a pretty pass! Britton, however, had the rather preposterous idea that there might be another train a little later on. It did not seem at all likely, but we made inquiries of the station agent. To my surprise—and to Britton's infernal British delight—there was a fast train, with connections from the north, arriving in half an hour. It was, however, late, owing to the storm.

Just ten minutes before 3 the obliging guard came in and roused me from a mild sleep.

"The train is coming, mein herr."

"Thank goodness!"

"But I neglected to mention that it is an express and never stops here."

My right hand was still in a bandage, and it was so nearly healed that I could have used it without discomfort—note my ability to drive a motorcar—and it was with the greatest difficulty that I restrained a mad impulse to strike that guard full upon the nose, from which the raindrops coursed in an uninterrupted descent from the visor of his cap.

The shrill, childish whistle of the locomotive reached us at that instant. A look of wonder sprang into the eyes of the guard.

"It is going to stop, mein herr!" he cried. "It has never stopped before." He rushed out upon the platform in a great state of agitation, and we trailed along behind him, even more excited than he.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

This, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Chesley

Malcolm McKillop has leased his farm, lot 25, con. 5, Eldersl e, for a term of five years to Jack Close of Arran township. Mr. McKillop is the owner of one of the best farms in Eldersl e but since his only son at home, Malcolm, jr., has enlisted, Mr. McKillop thinks it would be unwise under present labor conditions to try to work the farm. He is 79 years old and has done a great deal of work in his day, so has Mrs. McKillop, and at their time of life they should not have to live the strenuous life. With their two daughters they will move to Chesley.

Recruiting has been going on briskly in town since our last issue and the list is six larger than last week. Those who have joined last or this week are: Walter Wood and son Percy, Jas. Cass, Barnes Bowie, Jack Wingfield and Malcolm McKillop. The boys who have joined since the suits were handed out at Tara are keenly disappointed because they have to go around in civilian's clothes. The manufacture of khaki suits should be speeded up.

The hydro electric gang have the poles, wires and other equipment of the power line from Eugenia Falls erected within four miles of Chesley and they are now boarding and rooming in this town. As they construct about half a mile a day the power line to Chesley will be completed within two weeks. The high tension line comes down the county line to Scone, thence down the second concession to the distribution station beside power house. The men for the rebuilding of the plant in the municipality are expected here shortly. There will be a great demand for labor in town for the next month and the man who is idle is not looking for work. He can either work at wiring or be a soldier. The proprietor of the McDonald House is a very busy man these days trying to find accommodation for the extra rush.

Last week we mailed the lists for a dry Ontario to L. C. Benton, chairman for the county of Bruce. The percentage of votes is based on the number of votes cast at the last Provincial election. The number of votes polled in Chesley on June 26, 1914, was 377, and as there are the signatures of 276 voters on the lists it means that 73 per cent. of the men voters of this town want the bars, shop and clubs closed in all parts of Ontario as well as in Chesley. In other words about three out of every four electors in Chesley want the sale of intoxicating liquors prohibited by law. Practically all the men and women between the ages of eighteen and twenty-one signed the petition. There were the names of 506 women and young men in this town on the petition or over one-quarter of the entire population. In Elderslie township 420 signed the petition or 82 per cent. of the electorate. Robert Oswald, chairman of the committee, wishes through the columns of the Enterprise to thank his fifteen workers for their faithful services. Some of the canvassers spent three days in securing signatures. Mr Oswald informed us that the women were so strongly for prohibitiod that if they had a vote the sale of intoxicants would have short shrift. As women suffer most from the evil effects of liquor, who have a better right than they to express an opinion on this vital question?

PARISIAN SAGE

PUTS HAIR ON YOUR HEAD AND KEEPS IT THERE

What's the use of being bald? What sense is there in deliberately allowing your hair to turn gray?

Do you want to look old before your time? Give up the thought; old age will come only too soon.

Look after your hair. PARISIAN SAGE will kill the dandruff germs, and is the only preparation, so far as we know, that is guaranteed to do so.

Man or woman, no matter how old you are, PARISIAN SAGE will make you look young.

Come in and get a large bottle to-day, it only costs 50 cents, and your money back if it does not cure dandruff, stop falling hair, or itching of the scalp. It will make your hair luxuriant, bright and beautiful, and it is the most refreshing, pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

Owen Sound Loses Prominent Citizen

Death of Mr. F.W. Harrison Throws Town into Mourning—An Extensive Public Career.

The Advertiser

Early yesterday morning death came to one of Owen Sound's most respected and prominent citizens in the person of Mr. F. W. Harrison after a lingering illness of several months. For a large number of years Mr. Harrison has been recognised as one of the big men in Owen Sound having taken an active and earnest participation in all matters connected with the town's welfare, and by his efficient administration during his several terms of office in the municipal council won the esteem of all his fellow citizens. Aside from his connection with the development of the town, Mr. Harrison's ready and genial good nature for every one has won for him a personal admiration that extended to the full extent of his acquaintanceship, and he will be mourned by a large circle of friends as well as his more immediate associates.

Mr. Harrison was born in Owen Sound 52 years ago and during his life has been a continuous resident here, growing with the town, and thus obtaining a knowledge of local affairs that made him one of the most valued members of the council and the other various municipal bodies with which he was associated.

In May 1896 when the John Harrison and Sons Company Limited was formed he became a partner of the firm although prior to that time he had been associated with his late father in the lumber business which was originally established in 1869.

It was not until the year 1902 that Mr. Harrison first entered the council. On entering the council on this his first appearance in the public life of the town he was placed on the Board of Works and the Cemetery and Parks, Fire and Light, and Market and Police committees. In the following year he was again returned, and placed on the same committees being given the chairmanship of the Board of Works. In the next two years although he ran for a seat, he was not returned; but in 1907 he was elected reeve and served on the Board of Works, Finance, Light and Power and Railways and Waterworks committees.

In 1908 he again was elected to the reeveship of the town and served on the Board of Works, Finance and the Market and Public Buildings committee and the following year he was again returned in the same capacity serving as chairman of the Board of Works. In 1909 he was elected Mayor and received the next year a second term as the town's chief magistrate. For the next three years he was not in the council but performed very valuable work on the Board of Trade, in which organization he was one of the most progressive members. In the year 1914 he again ran for a seat at the aldermanic board and was returned, and given charge of the local Improvement committee; and in 1915 he was again returned and served as chairman of a new committee, namely the Industrial and Railways committee. It was in this year that such a large number of new industries were secured for the town and it was owing chiefly to his efforts and his wide connection with manufacturers through-out the Dominion that so much along these lines was done for the town.

The late Mr. Harrison was a man of strong opinions and forceful personality and when once he set his mind to the accomplishment of a task his every effort was exerted until that task saw successful completion. His forceful mode of expression gave his opponents many uncomfortable moments but their enmity never approached the personal, for they as well as his supporters joined in admiration for his sterling qualities as a public man. During his administration of the various departments of the town council many important changes and improvements were inaugurated, especially in connection with the public utilities of the town.

Mr. Harrison was associated with the Dry Dock scheme, more directly than any other man in Owen Sound. It was owing to his long and earnest endeavors that so much was done towards bringing this industry to the town and it was the great wish of his public life to see that institution finally established in Owen Sound. But owing to the death of the promoter of the scheme, the matter was delayed and sidetracked. The full extent of the labor that Mr. Harrison generously devoted to this work will never be known except by his intimate associates: and if ever a dry dock comes to Owen Sound it will be owing to the efforts of F. W. Harrison, even though he will not have lived to see the culmination of his efforts.

In 1911 he ran as the Liberal candidate in the Reciprocity campaign of that year, and it was owing to the unpopularity of that issue at that time, that he was not elected to the Commons. His popularity throughout his home riding was then shown when he received the support of numerous electors who had never voted for a Liberal candidate before. Mr. Harrison was a most broad-minded Liberal and was ever ready to accord praise where it was due. He was largely instrumental in the organization of the Young Liberal Club which up to the commencement of the war was carried on an educational work among the young men of the town. In this connection Mr. Harrison was brought into close touch with the younger men of the town who joined with their seniors of longer acquaintance, in according Mr. Harrison one of the highest places in their estimation.

Communication

Colpoy's Bay, Ont. Fe . 1 1916.

A. Logan, Esq.

Editor Wiarton Echo.

Sir—

Although I dislike newspaper discussions. I cannot let your article on "Irregularities in Albemarle" pass without notice and I now appeal to your spirit of fair play to allow me space in your paper for a reply to the misleading and unfair report of matters and conditions now existing in this Township.

I will not here discuss the motive that prompted your article but it is quite apparent to those who will read between the lines, or those who were connected with our council of 1915. In regard to the irregularities of which you complain, I will simply give the facts, so those interested may judge for themselves, whether or not my actions have been consistent and in the best interests of our Township, viz. Upon being advised by our Township Clerk of Mr Adams resignation as Councillor for Albemarle, I looked up the Statutes for the proper course to pursue and not wishing to take the full responsibility of the matter, I asked the advice of our Township Solicitors, Messrs Robertson & McNab, who after going into Mr Adams qualifications and consequent resignation, advised as follows—Under Section 134, "A member of the Council with the consent of the majority of the members present, at a meeting entered upon the minutes may resign his office and seat in the Council, but we think Mr Adams resignation is one under Section 133 and takes effect as soon as received by Clerk, and that it is your duty as Reeve to issue a warrant to Clerk under your hand for the holding of a new election See Section 166 sub. section, 2.

The high legal standing of this Firm, Mr Editor, is beyond question, and I felt quite safe in following their advice, which I did by issuing a warrant for the holding of a new election. I fail to see the wrong doing to this. If I had called the Council together they would necessarily have had to accept the resignation, as the seat was already vacant through the disqualification and they would have been compelled to adopt the same proceedings, that I have pursued. The only difference being, my course will cost Two Dollars for legal advice whereas your plan Mr Editor would have cost our Township about Twenty Dollars for special meeting of Council, and probably a little bill to A. Logan for extra printing besides and in conclusion of the whole matter, I think the public will readily recognize the fact, that you are looking after the interests of A. Logan, while I am caring for the interests of Albemarle.

Thanking you Mr Editor for the kindness in allowing me space in your paper, I am

Yours truly,

C. E. Whicher

Reeve of Albemarle.

The Echo has much pleasure in publishing Reeve Whichers letter, but his imputing a motive to The Echo is difficult for us to understand. The Echo's relation to the Council of 1915 was most agreeable. The Reeve wrote us in June saying that the "friendly tone shown by The Echo towards the present municipal management of Albemarle is appreciated, and he hoped that these conditions would continue." Had The Echo wanted a job in printing it would have welcomed the election, instead of this we protested against the disqualifying of Councillor Adams. We cannot see that the able reeve of Albemarle has made any case against The Echo. The vital point in Reeve Whichers letter is this was the nomination legal until Councillor Adam's resignation had been accepted. Robertson & McNabb say that the reeve could go ahead and issue the warrant. Another firm of lawyers, equally as good, state that the resignation must first be accepted by the Council, and this is the view held by practically all of experienced municipal men. Now that the whole matter is settled, and Councillor Adams has been re-elected by acclamation, everyone will wish the township an era of prosperity and peace.—Ed. Echo.

Danger Signals Warn You of Approaching Paralysis

Slowly and Surely Exhaustion Goes on Until Collapse of the Nerves is the Natural Result.

You may be restless, nervous, irritable and sleepless, but you think there is nothing to be alarmed at. You have no appetite, [illegible] digested is passed on [illegible] of, and there is [illegible] weakness and irregularity of other bodily organs. You feel tired in body and mind, and find that you lack the energy to attend to the daily task.

MRS. ALLAN.

You may not realize that these are the symptoms of nervous prostration and the danger signals which warn you that some form of paralysis is the next step of development.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most successful restorative for the nerves that has ever been offered to the public. This has been proven in many thousands of cases similar to the one described in this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D. 3, Seaforth, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbors of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

The Town Council

There was a deputation of bandsmen headed by Mr. J. R. Hamilton, who asked for further aid towards buying instruments for the town band. They contended that it was an aid in recruiting. They met with a sympahtetic response and about $30 additional were given with the understanding that the instruments purchased are to become the property of the town.

The appeal against the equalization given by Judge Klein, which was dismissed with costs, cost the County of Bruce $292.50, and Wiarton's share of this amount is $35.

The auditors, Messrs. J. J. Tyson and R. E. Trout, presented their report and they went most thoroughly into the sinking fund accounts of the town.

It appears that the Union bank has been raising objections to the cashing of cheques containing only the signature of the Treasurer. Consequently a by-law was put through giving him full power to sign cheques for the payment of corporation accounts.

The absence of the Medical Health Officer and the fact that his services are now needed, brought out some discussion, whereupon it was decided to see Dr Fisher about the work required to be done. It was felt that Dr. Hough being in England it would not be right to appoint anyone to fill his position.

The council of 1915 had given $5 to each recruit, accordingly when it was mentioned that three of the Wiarton detachment were leaving to join the 70th battalion and to proceed overseas at once it was decided to present each one of them with a five dollar bill to show them the good will of the town.

Selected for 70th. Battalion.

Owing to a shortage of men in the 70th. battalion, London, the Bruce battalion was asked to give ten men to assist in bringing it up to full strength, of this number the Wiarton detachment was asked to give three men. The detachment met Monday afternoon and the matter was placed before them by Capt. Clark, they were told that the 70th. battalion would immediately proceed overseas, who wanted to go? Immediately eighteen volunteered, but as only three were needed the following were chosen—Serg. H. Greig and Privates N. McDonald and Vesty Hahn. In the evening the soldiers had a banquet in the town hall to bid good bye to their comrades. Capt. Clark occupied the chair and there was a program which brought forth considerable applause. The soldiers can cheer. Then Messrs T. C. Allan, D. M. Jermyn and J. J. Aston made a presentation to each of the volunteers and the three of them were presented with two pairs of socks from the Ladies Patriotic League and $5 from the town. The gentlemen above named made excellent patriotic addresses and each of the volunteers heartily appreciated the gift. Following this event there was the banquet thoroughly enjoyed by all the soldiers. On the Tuesday afternoon train these volunteers left for London, and their comrades headed by the town band marched to the train to see them off. The citizens also turned out in a body, and the boys who bravely volunteered were given a hearty send off, and they know that they left warm friends behind them These three young men are the kind that will save the British Empire, and we all hope that they will safely return. On Wednesday morning Privates J Cameron, J. Arnold and H. LaSage also went to London to join the 70th Battalion and were given a good send off.

LOWNDES—HAMBLY

A quiet but pretty wedding took place Tuesday evening at the home of Mr and Mrs R. E. Glendenning, Dundas street, Dundas, when Miss Florence Layton Hambly, daughter of Mr and Mrs W. Lowndes, father of the groom. The bride wore a gown of soft cream silk and carried a shower bouquet of Killarney roses, lily of the valley and smilax, while Miss Audria Glendenning, flower girl, carried a basket of sweet peas and orchids. After the ceremony the guests entered the tea room, which was tastefully decorated in national colors and flowers. The happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for Toronto and Niagara Falls.

She—Before I give you my answer I must know more about you. Are you almost at anything worth while.

He—You seem to have a very poor opinion of yourself.

Litster were pleasantly surprised on Monday evening when the members of the Ladies Aid, their husbands and friends gathered at their home "Maplehurst Farm" and presented Mrs. Litster with a handsome leather club bag. Mrs. Thos. Skinner read the address and Mrs. F. Cole made the presentation. Mrs. Litster made a suitable reply but she failed to find words to express the gratitude she felt for the people of this community for the kindness that has been shown to her and her family during the sixteen years they have lived here. A pleasant and sociable evening was spent with music, speeches and recitations after which the ladies served a dainty lunch and after singing Auld Lang Syne, the party left for their homes feeling that Mr. and Mrs. Litster would always keep a warm spot in their hearts for their many friends in North Keppel. The address is as follows:

North Keppel Methodist Church,
Feb 14th, 1916.

We the members of the Ladies Aid connected with the above church ask your acceptance of the accompanying gift as a token of our esteem and appreciation of the long and valuable services you have rendered as president of our society and church.

We regret that circumstances are such that necessitate your leaving the district and severing your connection with us, which has always been one of love and unity, a spiritual force which has bound us together.

In both Mr. Litster and yourself the church has had two loyal supporters and jealous workers and it will ever be one of our sweetest memories when we look back over the years we have spent together.

We voice a general opinion when we say the church and community will be all the poorer because your influence and example have gone from its midst.

Our wish is that you both will be spared for some years and that the church and community where you settle shall be blessed as we have been by your presence and help.

Our parting words be these God bless and keep you.

A. H. Wallis, pastor.
Mrs. Thos. Skinner, Vice Pres.
Mrs. J. H. Thompson, Sec.

It is hoped that the report may be favourable and that so good a minister may be secured.

The suggested Union of St. Paul's Owen Sound, with Sarawak, was not found to be practicable, and the supply of St. Paul's pulpit was left in charge of the Presbytery's H. M. Comitee.

The resignation of Mr. Sinclair of Keady was laid over till the March meeting, as his congregation appreciate his services most highly and it is hoped the work may be so arranged that Mr. Sinclair may be able to continue if for some time longer. Messers Matheson and Scott are to visit the congregation and report to Presbytery.

The Basis of Union voted on recently by some Sessions and Congregation was disapproved by a majority of one. Some of those opposed to Basis expressed themselves as in favour of Union if a satisfactory Basis was provided. The Basis is undoubtedly a difficulty. Many think it would be hard to frame a fairer or safer one than approved by last Assembly by a vote of almost three to one. But, Assembly can do nothing to effect a Union without the approval of the 70 Presbyteries of the Church. Several items of business were deferred till the March meeting.

Variety is the spice of life to the ball man in the front row.

Kincardine

For the first time since local option came into force has Kincardine been called upon to entertain a whiskey detective But last Thursday they came in a force on the 1 o'clock train along with the big crowd to the recruiting rally. The band numbered five in all and as soon as they hit the road made straitway to the Queens and the Morgan House, presented their blue paper and proceeded with a thorough search of bars, cellars and any place they thought the strong stuff might be found. The search lasted for some time at both houses but nothing was found to lead to a conviction.

How the late John Tolmie became known as the "King of Bruce" has been told before but will bear retelling. The gaelic for King is "Righ" pronounced 'Re and a Highlander addressing a letter to him when he was Reeve of Bruce thought he was translating the word Reeve into English when he addressed him as John Tolmie, King of Bruce. He often used to tell the story, and the name stuck.

Col Hugh Clark, M.P. had a narrow escape when fire broke out and consumed the Parliament building in Ottawa. The colonel, who was in the building when the conflagration started, lost his hat, overcoat and many valuable papers in the blaze, as he had barely time to reach the open when the flames intervened and made any later escape impossible

Mr R. A. McFarlane, of Montreal, son of the President of the Bell Telephone Co was in town this week making arrangements for a change in the telephone service here, by which Southampton will have an all night service. Mr R. McVittie, the local manager, is our authority for the statement that the new service will be in operation by the 15th of next month. The users of the telephone will be delighted with this news as up to now we have really only had a half service. The Board of Trade have at different times in the past made efforts to secure this change and no doubt after it is installed a number of new phones will be installed.

Quartermaster A. Hannah was home from Toronto over the week. He expects his company will be going to the front soon.

Mr Irving McVittie, after a couple o years of town life, has decided to go back to the farm this coming spring, and has purchased a farm in Bruce township. Mr John McVittie has purchased the business and will take charge early in March.

Owen Sound

The community around Annan and vicinity were grievously shocked yesterday afternoon when it was learned that Mr. Wm T. Couper, younger son of Mr. and Mrs Jas. Couper, Annan, had been accidentally killed by being struck a heavy blow on the head. Early yesterday afternoon young Couper, along with another young man named Moulton, employed on the farm, went to Mr James Couper's bush lot, near Mr Albert Gilleaby's. They had fallen one tree, which had lodged on another one. The second one was being cut down, when a branch unexpectedly gave way, allowing the first tree to fall in an entirely different direction altogether. The tree struck young Couper on the head. He never spoke afterward, as death had been almost instantaneous. Mr Moulton immediately gave the alarm, and after help was summoned, the injured man removed to the residence of Mr Gilleapy, but all efforts to revive him were of no avail.

The long swamp once a noted hunting grounds for all kinds of game from bear down is still able to afford some exciting hunts. Yesterday morning Caretaker Ernest Morris of the Anglers Club accompanied by his young son, Ernest jr., went to the swamp with a pair of fox hounds to run foxes. They got out into the swamp some little distance when the dogs began acting strangly running around a pile of brush. From the foot marks in the snow there was little to reveal the nature of the excitement. The lad thought that the dogs were after a rabbit but Mr. Morris was certain they were not. He sent the dogs back and awaited developments. In a few minutes the hounds came chasing towards the brush pile aroused which they had previously been running hard. Ahead of them was a wild cat on the full jump. A shot from Mr. Morris' rifle killed it and he went over and picked it up. It was a splendid specimen of a female wild cat—not a lynx and has the white and black markings on its tawny fur. Mr. Morris brought it to town and gave it to Dr. J. W. Marsh, all, president of the Rockcliffe Anglers Club and The Times saw the animal in the latters office yesterday afternoon. The cat measures thirty inches from the tip of its nose to the end of its stubby tail and its shoulder measures sixteen and a half inches. It is quite thin but it's powerful limbs and well set shoulders would indicate that it would put up a terrific scrap if brought to bay. This morning Mr. Morris will go out with some other hunters and make an effort to bag its companion which he is certain was in the brush pile when the dogs gave evidence of excitement. Dr. Marshall will add the cat to his splendid collection of mounted animals.

A staff of men are now busy fitting out the plant of the Union Cement Co and it is expected that operations will commence shortly after the first of March. The usual overhauling and repairs to machines are being made as soon as these can be completed the plant will start and will continue to operate day and night throughout the season.

The military regulations regarding the sale of liquor to soldiers have been further curtailed by placing Chatsworth and Desboro in the list of places out of bounds for serving strong liquids to the member of the 147th Battalion. Many of the soldiers have been obtaining liquor at Chatsworth and Desboro, and it is felt that the efficiency of the men will be all the better maintained by putting these places under ban.

Tuesday night about nine o'clock the police were notified that Anna Norton, a young married woman had committed suicide and they at once took steps to investigate the case. They found that the woman had gone to the home of Mrs. Livingstone, situated at the east end of tenth street east adjoining the Strathcona School, with the ostensible object of seeing her children who were boarding there with their father from whom she had separated three years ago. The investigation went to show that she sent a lad into the house to call the children out taking a seat on the the steps at the rear of the house. While there she drank the contents of a small bottle of carbolic acid and started on to the roadway. Just as she got about the centre of the building she was met by her sister Francis Berry and another young woman named Minnie Miller who stated that she had her arms stretched above her head when they met her, and immediately fell in their arms. She was carried into the Livingstone house. Dr Brewster who resides on Third ave. east was hurriedly summoned and reached the place just as life became extinct. Coroner Dow was notified and an inquest ordered. The life story leading up to the suicide is a sordid one. The young woman's people lived in Keppel Township when she became the wife of Norton. They moved to Owen Sound a few years ago and at times lacking the ordinary necessities of life. Three years ago the woman left her husband, and went to live with a Mrs. McGaskill and earned an unenviable reputation, with the result that she was warned by the police and left town. She afterwards came back and took a position in a restaurant. This she kept until a few months ago when she left and went back to the McGaskill house. Last Monday the police raided the place and took into custody the McGaskill woman and her daughter and Mrs. Norton. Norton, who gave the information to the police which led to the arrest, while in the witness box when the case was called on Tuesday morning, shielded the woman, and because of insufficient evidence, Police Magistrate Creasor could not convict. The trio were let go with a warning. Wednesday night's suicide was the sequel to the events in the early part of the week. To the police she blamed her downfall to the treatment she received from her husband. To his credit, however, it must be said that he has taken care of the two children, seen that they were properly clothed and sent to school. The inquest which was called yesterday morning, met in the police court, and after viewing the body, adjourned to meet next Tuesday morning. The jury is composed of Messrs. John Peacock, foreman; Jas. Long, William Clark, R.J. Wylie, H. Stone, Alexander Urquhart, William French, Thomas McAuley, Donald Campbell, Herb. Agnew, D. McArthur, John A. Wood.

Walkerton

Lawyer Klein acting on behalf of Mr. Robt. Russell, a Walkerton milk dealer has served notice of complaint on Rev D. McLennan, threatening him with an action for damages unless he retracts and apologizes for certain statements made in a communication to the Telescope of Feb. 3rd last in which the reverend writer signed himself as "Observer", and in which among other things he said: "Why should milk taste water? Why is there no appearance of cream on milk? Where does the cream that is sold for four times the price of milk come from? Or has the public any right to ask such questions?" Mr. Russell thinks that the article in question is a reflection on himself, as one of the local milk dealers in town, and on enquiring at the Telescope learned that Mr. McLennan was the writer of the item, and hence is pusting the law after him. In his explanation or retraction this week, Mr McLennan in substance says that he made the statements to help the local milk-dealers in their business by securing a milk inspection.

Wm Bedstone, an aged resident of Tobermory was brought down to the House of Refuge on Tuesday.

About 730 recruits are signed up to date with the 160th Battalion, making the Bruce force now about two-thirds enlisted.

The 71st Battalion, which contains a large sprinkling of Walkerton boys, is listed to leave shortly for England, preparatory to going into the trenches. The boys will be allowed to run up to Walkerton and bid farewell to their old homes before crossing the big pond. Thirteen other Canadian regiments will also be moved shortly to Europe.

License Inspector White has received a letter from the Department instructing him to ascertain whether all the parties applying for tavern licenses in this riding were British subjects either by birth or naturalization. The Dept. will put in the same category every licensee who in any way gives evidence of sympathy with the Tuetonic allies. The Board has not made any pronouncement upon the subject but it is stated that enquiries made in recent weeks have satisfied the commissioners that such action is justified.

Too much conviviality got a former Walkertonian into serious trouble here last week. He was back from Mitchell on a visit to the old town, and by the time he had met a few of the boys and got started on war talk, he was ready to lick the whole German army. He called at the recruiting office on Durham St. and signed up for the 160th. His enthusiasm soon melted however and he succeeded in getting hold of the papers and tearing them up. The next day in police court he said he guessed he must have enlisted because everybody said so but claimed he had not known what he was doing. Magistrate Tolton took a lenient view of the case merely taxing him $5 and costs a total of $10.75 for what is according to the statutes a serious offence.

TURK DIVISION TAKEN

Reinforcements Marched Into Russian Trap at Erzerum.

Similar Fate is Likely to Befall Entire Turkish Army Retreating Along Shore of Black Sea—Operations Will Soon Be Commenced Against Trebizond—The Russian Fleet is Assisting Land Force in Harassing the Enemy.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 21.—The Russians are pressing the advantage gained at Erzerum on both flanks. On the right, along the Black Sea coast, by the co-operation of the sea and land forces, they are driving the Turks from one position after another to the east of Trebizond, and it is expected that active operations against that important seaport will not be long deferred.

In the last two days the Russians have occupied Widje, and pressed forward ten or twelve miles westward. The fleet has destroyed in succession several shore batteries which might have been of assistance to the Turks, and by keeping well in advance of the land forces and by destroying bridges over several streams in the path of the retreating Turks has rendered their retreat more difficult. The fleet has been working so close to the shore that the warships have been reached by rifle fire from the Turkish troops. On the other hand, the ships have spread confusion in the ranks of the Turks by dropping shells among them.

On the left flank, after the occupation of Koph, the Russians sped on to Mush and Achlat, the latter on the north shore of Lake Van. From Koph to Mush, 60 miles over mountain roads, they fought several battles and occupied Mush by storm.

The Turks fled southward toward Diarbekr, the next objective of the Russian army. Once in possession of Diarbekr, it is only a day's march to the Bagdad railway, the last remaining communication into Syria.

The rapid Russian offensive beyond Erzerum, it is believed here, makes it probable that the retreat of the Turkish corps operating along the Black Sea coast and of those troops which were active in the Mush district before the Russian occupation, will be entirely cut off and that the main Turkish army will be surrounded. This fate has already overtaken the 34th division of the Tenth corps, which was ordered from Olti to Erzerum before the fall of the fortress. As telephonic communication between this point of Turkish force and the garrison at Erzerum had been entirely destroyed by the Russians, the 34th division marched serenely on to Erzerum without suspicion that the fortress was then on the point of surrender. The Russo troops reached Erzerum from the northwest at the very moment that the Deve-Boina line of forts fell into Russian hands and the army which they had come to assist was in full retreat. The road over which they had passed was instantly occupied by Russian cavalry, and as they were completely surrounded there was no alternative but to surrender with arms, equipment, and artillery.

It is regarded as almost inevitable that the Turkish corps retiring along the Black Sea coast under the destructive fire of the Russian fleet and the pressure of the Russian armies will be caught in the same sort of trap, as the Turkish troops falling back from Widje to Gumish Khaneh still have a greater distance to go than the Russian troops which are advancing from Erzerum to cut them off.

On the Turkish right flank, where the Ninth corps is operating, the Turks find themselves in the same precarious position, since all the roads of retreat to the north are gradually falling under Russian control. The retreat of the Turkish armies everywhere is impeded by deep snow and the difficult character of the country. They are without food and lack war supplies, and there seems to be little possibility of their offering even temporary resistance of any strength to the Russian advance.

Capture of Mush City of Importance.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The Petrograd correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

The occupation of the City of Mush by the Russians is of the greatest importance, especially considered in connection with our successes in the coast region, where already we are pressing back the enemy upon Trebizond. Thus, we have the situation well in hand on both flanks.

On the whole front the Turks are retreating in disorder, and Armenia is lost to them. The capture of Mush is especially valuable, because it is an important road junction, and also because it has been lately used by the Turks for a store depot and for a training station of reserves.

Two Turkish divisions were cut off from the main body of the Third army at the end of January, and they retreated thither. They are now being further cut up while flying south in the hope of joining the Twelfth army corps, which is reported to be marching from Mosul.

Gen. Leckie Wounded.

OTTAWA, Feb. 21.—Another Canadian brigadier-general is reported wounded in the recent fighting in France. The officer is General Leckie of Vancouver, formerly of the Seaforth Highlanders. The report is that his wound is not serious. The other Canadian General reported wounded is Brig.-General Macdonell, formerly of the Strathcona Horse, and some speculation has been occasioned here by the fact that with so few casualties in the Canadian ranks in what is reported as an unusually fierce engagement, two officers of high rank should have been wounded. Generals Leckie and Macdonell are the first two Canadian generals reported wounded in a year and a half of fighting.

BERNSTORFF AGAIN!

He Has Aroused Anger at Washington by Distorting Facts.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—A feeling of irritation, which may grow into something stronger, exists in high official circles over what are regarded as unfair and misleading publicity methods of the Teutonic Embassies in Washington. The broad intimation yesterday from an authoritative source that unless these methods, which the Government found so objectionable, were discontinued it might be deemed necessary to ask for the recall of one and perhaps two prominent diplomats.

The particular grievance of the Government is that through the information given to the press it was made to appear that a decision had been definitely reached by the Administration to declare that belligerent merchant vessels armed for defence were auxiliary cruisers, and as such not entitled to immunity from attack without warning and without provision for the safety of passengers and crews. According to officials, there was no such decision. What happened was that Secretary Lansing submitted to the Governments of the Entente allies a memorandum proposing a modus vivendi of that character, which, if accepted by the Entente powers, would be laid before the Teutonic Governments for their assent. This Government's position, it was pointed out yesterday, was that the proposal was merely suggestive and could have no force and effect unless it was assented to by all the belligerents. There was no intention, it was asserted, to attempt to put this change of international law into practice unless all the Governments concerned agreed to it.

But foreign representatives in Washington, it was indicated, had sought means of making public what the United States had proposed, and at the same time had given the impression to representatives of newspapers that this Government intended to adopt the new rule with reference to merchant ships armed for defence, whether or not the belligerent powers agreed to it. To create such an impression through the medium of the domestic press, it was said yesterday in an official quarter, was a violation of diplomatic privilege, and that if the alleged effort to influence opinion continued this Government would be forced to take positive action, the character of which was indicated by the statement that there had been instances where European Governments had handed passports to diplomatic officers who tried to influence public opinion and the Governments of the countries to which they were accredited.

SARRAIL AT ATHENS.

French Commander at Salonica Confers With King Constantine.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Patrols of Greeks and Bulgarians fought a sharp engagement near Doiran Thursday after the Bulgarian patrol crossed the frontier, according to a Salonica despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company. The Bulgarians were forced to retire, leaving two men killed. One Greek soldier was wounded.

According to the same despatch, General Sarrail, the French commander-in-chief in the east, has gone to Athens, where an audience with King Constantine has been arranged. The greatest importance it attached to the visit, which it is believed will mark important developments in the relations between Greece and the Entente allies.

General M. P. E. Sarrail, commander-in-chief of the French forces in the Orient, accompanied by the Greek generals, Moschomvlos and Himbrakakis, and their staffs, inspected the Salonica front. The party rode on horseback along the front and lunched in a dugout five yards below the level of the ground. The Greek generals expressed great admiration for the defensive strength of the trenches.

ALL SERBS IN CORFU.

Last Soldiers in Albania Are Removed From Danger Zone.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The last Serbian soldiers remaining in Albania have now been landed in Corfu, says a despatch from Corfu under date of Friday. The despatch adds that the entire Serbian army is now out of danger.

The Vienna official report states that near Basar-Sjak (about 6¾ miles north-east of Durazzo) an advanced Italian position has been taken by the Austro-Hungarians. Further south the Austro-Hungarians have approached the enemy's lines south-east of Durazzo. The Albanians fighting on the Austro-Hungarian side have, according to the same report, occupied Berat (31 miles north-east of Avlona) and Lyusna Peking, and made prisoners there of more than 200 of Essad Pasha's gendarmes.

Berat, or Bielagorad, situated on a high rock overlooking the Osum River, is considered a point of strategic value. It has a population of some 15,000. It consists of an upper town or citadel, which contains several Greek churches, and a lower town, with numerous mosques. It is 50 miles south-east of Durazzo.

Two Danish Vessels Seized.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Copenhagen states that the East Asiatic Company's motor steamer Bandoa, which left Copenhagen yesterday morning, was seen returning in the afternoon, passing Elsinore with a German flag hoisted and escorted by a German trawler. A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen says the Bandoa was bound for Siam with piece goods when captured in the Cattegat by a German cruiser, and was taken to Swinemunde.

The steamer Bergenhus, bound from Copenhagen for Liverpool, has been taken to Stettin by an armed trawler.

ENGLISH COAST RAIDED

Four German Seaplanes Visit East and Southeast Shores.

Two Men and a Boy Killed and a Marine Wounded by Bombs—One Missile Smashed a Church Window as the Congregation Was Singing the "Te Deum"—Seventeen Bombs in All Were Dropped, Says War Office.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—England's east and south-east coasts were visited at broad daylight yesterday by four German seaplanes, presumably of the latest type of battle-plane. Up to a late hour last night the official figure of casualties was only three—two men and a boy—killed, and one man, a marine, injured. Many bombs were dropped. The damage, as officially reported, was confined chiefly to private property. A feature of the official account is the frank admission that British aircraft, one naval plane and two aeroplanes, which ascended to attack the raiders, failed to reach them. It appears the German planes are capable of ascending to an extraordinary height. The War Office states that two biplanes, after circling over the towns of Lowestoft, in Kent, "rose to a great height and seemingly vanished." Fifteen minutes later they reappeared over the town and then flew to the east. The raids occurred between 10.55 and about 11.30 o'clock.

Details of the raid were not received until late last night. At Lowestoft, it develops, only three bombs hit buildings. Others fell on waste ground, into gardens, on the beach, and into the sea, none of them doing any damage of military importance.

Nobody seems to have seen the machines after approach, though the sky was clear. The streets were thronged with people enjoying the sunshine or going to their churches. When the raiders were seen curiosity exceeded alarm, and the official admonitions to seek shelter were ignored by most.

One bomb missed the little Methodist chapel, hitting a house a few yards away. A window of the chapel on that side was smashed. Arrow-like fragments of glass flew across the chapel, some sticking in the woodwork. One piece hit the pulpit Bible, missing the pastor. Smaller fragments were showered on the people's heads. The only casualty consisted in a man's finger being cut. Some old people in the chapel collapsed as the result of fright. The service was not resumed.

One of the raiders wobbled and slackened over Walmer. Church services were in progress in the town, and the streets were nearly deserted. All bombs fell within a small area, in which there were two churches. Several persons left, but the services were continued.

TO ECONOMIZE ON BUTTER.

Officials Take Steps to Regulate Supply in Greater Berlin.

BERLIN, Germany, Feb. 21.—The bread card, which to-morrow will be a year old, will be supplemented henceforth in Greater Berlin by a similar regulation with respect to the butter supply. The executive authorities of Greater Berlin have decided to limit the sale of butter to a quarter of a pound for each person weekly, to be obtained on presentation of the bread card.

Pending the introduction of a similar system throughout the empire, the authorities cannot even guarantee that this amount will be available for residents of Berlin, although it is hoped that this will be possible.

A measure to increase the supply of swine in the larger municipalities probably will be necessary. Only 274 swine were offered for sale in the Berlin market Saturday and five in Hamburg. An official census taken in December showed that there were more than 20,000,000 swine in Germany and the experts are convinced that there is much holding back for speculative purposes.

TOWNS MAY UNITE.

Berlin and Waterloo Are Again Discussing Amalgamation.

BERLIN, Ont., Feb. 21.—Since the agitation to change the name of this city commenced several weeks ago, the proposal that Berlin and Waterloo be united into one city has met with general favor in both towns. While the citizens of Berlin have always favored union there has been considerable opposition to the union of the two towns in Waterloo. The question will be discussed by the Waterloo Board of Trade on this evening, when a delegation from Berlin will be present. The Berlin City Council will also appoint a general committee to conduct the negotiations.

The first internment of an alien of enemy nationality was made yesterday morning, when Paul Zibell, a young man who failed to report to Chief O'Neill regularly, was sent to Toronto under military guard. He was registered some time ago but neglected to report. It is expected that other internments will be made within the next few days.

Demand Peace in Three Months.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail telegraphs that he learns from a trustworthy source that more than 500 prominent men, including heads of business houses, Senators, and shipowners of Hamburg, Lubeck, and Bremen, have petitioned the Government to begin peace overtures with a view to ending the war within the next three months, otherwise the Hansa States will be totally ruined.

Kaiser's Prototypes in the Scripeures

(Mail and Empires)

In his readings Mr. H. H. Macrae, of Toronto, has come across some passages in Rollins' Ancient History which appeared to him particularly applicable at the present time. The remarks are made in the preface, and although there is not sufficient space in a single column to republish all of them, we are very glad to give the most significant extracts. The author begins by saying that profane history proclaims universally the justice of the Almighty and the admirable wisdom with which His providence governs the universe. Indeed, nothing gives history a greater superiority to many branches of literature than to see in a manner imprinted in almost every page of it the shining proofs of this great truth, namely, that God disposes all events as Supreme Lord and Sovereign; that He alone determines the fate of Kings and the duration of empires; that He transfers the government of Kingdoms from one nation to another because of the unrighteous dealings and wickedness committed therein.

Rollins continues:

God has vouchsafed to us, in Holy Scriptures, a part of the relation of the several nations of the earth to His own people; and the little so discovered diffuses a great light over the history of those nations, of whom we shall have but a very imperfect idea, unless we have recourse to the inspired writers. They alone display, and bring to light the secret thoughts of princes, their incoherent projects, their foolish pride, their impious and cruel ambition; they reveal the true causes and hidden springs of victories and overthrows; of the grandeur and declension of nations; the rise and ruin of states; and teach us what indeed is the principal benefit to be derived from history, the judgment which the Almighty forms both of princes and empires, and consequently what idea we ourselves ought to entertain of them. Not to mention Egypt, that served at first as the cradle (if we may be allowed the expression) of the holy nation; and which afterwards was a severe prison and a fiery furnace to it (Exod. vi. 6; Deut. iv., 20); and at last the scene of the most astonishing miracles that God ever wrought in favor of Israel: not to mention, I say, Egypt, the mighty empires of Nineveh and Babylon furnish a thousand proofs of the truth here advanced.

SOME EARLY KAISERS

Their most powerful monarchs, Tiglath-Pileser, Shalmaneser, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, and many more were in God's hand, as so many instruments, which He employed to punish the transgressions of His people.

"He lifted up an ensign to the nations from far and hissed unto them from the end of the earth to come and receive his orders."

He himself put the sword into their hands and appointed their marches daily. He breathed courage and ardor into their soldiers, made their armies indefatigable in labor and invincible in battle, and spread terror and consternation wherever they directed their steps. The rapidity of their conquests ought to have enabled them to discern the invisible hand which conducted them. But says one of these kings in the name of the rest, "By the strength of my hand I have done it, and by my wisdom, for I am prudent, and I have removed the bounds of the people and have robbed their treasurers, and I have put down the inhabitants like a valiant man. And my hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people; and as one gathered eggs that are left, have I gathered all the earth; and there are none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth or peeped."

THE FALL OF SENNACHERIB.

But this monarch, so august and so wise in his own eyes, how did he appeared in that of the Almighty? Only as a subaltern agent, a servant sent by his master "The rod of his anger, and staff in his hand." God's design was to chastise, not to extirpate, his children. But Sennacherib "had it in his heart to destroy and cut off all nations." What then will be the issue of of this kind of contest between the designs of God, and those of this prince? At the time that he fancied himself already possessed of Jerusalem, the Lord, with a single blast, disperses all his proud hopes; destroyed, in one night a hundred and four score and five thousand of his forces: and putting "a hook in his nose and a bridle in his lips," (as though he had been a wild beast). He leads him back to his own dominions, covered with infamy, through the midst of those nations who but a little before had beheld him in all his pride and haughtiness. Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, appears still more visibly governed by a Providence to which himself is an entire stranger, but which presides over all his deliberations, and determines all his actions.

End of Nebuchadnezzar's Dream

The same Nebuchadnezzar agree to immortalize his name by the grandeur of his exploits, was determined to heighten the glory of his conquests by his splendor and magnificience in embellishing the capital of his empire with pompous edifices, and the most sumptuous ornaments. But whilst a set of adulatiug courtiers, on whom he lavished the highest honors and immense riches make all places resound with his name, an august senate of watchful spirits is formed who weigh in the balance of truth, the actions of kings and pronounce upon them a sentence from which there is no appeal. The King of Babylon is cited before this tribunal, in which there presides the supreme judge, who to a vigilance which nothing can elude, adds a holiness which will not allow of the least irregularity. Vigil et sanctus. In the tribunal all Nebuchadnezzar's actions, which were the admiration and wonder of the public, are examined with rigor; and a search is made into the the inward recesses of his heart, to discover his most hidden thoughts. How will this most formidable enquiry end? At the instant that Nebuchadnezzar, walking in his palace, and revolving with a secret complacency, is saying to himself:

Is not this great Babylon that I built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power and for the honor of my majesty?"

In this very instant, when by vainly flattering himself that he held his power and kingdom from himself alone, he usurped the seat of the Almighty; a voice from heaven pronounces his sentences and declares to him (Daniel 4th 31., 32), that His kingdom was departed from him, that he should be driven from men, and his dwelling be with the wild beasts of the field until he knew the Most High ruled in the kingdoms of men, and gave them to whomsoever he would.

Death of Mrs A. J. Kyle.

On Saturday afternoon the body of Mrs A. J. Kyle was laid to rest in Bayview cemetery. The funeral service was conducted in the residence of Mr D. W. McClure, and a large number of residents, who remembered the deceased with feelings of profound respect, were present. The late Mrs Kyle, whose maiden name was Margaret Louise Kilbourne was born in Brockville, and was united in marriage to Mr Kyle at Owen Sound in 1875. From that time until she removed to Toronto, about eight years ago, she had lived continually in Wiarton. She had a stroke 18 years ago, another 11 years ago and the third 9 years ago. Her husband moved her to Toronto, where she could take special treatment which no doubt prolonged her life. Since that time Mr Kyle gave all his time to taking care of her and no man could have been more faithful than Mr Kyle in his loving devotion and care of his afflicted wife. Deceased was a lady of very highest type of christian character and beloved by all her acquaintances, and after years of helplessness she has gone to her reward.

Nothing Like it for Colds

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B writes: "Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is a good time and pleasant to take. my children would drink a whole bottle if they were allowed."

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

A New Organization

Within a week or soit is expected a new department in connection with the Boy Scouts' Association of Ontario will be formed. It will be known as the Wolf Cubs, and has for its purpose the enlisting of boys from ten to twelve years of age. These boys would be too young to enter the parent movement.

Such a movement was started in England by Sir Robert Baden-Powell a short time ago. As far as practicable the training of the Cubs will be the same as Scouts. They will be governed by the same laws, and the organization will be on the same line as the parent body with which they will be affiliated. Their uniforms will be entirely different from those of the Scouts. They will wear a small cap, dark green in colour, with yellow cord seams and border. A sweater, either green or blue, will take the place of the shirt of the Scouts. They will wear a scarf and dark blue shorts, with stockings and shoes. The Cub does not carry a staff or wear a belt, shoulder knots or garter tabs.

One feature of this scheme is that in nearly every case the older boys become very much attached to the junior organization and give them every help possible. The Cubs will hold their meetings in the afternoons or early evening.

Have You Sent You Renewal Yet?

There are still some readers of The Echo who have not sent in their renewal subscriptions for 1916. We know that they intended to do so, and that the very smallness of the amount involved is just the thing responsible for it being overlooked. If they knew what a convenience it is to the publishers to have all renewals promptly, and what pleasure it gives the editor to see that his work is appreciated, they would certainly make a point of remitting by the earliest possible mail. The Canadian Echo is giving its readers big value for their money. Nearly all the local papers are now $1.50 per year, and while The Echo remains at $1, it must insist upon the payments being in advance.

Hockey

The Ends of the Earth in Ontario come together in a hockey schedule, for when Wiarton and Port Colborne were ordered to play Friday night, it meant a trip for each team of 200 miles. The hockey team of Port Colborne has some class, particularly for this season when teams are all broken, still it can put up good hockey for 1916, and moreover they have Stan Burgoyne coaching them. The same Burgoyne coached the Wiarton team last year—so it was Burgoyne against Burgoyne, and Burgoyne of 1915, downed Burgoyne of 1916. As for the game it was fast and furious. It was a game of back checking from gong to gong, occasionally the Port Colborne team got of with their combination, but it only lasted a minute. In fact throughout the whole game, on either side, there was no combination rush which put the puck in the net. The first period belonged entirely to Wiarton, the puck was around the Port Colborne net the whole period, and two goals were notched before the bell sang. In the second period however, Port Colborne, showed up stronger in fact they put up a good game and the score this period was 1 to 1. In the third period the play was again ours, the puck was around their net practically the whole period and there were a good many shots on their goal, but so strenuous was the back checking that neither team could score, so the final score remained 3 to 1 in favor of Wiarton. How did our boys do? O. K! Tommie Nimmo has develoed until he can take care of the net as well as any of the crack goal men in Ontario, the rest of the team worked like beavers, each one doing his part well. The line up was.

CARE OF LIVE STOCK.

Barns, Pens, and Yards Should Be Kept Clean and Sanitary.

It is a well known fact among successful live stock men that it is very important to keep clean the barns, pens, and yards where the animals are kept. What is the meaning of clean? Well, there are many conceptions of cleanliness. Many farmers think if they keep their barns and yards free from manure that they are clean. This is true to a certain extent, for it is important to keep the premises free from manure and other refuse. Others will hold that not only must the manure be removed, but the walls and ceilings of the barn must be kept free from cobwebs, dust and the like in order to have a clean barn, and that whitewashing once a year is necessary. When the various buildings about the farm are kept clean, not only are better homes provided for the stock, but work is easier and more inviting. Being clean is not a fad. It is a dollar and cents proposition.

It is well known now that most, if not all, diseases are caused by germs. Cattle cannot have tuberculosis unless exposed to tubercular bacteria, nor suffer from abortion unless infected with abortion germs, nor foot and mouth disease unless they come in contact with the bacteria which cause this disease. Hogs do not have hog cholera unless they are exposed to the germ that produces this disease. So it is with the many other diseases which claim our live stock. It is plain that one of the factors in keeping live stock healthy is to destroy the bacteria, and disinfectants will do this.

BRIEF FARM NOTES.

The fertilizer value of milk comes back in the skimmed milk, and if this is fed to hogs it stays right on the farm.

With the portable colony house twenty-five hens are about as many as can be kept in one flock, and in the permanent house fifty hens are the limit.

The experiment stations of the several provinces are doing better work each succeeding year. The scientists are maturing, and the people are appreciating.

Is the ram kept from the ewes in the daytime or does he run with them all of the time? Better keep them apart, allowing him with them a few hours daily. Result—better lambs and more of them.

The improvements of good roads and ditches is a matter which concerns every farmer who desires to increase the value of his land or the farm property of the community in which he resides.

Farm Machinery Investment.

A difficult problem on the Canadian farm is to decide how much and what kind of machinery should be purchased. Some farms are so overstocked with machinery that the depreciation, interest, and repairs eat up much of the profits.

Assuming the average depreciation on machinery at 10 per cent. and the interest on the money invested at 5 per cent., we have an average yearly expense of approximately $13 on each $100 invested in machinery. A man who has $1,500 worth of machinery would have $195 expense on this alone in interest and depreciation. If his work could be done with half this amount he could save $97.50. This would be equivalent to the interest on $1,625 at 6 per cent.

A farm of eighty acres cannot profitably use four-horse machinery, because three horses should do the work on a farm of this size. In buying machinery too large in proportion to the size of the farm unnecessary expense is added. This comes, not only in the increased cost of machinery, but also in the maintenance of any extra horse required.

Rotation in Severe Cases.

Recent experiments have shown that in certain sections of the country the soil of a field producing a crop of smutted wheat this year may harbor enough smut spores to cause the appearance of smut in next year's crop if the field be reseeded to wheat. This sometimes occurs where smut is very bad, in spite of the planting of treated seed, and shows that in such localities crop rotation should be practiced, in addition to seed treatment. Bunt or covered smut of wheat attacks no other cereal crop, but other cereals have their own smut diseases.

A WORD ABOUT ENSILAGE.

All kinds of ensilage will be utilized in feeding operations this year. There will be thousands of cases where corn was put in the silo before the grain had reached the milk stage and some instances even where the crop was put in before it had cured. Some disappointment will be experienced unless considerable dry feed in the form of fodder or hay is used in conjunction with this succulent ensilage. Under no circumstances should young cattle or even fattening cattle be fed this greasy, washy ensilage alone. Then there are those who have put corn in the silo anywhere from a week to two weeks after it was frosted. Unless abundance of water was used at the time of filling a supply of moldy ensilage will be available. This is a matter that must be watched most carefully, because mold is dangerous and not infrequently animals are poisoned as the result of eating it. If our experiment stations could compile a bulletin next spring giving the results of feeding the various kinds of ensilage that will be used this winter it would make exceedingly interesting reading.—Iowa Homestead.

PRUNE CULTURE.

British Columbia is Developing It in a Remarkable Way.

British Columbia is already famous as a producer of apples, plums, and peaches, but that is not all. According to a resident of that part of the Dominion, prune-growing promises to be very successful. For the man of only average means, prune-growing in southern British Columbia, according to our authority, proves very profitable. A ten-acre farm, cleared and ready for planting, may be purchased for about $200 per acre. What has already been done and some of the possibilities of this new industry are given in the correspondent's letter:

"None of the prunes grown in British Columbia come so far east as Ontario, but they are sold extensively in the Prairie Provinces, and it is the experience of the wholesalers and jobbers of the middle west that they command a better price and a quicker sale than any of the prunes handled by them from either Europe or the United States. This being the case, it is of interest to make inquiries as to the extent to which the prune-growing industry, which is now only in its infancy, can be further developed in the district in which it has already taken such firm hold.

On Sunnyside Fruit Farm, three miles west of Grand Forks, there is a prime orchard of nine acres, which contains exactly eleven hundred trees. From these eleven hundred trees there were picked this year 152½ tons of prunes, of which 147 tons, equivalent to 14,738 boxes, were distributed throughout the middle west from Medicine Hat to Winnipeg. These figures were obtained directly from those who have control of the prune orchard, and full reliance can be placed upon them.

The figures have been given for nine acres, and there are about twenty thousand acres suitable for prune-growing within the district immediately surrounding Grand Forks. It can easily be seen, therefore, that a very great extension of the prune-growing industry can take place in that part of British Columbia.

The success of the prune-growing industry in that district is due partly to the fertility of the soil, partly to the convenience with which an abundance of water can be placed on the land, and partly to the climate, which a rugged westerner a few years ago described as "the best God ever made." At Sunnyside Farm they have an abundance of water, obtained from Fourth of July Creek, at a point about 350 feet above the prune orchard. Prunes will grow at Grand Forks without irrigation, but the returns per acre are much smaller when artificial watering is not employed. It is possible, however, to place an abundance of water on the entire twenty thousand acres available for prune-growing. It is, in fact, quite feasible to distribute the water of a whole river throughout the valley. The North Fork of the Kettle River is about a hundred miles long, and it is fed during the summer by the melted snow from the mountains, the period of the highest water being in June. If a dam were constructed in this river a few miles above the town of Grand Forks, the water from it could be distributed by means of gravity over the whole valley.

The third factor in the requirements for success in prune-growing is the climate, and it should be remembered that the climate of the interior of British Columbia is totally different from that of the coast, which is known by the people of the interior as "the rainy country."

Tar Paper Kills Sorrel.

Thorough fallow cultivation will kill sorrel as well as tar paper, though it may prove more expensive. Usually sorrel occurs in isolated spots measuring from three to ten feet across. If these spots are numerous cultivation will prove the more satisfactory. When the sorrel heads out mow the patch, cover with tar paper, and weight it down. This will prevent the plants from getting to the sunlight, and consequently they will be smothered. One season is sufficient to do the work. The economic principle depends on the cost of the covering compared to the cost of digging the spots or in plowing and disking. If the tar paper can be bought for $1.20 per roll of 500 square feet the cost of covering is slight compared to the cost of digging at $3 per day.

By
GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,
Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1911, by George Barr McCutcheon.

A conductor stepped down from the last coach but one and prepared to assist a passenger to alight. I hastened up to him.

"Permit me," I said, elbowing him aside.

A portly lady squeezed through the vestibule and felt her way carefully down the steps. Behind her was a small, bewhiskered man, trying to raise an umbrella inside the narrow corridor, a perfectly impossible feat.

She came down into my arms with the limpness of one who is accustomed to such attentions, and then wheedled instantly upon the futile individual on the steps above.

"Quick! My hat! Heaven preserve us, how it rains!" she cried in a deep, wheezy voice and—in German.

"Moth"— I began instantaneously, but the sacred word died unfinished on my lips. The next instant I was scurrying down the platform to where I saw Britton standing.

"Have you seen them?" I shouted wildly.

"No, sir. Not a sign, sir. Ah, see!"

He pointed excitedly down the platform.

"No!" I rasped out. "By no possible stretch of the imagination can that be Mrs. Titus. Come, we must ask the conductor. That woman? Good Lord, Britton, she waddles!"

The large lady and the smallish man passed us on the way to shelter, the latter holding an umbrella over her hat with one hand and lugging a heavy hamper in the other. They were both exclaiming in German. The station guard and the conductor were bowing and scraping in their wake, both carrying boxes and bundles.

No one else had descended from the train. I grabbed the conductor by the arm.

"Any one else getting off here?" I demanded in English and at once repeated it in German.

He shook himself loose, dropped the bags in the shelter of the station house, doffed his cap to the imperious backs of his late passengers, and scuttled back to the car. A moment later the train was under way.

"Can you not see for yourself?" he shouted from the steps as he passed me by.

Once more I swooped down upon the guard. He was stuffing the large German lady into a small, lopsided carriage, the driver of which was taking off his cap and putting it on again after the manner of a mechanical toy.

"Go away," hissed the guard sagrily. "This is the mayor and the mayoress. Stand aside! Can't you see?"

"When does the next train get in?" I asked for the third time. He was still bowing after the departing buck.

"Ach, Gott!" he gasped. Collecting his thoughts, he said: "There is no train until 9 o'clock in the morning. Nine, mein herr."

"Ach, Gott!" groaned I. "Are you sure?"

"Ja! You can go home now and go to bed, sir. There will be no train until 9, and I will not be on duty then. Good night."

"I dare say we'd better be starting 'ome, sir," said Britton timidly. "Something 'as gone wrong with the plans, I fear. They did not come, sir."

"Do you think I am blind?" I roared.

"Not at all, sir," he said in haste, taking a step or two backward.

By the time we succeeded in starting the engine after cranking for nearly half an hour I was so consumed by wrath over the scurvy trick Mrs. Titus had played upon us that I swore she should not enter my castle if I could prevent it. Moreover, I would take fiendish delight in dumping her confounded luggage into the Danube. We then had trouble with the lamps. At last we were off, Britton at the wheel. I shall not describe that disastrous trip home. It is only necessary to say that we first lost our way and went ten or twelve kilometers in the wrong direction; then we had a blowout and no quick detachable rim. Subsequently something went wrong with the mud caked machinery, and my unfortunate valet had to lie on his back in a puddle for half an hour. Eventually we sneaked into the garage with our trembling car and quarreled manfully with the men who had to wash her.

"Good heavens, Britton!" I exclaimed suddenly.

He looked at me in astonishment. I admit that the ejaculation must have sounded weak and effeminate to him after what had gone before.

"What is it, sir?" he asked, at once resuming his status as a servant after a splendid hiatus of five hours or more in which he had enjoyed all of the by-products of equality.

"Poopendyke!" I exclaimed, aghast. "I have just thought of him. The poor devil has been waiting for us three miles up the river since midnight! What do you think of that?"

"No such luck, sir," said he grumpily.

"Luck! You heartless rascal! What do you mean by that?"

"I beg pardon, sir. I mean to say he could sit in the boat'ouse and twiddle 'is thumbs at the elements, sir. Trust Mr. Poopendyke to keep out of the rain."

"In any event he is still waiting there for us, wet or dry, he and the two big Schmicks." I took a moment for thought. "We must telephone to the castle and have Hawkes send Conrad out with word to them." I looked at my watch. It was twenty minutes past 7. "I suppose no one in the castle went to bed last night. Good Lord! What a scene for a farce!"

We retraced our steps to the garage, where Britton went to the telephone. I stood in the doorway of the building staring gloomily, hollow eyed at the—well, at nothing, now that I stop to think of it. The manager of the place, no amiable, jocund descendant of Lazarus, approached me.

"Quite a storm last night, Mr. Schmarck," he said, rubbing his hands on an oil rag. I grimly agreed with him in a monosyllable. "But it is lovely today, sir. Heavenly, sir."

"Heavenly?" I gasped.

"Ah, but look at the glorious sun!" he cried, waving the oil rag in all directions at once.

The sun! Upon my word, the sun was shining fiercely. I hadn't noticed it before.

"Well, I'm—dashed!" I said, with a silly grin.

"The moon will shine tonight, Mr. Schmarck"— he began insinuatingly.

"Smart, if you please!" I snapped.

"Ah." he sighed, rolling his eyes, "it is fine to be in love."

A full minute passed before I grasped the meaning of that soft answer, and then it was too late. He had gone about his business without waiting to see whether my wrath had been turned away. I had been joy riding!

The excitement in Britton's usually imperturbable countenance as he came running up to me from the telephone closet prepared me in a way for the startling news that was to come.

"Has anything serious happened?" I cried, my heart sinking a little lower.

"I had Mr. Poopendyke himself on the wire, sir. What do you think, sir?"

A premonition! "She—she has arrived?" I demanded dully.

He nodded. "She is, sir. Mrs.—your mother, sir, is in your suite."

The proximity of the inquisitive manager explains this extraordinary remark on the part of my valet. We both glared at the manager, and he had the delicacy to move away. "She arrived by a special train at 12 last night, sir."

I was speechless. The brilliant sun shine seemed to be turning into somber night before my eyes. Everything was going black.

"She's asleep, he says, and doesn't want to be disturbed till noon, so he says he can't say anything more just now over the telephone because he's afraid of waking 'er." (Britton drops them when excited.)

"He doesn't have to shout so loud that he can be heard on the top floor," said I, still a trifle dazed.

"She 'appens to be sleeping in your bed, sir, he says."

"In my bed? Good heavens, Britton, what's to become of me?"

"Don't take it so 'ard, sir," he made haste to say. "Blatchford 'as fixed a place for you on the couch in your study, sir. It's all very snug, sir."

"But, Britton," I said in horror, "suppose that I should have come home last night. Don't you see?"

"I daresay she 'ad the door locked, sir," he said.

"By special train." I mumbled. A light broke in upon my reviving intellect. "Why, it was the train that went through at a mile a minute while we were in the coffee house. No wonder we didn't meet her!"

"I shudder to think of wot would 'ave 'appened if we had, sir," said he, meaning no doubt to placate me. "Mr. Poopendyke says the countess 'as been up all night worrying about you, sir. She has been distracted. She wanted 'im to go out and search for you at 4 o'clock this morning, but he says he assured 'er you'd turn up all right. He says Mrs.—the elderly lady, begging your pardon, sir—thought she was doing for the best when she took a special. She wanted to save us all the trouble she could. He says she was very much distressed by our failure to 'ave some one meet her with a launch when she got here last night, sir. As it was, she didn't reach the castle until nearly 2, and she looked like a drowned rat when she got there, being hex—exposed to a beastly rain storm. See wot I mean? She went to bed in a dreadful state, he says, but he thinks she'll be more pleasant before the day is over."

I burst into a fit of laughter. "Hurray!" I shouted exultantly. "Well, by Jove, I don't feel half as bad as I did five minutes ago. Come, let us be off."

We started briskly down the street. My spirits were beginning to rebound. Poopendyke had said that she worried all night about me. She had been distracted! Poor little woman! Still I was glad to know that she had the grace to sit up and worry instead of going to sleep as she might have done if I was just mean enough to be happy over it.

Poopendyke met us on the town side of the river. He seemed a trifle bashful, I thought. He was not slow, on the other hand, to announce in horrified tones that I looked like a [illegible]

CHAPTER XIX.

I Meet Mrs. Titus.

WHILE we were crossing the muddy stream my secretary, his teeth chattering with cold and excitement combined, related the story of the night.

"We were just starting off for the boathouse up the river, according to plans, Max and Rudolph and I with the two boats, when the countess came down in a mackintosh and a pair of gum boots and insisted upon going along with us. She said it wasn't fair to make you do all the work and all that sort of thing. While we were arguing with her—and it was getting so late that I feared we wouldn't be in time to meet you—we heard some one shouting on the opposite side of the river. The voice sounded something like Britton's, and the countess insisted that there had been an accident and that you were hurt, Mr. Smart, and nothing would do but we must send Max and Rudolph over to see what the trouble was. It was raining cats and dogs, and I realized that it would be impossible for you to get a boatman on that side at that hour of the night—it was nearly 1—so I sent the two Schmicks across. I've never seen a night as dark as it was. The two little lanterns bobbing in the boat could hardly be seen through the streams of rain, and it was next to impossible to see the lights on the opposite landing stage—just a dull, misty glow.

"To make the story short, Mrs. Titus and her sons were over there, with absolutely no means of crossing the river. It took two trips over to fetch the whole party across, counting pitchforks and the dogs, you understand. Mrs. Titus was standing at the mouth of the boathouse when I went over to lend a hand, with an umbrella and a cloak on, and a lunch cloth as canopy top or a limousine body or something of the sort.

"I didn't have much of a chance to converse with her. The countess tried to get her upstairs to the east wing, but she wouldn't climb another step. I forgot to mention that the windlass was out of order and she had to climb the hill in mud six inches deep. The Schmicks carried her the last half of the distance. She insisted on sleeping in the hall or the study anywhere but upstairs. I assumed the responsibility of putting her in your bed, sir. It was either that or"—

I broke in sarcastically. "You couldn't have put her into your bed, I suppose."

"Not very handily, Mr. Smart," he said in an injured voice. "One of her sons occupied my bed. Of course it was all right, because I didn't intend to go to bed, as it happened. The old er son went upstairs with the countess. She gave up her bed to him, and then she and I sat up all night in the study waiting for a telephone message from you. The younger son explained a good many things to us that his mother absolutely refused to discuss. She was so mad when she got here. It seems she took it into her head at the last minute to charter a special train, but forgot to notify us of the switch in the plans. She traveled by the regular train from Paris to some place along the line, where she got out and waited for the special which was following along behind, straight from Paris too. A woeful waste of money, it seemed to me. Her idea was to throw a couple of plain clothes men off the track, and, by George, sir, she succeeded. They thought she was changing from a train to some place in Switzerland and went off to watch the other station. Then she sneaked aboard the special, which was chartered clear through to Vienna. See how clever she is? If they followed on the next train or telegraphed it would naturally be to Vienna. She got off at this place, and—well, we have her with us, sir, as snug as a bug in a rug."

"What is she like Fred?" I inquired. I confess that I hung on his reply.

"I have never seen a wet hen, but I should say on a guess that she's a good bit like one. Perhaps when she's thoroughly dried out she may not be so bad, but"—he drew a long, deep breath—"but upon my word of honor she was the limit last night. Of course one couldn't expect her to be exactly gracious, with her hair plastered over her face and her hat spoiled and her clothes soaked, but there was really no excuse for some of the things she said to me. I shall overlook them for your sake and for the countess'." He was painfully red in the face.

"The conditions, Fred," I said, "were scarcely conducive to polite persiflage."

"But, hang it all, I was as wet as she was." he exploded so violently that I knew his soul must have been tried to the utmost.

"We must try to make the best of it," I said. "It will not be for long." The thought of it somehow sent my heart back to its lowest level.

He was glum and silent for a few minutes. Then he said, as if the thought had been on his mind for some hours: "She isn't a day over forty-five. It doesn't seem possible, with a six foot son twenty-six years old."

Grimly I explained. "They marry quite young when it's for money, Fred."

"I suppose that's it," he sighed. "I fancy she's handsome, too, when she hasn't been rained upon."

We were halfway up the slope when he announced nervously that all of my dry clothing was in the closet of my bedroom and could not be got at under any circumstance.

"But," he said, "I have laid out my best frock coat and trousers for you and a complete change of linen. You are quite welcome to anything I possess, Mr. Smart. I think if you take a couple of rolls at the bottom of the trousers they'll be presentable. The coat may be a little long for you, but"—

My good laughter cut him short.

"It's the best I could do," he said in an aggrieved voice.

I had a secret hope that the countess would be in the courtyard to welcome me, but I was disappointed. Old Gretel met me and wept over me, as if I was not already sufficiently moist. The chef came running out to say that breakfast would be ready for me when I desired it; Blatchford felt of my coat sleeve and told me that I was quite wet; Hawkes had two large, steaming toddies waiting for us in the vestibule, apparently fearing that we could get no farther without the aid of a stimulant. But there was no sign of a single Titus.

Later I ventured forth in Poopendyke's best suit of clothes, the one he uses when he passes the plate on Sundays in faraway Yonkers. It smelled of moth balls, but it was gloriously dry, so why carp? We sneaked down the corridor past my own bedroom door and stole into the study.

Just inside the door I stopped in amazement. The countess was sound asleep in my big armchair, a forlorn but lovely thing in a pink peignoir. Her rumpled brown hair nestled in the angle of the chair, her hands dropped listlessly at her sides, dark lashes lay upon the soft white cheeks; her lips were parted ever so slightly, and her bosom rose and fell in the long swell of perfect repose.

Poopendyke clutched me by the arm and drew me toward the door or I might have stood there transfixed for heaven knows how long.

"She's asleep," he whispered.

It was the second time in twelve hours that some one had intimated that I was blind.

The door creaked villainously. The great, pendulettical tails of my borrowed frock coat were on the verge of being safely outside with me when she cried out, whereupon I swiftly commenced retreat and soon my head through the half open door.

"Oh, it is you!" she cried, in a queer voice. She was leaning forward in the chair, her eyes wide open and eager.

I advanced into the room. A look of doubt sprang into her face. She stared for a moment and then rather piteously rubbed her eyes.

"Yes, it is I," said I, spreading my arms in such a way that my hands emerged from the confines of Poopendyke's sleeves. (Upon my word, I had no idea that he was so much longer than I!) "It is still I, countess, despite the shrinkage."

"The shrinkage?" she murmured, slowly sliding out of the chair. As she subsided her cramped leg she made a little grimace of pain, but smiled as she limped toward me, her hand extended.

"Yes, I always shrink when I get wet," I explained, resorting to facetiousness.

Then I bent over her hand and kissed it. As I neglected to release it at once, the cuff of Poopendyke's best coat slid down over our two hands, completely enveloping them. It was too much for me to stand. I squeezed her hand with painful fervor and then released it in trepidation.

"Poopendyke goes to church in it," I said vaguely, leaving her to guess what it was that Poopendyke went to church in, or, perhaps, knowing what I meant, how unpressed to be in it for the time being. "You've been crying!"

Her eyes were red and suspiciously moist.

As she met my concerned gaze, a wavering, whimsical smile crept into her face.

"It has been a disgustingly wet night," she said. "Oh, you don't know how happy I am to see you standing here once more, safe and sound, and—and amiable. I expected you to glower and growl and"—

"On a bright, glorious, sunshiny morning like this?" I cried. "Never! I prefer to be graciously refulgent. Our troubles are behind us."

"How good you are!" After a moment's careful scrutiny of my face she added, "I can see the traces of very black thoughts, Mr. Smart, and recent ones."

"They were black until I came into this room," I confessed. "Now they are rose tinted."

She bent her slender body a little toward me, and the red seemed to leap back into her lips as if propelled by magic. Resolutely I put my awkwardly unginhly arms behind my back and straightened my figure. I was curiously impressed by the discovery that I was very, very tall and she very much smaller than my memory recorded. Of course I had no means of knowing that she was in bedroom slippers and not in the customary high heeled boots that gave her an inch and a half of false stature.

"Your mother is here." I remarked hurriedly.

She glanced toward my bedroom door.

"Oh, what a night!" she sighed. "I did all that I could to keep her out of your bed. It was useless. I did cry, Mr. Smart. I know you must hate all of us."

I laughed. "'Love thy neighbor as thyself,'" I quoted. "You are my neighbor, countess. Don't forget that. And it so happens that your mother is also my neighbor at present, and your brothers too. Have you any cousins and aunts?"

"I can't understand how any one can be so good natured as you," she sighed.

The crown of her head was on a level with my shoulder. Her eyes were lowered. A faint line of distress grew between them. For a minute I stared down at the brown crest of her head, an almost ungovernable impulse pounding away at my sense of discretion. I do take credit unto myself for being strong enough to resist that opportunity to make an everlasting idiot of myself. I knew even then that if a similar attack ever came upon me again I should not be able to withstand it.

All this time she was staring rather genuinely at the second button from the top of Poopendyke's coat, and so prolonged and earnest was her gaze that I looked down in some concern, at the same time permitting myself to make a nervous, jerky and quite involuntary digital examination of the aforesaid button. She looked up with a nervous little laugh.

"I shall have to sew one on right there for poor Mr. Poopendyke," she said, poking her finger into the empty buttonhole. "You dear bachelors!"

Then she turned swiftly away from me and glided over to the big armchair, from the depths of which she fished a small velvet bag. Looking over her shoulder, she smiled at me.

"Please look the other way," she said. Without waiting for me to do so she took out a little gold box, a powder puff and a stick of lip rouge. Crossing to the small Florentine mirror that hung near my desk, she proceeded before my startled eyes to repair the slight—and to me unnoticeable—damage that had been done to her complexion before the sun came up.

"Woman works in a mysterious way, my friend, her wonders to perform," I paraphrased calmly.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and with blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. Free from harmful drugs.

Cffesley

On Sunday Mr and Mrs Samuel Wright drove over to Varney, near Durham, to attend the funeral of Mrs Geo. Pollock, Mrs Wright's mother. Deceased had reached the advanced age of 81. This is the tenth relative of Mr and Mrs Wright to pass away within fourteen months.

Fourteen battalions from Canada have been ordered overseas. One of these is the 71st, in which are the following Chesley boys: Glenn Ross, Archie Sloan, Clarence Dan m, John Dawns, Tom Jounson, Wilfred Davidson and Herbert Fry. They will train for a while in England and will then go direct to the Western front.

Five young ladies of this town, Misses Alma Halliday, Ida Halliday, Mayme Montgomery, Ethel Reed and Eva Mc Donald, got up a Red Cross Tea in the Armory last Saturday. The tea was well patronized and the quintette of patriotic girls made $53 after paying all expenses. The net proceeds went to augment the Red Cross funds.

The Reeve of Elderslie is a man of convictions and has very little encouragement for young men who can and ought but will not, imitate the splendid example of his own son, John, by enlisting now. A young man of military age, single, when he heard that John Cass had enlisted, applied to Mr Cass for his position, but Mr. Cass replied, "I will let my farm grow up in grass first!" Mr Cass has done splendid patriotic work, and the Township of Elderslie has reason to be proud of him. The Reeve says that if there is another regiment formed he will go himself.

Woman's Health Needs Constant Care

Work and Worry Leaves Her a Victim of Many Distressing Ailments

Every woman's health is peculiary dependent upon the condition of her blood. How many women suffer with headache, pain in the back, poor appetite, weak digestion, a constant feeling of weariness, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, pallor and nervous. If you have any of these symptoms you should begin to-day to build up your blood with Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Under their use the nervous energy of the is restored as the blood becomes red and pure and the entire system is strengthened to meet every demand upon it. They nourish every part of the body, giving brightness to the cheeks and lips.

Mrs. Jas. S. Francis, Oakwood, Ont., says: "I should have written long ago to tell what Dr. Williams Pink Pills did for me, but I suppose it is better late than never. In June, 1913, I had to go to an hospital for an operation for female weakness. I was in the hospital for a month, before I was able to get home. Three weeks after this I started for a trip to the Pacific coast, in the hope that my health would further improve. On the way I stopped to visit a sister in Southern Alberta, and on arriving at her home (after a 35 mile drive) I was completely done out. I found my sister ill, her baby having been born the week before. As there was no one to help I had to take care of her and the child and do the household work, and in the three weeks that passed before my sister took charge I was completely worn out, and again nearly ill However, I started on my westward trip and decided to stop off at Banff, where I remained a week, but it did not seem to help me, and resumed my journey. On the train I took sick, and could not eat and I was alone my condition was pitiable. Finally the porter wired ahead to North Bend for a doctor to see me. The doctor wanted me to leave the train and go to an hospital, but I determined to continue my journey to Vancouver. The medicine the doctor gave me did not help me, and I was getting worse all the time. And then a young man who had the opposite berth asked me if I would try Dr. Williams Pink Pills and gave me a box he had. I used these and the porter got me two more boxes, and by the time I reached my journey's end I was feeling some better. I stayed two months on the coast, and continued taking Dr Williams Pink Pills all that time. I had gained in weight and appearance, and when I started for home I felt better than I had done for years. Now I always keep Dr. Williams Pink Pills in the house, and both my husband and my young daughter have been benefited by their use. I bless the day that young man on the train gave me his box of pills oth erwise I might never have tried them, and would have still been an invalid."

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Cutting Down Expenses

A great number of people have unfortunately, had their earnings reduced since the war, and consequently they deem it wise to cut down living expenses. One sensible plan is to eat less of the highly refined foods and meat and more of the coarser and more nutritious cereals such as Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal. This is the most wholesome, most nourishing, and most healthful cereal food on the market, and costs much less than the highly refined breakfast foods.

Sold by live grocers at 10 and 25 cents.

Try the ready-cooked Roman Meal Nuggets. They are delicious with hot milk.

When Cruelty Isn't Cruelty.

The magistrate of the department of Seine-et-Oise, in France, once gave a decision in a claim of cruelty to a horse which is remarkable as a legal subtlety. The law provides that the offense is punishable only when committed in public. If the sore is covered by the collar, he holds, the offense is not committed in public. If it is not covered by the collar there is no cruelty. In either event the case must be discharged.

Matter of Endurance.

"My dear," said Mr. Hawkins to his better half the other evening, "do you know that you have one of the best voices in the world?"

"Indeed?" replied the delighted Mrs. H., with a flush of pride at the compliment. "Do you really think so?"

"I certainly do," continued the heartless husband; "otherwise it would have been worn out long ago!"

The Abyssinians.

"The handsomest people in the world," said a university lecturer, "are the Abyssinians, slender, high browed, copper hued—these people who have reduced stealing to a science and begging to a fine art. The color of the healthy man is a black and a greenish bronze hue, of a shade often seen in statues, but generally believed not to be found in real life. These men, by the way, have the most luxuriant hair in the world, and yet they never can grow more than the scantiest, scrawniest beards."

Can't Be Done.

The Wife—This paper says that New York doctors have formed a society to study methods for staying the advance of old age. The Husband—Well, tell 'em you've tried prevarication and reducing the number of candles in your birthday cakes, and neither will do it.

Some Consolation.

"There's one consolation about being in jail, mum."

"What is it, my poor man?"

"After I once go to bed nobody here makes me get up and go down to be sure that the back door's locked."

Yachting Ethics.

In yacht racing every yacht is bound by rules to abandon the race and go to the assistance of any yacht or person in peril.

Clothes a Guide.

Beautiful dress is chiefly beautiful in color—in harmony or parts—and in mode of putting on and wearing. Rightness of mind is in nothing more shown than in the mode of wearing simple clothes.

It All Depended.

A gentleman who was spending a month in the highlands of Scotland went to hire a carriage for the purpose of taking his family for a drive. He looked at a vehicle and inquired how many it would hold. The hostler scratched his head thoughtfully and replied, "It hands four generally, but six if they're weel acquaint."—Argonaut.

The Listowel Banner says. Due to pressure of other matters and haste in writing the copy for last week's issue, careless oversight was made by The Banner in the write-up of Tuesday's recruiting meeting, no reference being made to the strong and appealing address of Rev. The social given by the A.Y.P.A. on Friday night was a decided success, when one takes into count the hockey match falling on that evening which was very unfortunate. The rigs left at 7.30 and a very jolly bunch they were. A program was given at Mr Carver's consisting of solos by Miss Carver, Miss Amy Brown, of Owen Sound, Miss Laura Gregg and Mr H. Williams Messrs. Mathews and Dr Foster gave addresses, and instrumental music was given by Miss Brown. The evening was spent with games, and lunch was served during the evening.

Three more of our soldiers being called away, their last evening in town was spent in a jolly way, their fellow soldiers giving them an entertainment in the form of a dance. Every second dance was "square" and those that did not round dance certainly enjoyed the square ones, and the fun lasted until the wee sma' hours. There was a good attendance, civilian suits only being seen here and there, thru' out the khaki. The Cape Croker was in attendance and the selections, as usual, were encored and enchored. Everyone did everything in their power to make the "soldier laddies" last evening a jolly one, and they certainly succeeded.

Greatest Patriotic Demonstration Ever Held in Wiarton

A Big Street Parade, And Mass Meetings—Splendid Addresses

"We are going to win. put that in your crop and keep it there, but we are not geing to win by talking, it will be harder work than that," so said Major J G Tolmie, M. P. P.. Windsor, near the close of a most effective and eloquent address in the town hall. Monday evening upon the occasion of the great patriotic demonstration. And what a surging mass of humanity were in that hall, probably hundreds were turned away. It was the biggest town hall meeting ever held here, and certainly one of the best,and the very best of its kind.

The Bruce Regimental band spent Sunday in town and during the morning at the head of the Wiarton detachment, marched to St. Paul's church. where they worshipped. They had driven on Saturday to Lions Head, where a great demonstration was held in the afternoon, and returned to Wiarton that night.

It was cold Monday morning, the mercury crawled away down in the glass tube, otherwise there would have been more farmers in town that day. As it was there were hundreds and when the evening came, and the stores were closed, and the parade began, the town assumed a holiday and patriotic appearance. In the parade was the Bruce Regimental band and they are some players. artists etc., the Cape Croker band, and the Wiarton town band, then the Wiarton detachment, the Heyworth detachment and the Cape Croker detachment of the Bruce 160th the Boy Scouts, the Cadets, and the students of the High School. The music was patriotic and heart thrilling. There were two public meetings one at 3-30 and the other at 8 o'clock.

Mayor Baines occupied the chair in the evening and on behalf of the corporation welcomed the visitors to the town. He stated that all the Bruce Peninsula had been asked to contribute towards the battalion were 230 men and now 232 of these had been raised, consequently if the other parts of the County had done as well the battalion would now be practically raised.

Col. Clark's Address

Col Hugh Clark M. P. was the first speaker. and he took considerable pride in what Bruce County is doing. It has reached the high water mark in taxation in giving $7,500 per month, but even this has not prevented voluntary giving At the present time the battalion is 870 strong, and before its formation took place many had enlisted in other battalions elsewhere, so he felt that no other county in Canada had done more for the Empire, and a whole lot of this is due to the work of Judge Klein, the President of the Bruce War Auxiliary. If we have failed in some things we wanted in this war, so have the Germans. Conditions have shown that Great Britain was not prepared for this war as well as Germany. She was living in a fool's paradise so far as Germany was concerned before August 1914, never dreamed that Germany would break her treaties, consequently was not prepared. Had she been as well prepared as Germany the war would never have taken place, or if it took place it would have been soon over. The man who says England had no business to go into this war is the most ungreatful man that ever lived, and Canada has as much right to regard herself a part of Empire as the arm has to regard itself a part of the body. We will never have peace in the world if Germany wins because the Anglo Saxon race will not submit to. domination, it is not in their line. The speaker then showed that responsible government in Germany is only a myth, the Kaiser is the whole government, and if we want to return out the government we have to turn out the Kaiser. He believed in the ultimate victory of the allies because right must prevail and justice must be vindicated.

Judge Klein Talked Plainly

We are not going to be suckers, said the judge, we are going to help Great Britain. Prussian militarism must be stamped out. Every German who came to this country had to swear allegiance to our sovereign, and the Judge read the oath, and called upon those of German extraction to fight for the country for which their fathers had taken the oath of allegiance. He maintained Canada is the richest country in the world and if Germany wins the first thing will be a big war indemnity from Canada Every man who had a farm would be practically a pauper, and would have to work for 50c a day and board himself. Now is the time to wake up. There are five million German and Austrian reservists in the United States willing any day if things go wrong to rise up and possibly invade Canada. And the Judge hinted very strongly that the men now being raised might be needed to protect Canada from this very danger. The United States could not protect us as she has only 50,000 soldiers. We may have to raise another regiment to protect one another, and there are sufficient men in Bruce County between the ages of 18 and 45 to raise six regiments. We are not paying anything, said the Judge, in this war, what do $90,000 amount to? To the man with a $3,000 farm, when paid by debentures, it amounts to only 2c per week. What have you money for if it is not to protect Canada?

He had nothing but contempt for the farmers who did not want their sons to go, but to stay at home and salt down the money. If you cannot go yourself do not be a Judas Iscariot.

Father Cadieux

The genial priest from Cape Croker has always been a favorite in Wiarton, and his heart is in the right place at this moment. He is all heart for the Empire, and through his efforts 36 Indians are now wearing the King's uniform, and he said to the audience "it is a shame to have the Indians give you lessons on loyalty." He told of an Indian mother, now dying at the Cape, but proud and happy in the fact that four of her sons had enlisted, and he closed by saying. "You are a coward if you do not enlist."

Lieut. Whitehead

A very forceful address was delivered by this young gentlemen, who was a law student, but dropped his books at the call of his King and country. We have plenty of munition, what we now need is more men, and he wanted to know if it was a square deal that those 130 Wiarton recruits should go over and fight the battle for others who could go just as well. Victory in this war can only come through sacrifice.

Major Tolmie M. P. P.

The closing address was delivered by Major Tolmie, it was then very late, but the audience would have remained much later to hear him. His was a most masterly address. Strange is it not, he said, that we should quietly worship yesterday and to-day we look one another in the face and ask if we should help in the great war. Great Britain got in this war that she might defend the weak. assist the oppressed, does this not stir your blood, now she is fighting for her very existence. Great Britain is the home of democracy, and Germany is the home of autocracy, and there is not room enough in the world to-day for German ideals and British ideals. We are fighting to settle the question for our children that right is might instead of might being right. The speaker was proud when he was ordained as a Presbyterian minister, proud when he was elected as the representative of Windsor in the local legislature, but the proudest day in his life was when he put on the khaki. It is worth while living in an age like this to see the unity of all classes and creeds in the Empire, to see John Redmond and Sir Edward Carson shaking hands and telling the British government that they could withdraw every soldier from Ireland, when both Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier wanted to give the last man and the last dollar to defend the Empire. Britain never asked us to assist her, and he was proud that there is no compulsion in Canada. If you want to stay at home, stay at home if that is the kind of stuff you are made of. He did not wish the Kaiser any harm, but if he were a Roman Catholic he would like to see him spend ten million years in purgatory. And he concluded his address by making a stirring appeal for recruits to which there was a response.

There was a lot of music during the evening. the band gave excellent selections Messrs. Hamilton and Gilbert gave a duet, Private Ammond, Walkerton, delighted the audience with the mouth organ and Tendy Westfield sang a patriotic song. Quite a lot of money was raised towards purchasing instruments for the Bruce Regimental band Father Cadieux giving five dollars.

In a very short time the hall was crowded to the doors and many were turned away in spite of the cold and disagreeable day. The speaking, the airs of the band and other parts of the program was well rendered and by the way the people turned out it shows that the people take interest in recruiting and helping the boys along. ## Presentation To Pte. Roy Holler.

On the evening of February 19th. the residents of Hope Bay gathered at the residence of Mrs Joseph Holler and presented her son with a wrist watch and the accompanying address, to which Pte. Holler made a most suitable reply. After the presentation refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was spent. Mr Fred Weaver presented the watch and Mr George Thompson read the address.

Hope Bay, Feb 19th, 1916.

To Private Roy Holler

On learning of you offering yourself to do duty for His Majesty the King, we the people of Hope Bay, felt a desire to in some way compliment you on taking such a noble stand. We feel it the duty of every young man physically fit to go forward to duty and help defend the principles and liberty of our country. Britain is in need of men to fight her battles, Germany's teachings are that might is right and that militarism should dominate the world Thus the innocent people are to-day at war not knowing that even their own manhood and liberty are being destroyed. There never was a time since the Battle of Waterloo that Britain was so hard pressed to protect that little Island in the sea, and to save her colonies and only for Britain and her colonies Germany would have over run all Europe, and Canada would be among the humbled and trodden down and we therefore congratulate you and all British subjects, who go forward to uphold the glorious principles of our Empire, and we earnestly hope you will be spared to come back to our midst and we now ask you to accept this small token of our regard, a wrist watch, and although you are far away on the plains of Flanders and France you will not be forgotten.

Hepworth

Another of Hepworth's pioneer citizens passed to the great beyond last Sunday afternoon at 12.30. It was indeed a shock to the entire community when it was learned that Mr. Thomas Kemp had passed away.

Although it is a matter of two years since he enjoyed his usually good health, as he fell from a load of grain,— he did not complain until some six weeks ago, but it was not thought at all serious until two weeks after. Three days after that he was taken to his bed and was confined there until the time of his death.

Deceased was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1845, and came to Canada when five years of age, and made their home at Fenelon Falls, Victoria County. From here, the family moved to Arran Township. It was while here, he met Miss Martha Dickson, who had been out from Ireland one and one-half years. There they were married on December 28 1869 and went to Mount Hope where they lived for six years then moved to Dubbington where they remained for nearly a year thence he came to Hepworth, and settled on his farm, which is now owned by Mr. W. Binns. He had previously been to Hepworth, his first trip being thirty-eight years ago He remained on this farm until the spring of 1915, when he went to Wiarton. Last summer he, in company with his daughter, took a trip to visit friends and relatives in the United States. Shortly after his return he came to Hepworth,( November 1915) and opened a new grocery, he having purchased the McLeggan Estate.

Walkerton

The 160th Battalion are making arrangements to rent the large roller and skating rink here from manager Clark at $30 per month and transform it into a school for training non-commissioned officers and as a place for billeting soldiers. It is expected that a week or so will see another hundred or more recruits arrive in town and the billeting of the men is threatening to be some problem.

The Carter Scholarship first prize award of $100.00 for the pupil taking the highest number of marks in Bruce county at the Upper School examination in June 1915, was won by Miss Helen S. Harkley a Walkerton High School student and youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Harkley of Brant. The results which were made known in a letter to Principal Morgan here on Saturday last were a source of much satisfaction to the teacher and of great credit to the pupil. The second prize award, valued at $80. went to Miss Elizabeth Krug of Chesley, and the third prize of$ 40. was won by Wilfred J. Lennox of Wiarton. These three scholarships were provided for by the will of the late J. I. Carter of Sarnia, and are to be available each year for the city of Toronto and 24 counties in Ontario, making an annual expenditure for this purpose of $100.00.

It was two months on Monday since recruiting for the Bruce Battalion started here, and the fact that 800 men were found to have enlisted by it's second monthly birthday puts the Bruce force ahead of any other county Battalion in Ontario for rapid recruiting and establishes a record for the Province of which Colonel Wier and his staff are justly proud. At time of going to press we learn that the force is nearly 850 strong, or less than a hundred behind Grey County which has been recruiting for six months, and away ahead of Huron which has been much longer in the field than Bruce. The Northern parts of the county are doing splendidly but some Southern townships will have to come up if they don't want to do disgraced when the full muster roll is read.

our last issue the following recruits have signed up in Walkerton.

Though almost entirely a German settlement Formosa is showing its sympathy towards the allied cause and deserving protection under the British flag by its actions in helping to assist in the great struggle of supplying comforts to the men that left their homes to uphold the honour of the Dominion. About a week ago they formed a Red Cross Society and after a canvass of the village and vicinity succeeded in bulging the funds by $221.. The ladies are now working overtime to keep the sox on the feet of our heroes and expect before many moons to have a hundred pairs of hand made sox ready for shipment.

Crown Attorney Dixon of Walkerton has been apprised of a gruesome discovery and tragic happening in a bush in Greenock township, near the village of Lovat in which George McCracken, a farm laborer, was found on Friday afternoon lying cold in death with throat cut and a sharp axe lying against a tree a few yards distant. Mc Cracken, who worked for Peter Mc Arthur, was last seen alive by Mc Arthur's son John, about 8 o'clock Thursday night when he was doing his chores about the barn. As he did not turn up, the boy strolled through the bush about three quarters of a mile from their home on Friday afternoon and was horrified to find the man lying dead on the ground with his throat cut. As the sharp axe with which the deed was supposed to have been committed is reported to have been found standing against a tree several yards distant from the body rise is given to suspicions that he may have been killed elsewhere and the body and axe carried to where found, although the suicide theory generally prevails. It is possible the body which has been buried, will be exhumed, and a coroner's inquest be held over the remains.

Eat an Active Food

To avoid indigestion and constipation, eat less of the highly refined fancy cereals and starchy foods. What the stomach, liver and bowels require is an unrefined active cereal to keep them working right. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal has more active, stimulating power than any other breakfast cereal. It contains whole berries of wheat, whole berries of rye, deodorized flaxseed and bran. Makes delicious porridge and all baked products.

At all grocers, 10 cents and25 cents. Made by Roman Meal Co., Toronto.

Lieut J. B. Bell, son of our citizens, Mr and Mrs W. D. Bell, who went overseas with B Company of the 18th Batt. has been covering himself with glory at the front and back into the head lines Canadian duffies. He was one of two officers to lead a patrol to the German trench and secure valuable information. Jimmie comes of good fighting stock and we are not surprised he has been mentioned in despatches, something every soldier desires. The report in the daily is as follows. "On the night of Feb. 11-12 a hostile working party was discovered by scouts of our 18th Western Ontario Batt in front of the enemy's trenches. On, machine guns were turned on the party and at least two casualties resulted. The following night a daring reconnaissance was made by a patrol of our 18th. Batt under Lieuts Baxter and Bell. In spite of hostile fire our patrol crossed the enemies wire and getting under the parapet at one of the strongest points in this section of the German trenches succeeded in bringing in information of considerable value. The enemy trenches were heavily manned at the time, but our patrol withdrew without any casualities."

Knox Church bell tolled as the funeral moved away from the house after services were conducted by Rev M McArtaur and the Masonic brethern. Mr. McArthur paid a high tribute to Mr Tolmie as a warm friend, a helpful counsellor, a constant attendant upon church services and a faithful public servant. Rev Mr Robinson, of Tiverton, assisted in the service. The Masonic service was conducted by Bruce Lodge, Tiverton, which was Mr. Tolmie's parent lodge, assisted by Northern Light Lodge, Kincardine. The local company of the 160th Bruce Battalion, under Lieut Cronin, also marched to the cemetery. The pall-bearers were Alex McCannell, James McEwen, A. P. McWhinney, Lachlan McLean, Le McKinnon and James Kippen.

French Counter-Attacks Are Driving the Enemy Back.

Terrific Battle at Critical Point on Western Fronts Has Already Dyed the Snow-clad Slopes Red, Says Correspondent—Enemy Now Holds Douaumont With Great Difficulty—French Losses So Far Are 15,000.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—The German assault on Verdun slackened somewhat in intensity yesterday over most of the line, which now lies directly under the guns of the forts. Narrowing their most desperate attacks to the short front between the Douaumont heights and the plateau north of the village of Vaux, to the east, the Germans here continued their efforts in a strong attack, but failed to gain ground.

The position of Fort Douaumont—the French official communiques do not call it a fort, but a "position"—was taken by the Germans Saturday, and is still occupied by small enemy forces. The French are closing in on this position on three sides, and announce that the German force is maintaining itself in the position only with difficulty.

The very unfavorable weather conditions with a heavy fall of snow may be one reason for the lessening of the force of the German attack; the despatches from the front indicate that heavy losses also may have had an effect. The slops east and west of the village of Douaumont, which has been the centre of the heaviest fighting, are covered with German dead.

Five separate attacks have been made by the French on Fort Douaumont in an effort to retake the position, the German War Office says. Each attack was made by fresh troops, but all five were repulsed with heavy French losses. The number of unwounded French prisoners taken in the seven days of battle, the Berlin statement says, has reached 15,000. Finding the position untenable because of the fire of both artilleries, the French have evacuated the Cote du Talou, to the west of Douaumont, and the position is now occupied, the French say, by either side.

In the official statement received yesterday from Berlin, the German War Office announces that the Germans pressing forward to the west of Douaumont have reached Nave, on the southern border of the wooded districts north-east of Bras, taking Champneuville and the Cote de Talou on the way. The taking of Champneuville already had been announced by the Germans, but the announcement later was contradicted by them as based on an erroneous report. To the east of Douaumont the Germans announce the storming of extended fortified works at Haraumont.

Paris is extraordinarily calm in the presence of the great battle now in progress around Verdun. There are no indications of tension or nervousness, but only sober confidence in the result prevails.

The desire among those who know the defensive strength of the lines seems to be that the attacks should continue, for, they argue, the losses on the German side would be in proportion to the efforts.

The whole front from the North Sea to Switzerland is on the alert, and all leave of absence has been recalled. The French maximum effort has not yet been made. The total French losses in killed, wounded, and prisoners since the Verdun battle began, it was authoritatively stated last evening, have been less than the German official communication claims fn prisoners (15,000).

Ever since 5 o'clock Friday morning the flower of the German army has been hurling itself in vain against Cote du Poivre on the high plateau behind Louvemont village. They seemed even to welcome the blizzard as giving possible protection from the 75's, but the French gunners know every inch of the ground and could fire to a hairsbreadth in the blackest darkness. These snow-clad slopes are now colored red.

It is estimated that the German losses in the Verdun fighting are now well over 100,000.

A German correspondent says that the front of Fort Douaumont was entirely destroyed by the concentrated fire of 17-inch and 12-inch guns, which blew the steel and concrete cupolas to fragments. One fort nearby was blown up by a high explosive shell which penetrated the magazine.

Before the attack hundreds of German engineers had been making roads for the conveyance of the 17-inch guns. French prisoners, dazed, said, according to the German correspondent, that the terrific fire quickly made Douaumont untenable.

As the great battle at Verdun reaches its climax sympathetic activity is spreading over the entire front. The guns in Flanders are heard on the Dutch frontier. The British made local attacks in the region of Armentieres, but the fighting is mainly confined to heavy artillery.

Enemy flying machines are out in great numbers. A very large battle plane, mounting two guns, was seen leaving Zeebrugge.

Sir Sam Will Visit England.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—The trip to England planned by Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, will probably be deferred by various events which have occurred. The Minister will now probably wait till the end of the session before going across, but will probably leave by April in any case. The Prime Minister, who is also expected to visit the Old Country again this year, will probably not go until the summer.

Allies Control Railway.

ROME, Feb. 28.—The Entente Allies have assumed control of the Greek railroads of Macedonia, east and west of Salonica, with the object of preventing the transportation of contraband of war.

CANADIANS HONORED.

Decorations Are Distributed Among Officers and Men at the Front.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—Major-General Sir Sam Hughes has received the following communication from the Canadian General Representative in France:

Canadian General Headquarters in France, Feb. 27.—(Via London.)—In connection with the successful minor operations carried out by our 28th North-West and 29th Vancouver Battalions, on the night of January 30-31, the following officers and men have been awarded decorations: Distinguished Service Order—Captain A. H. Jukes, 5th Gurkha Rifles, Staff-Captain in the 6th Canadian Infantry Brigade; Capt. D. E. McIntyre, 28th Battalion; Capt. K. C. C. Taylor, 29th Battalion. Military Cross—Lieuts. N. E. O'Brien and L. A. Wilmot, 29th Battalion. Distinguished Conduct Medals—Lance-Sergts. G. S. Turner and W. Burn, and Pte. J. C. Andrews, 28th Battalion, and Lance-Sergt. Kirkland of the 29th Battalion.

The Military Cross has also been awarded to Lieut. R. O. Hooper, and the Distinguished Conduct Medal to Lance-Sergt. L. Jackson and Lance-Corp. J. Hutchison, all three of our 19th Western Ontario Battalion, for a daring reconnaissance of the enemy trenches on the night of Jan. 25.

Active patrolling of our front has been constantly carried on. A few enemy patrols were encountered. Early on the morning of Feb. 16th a patrol of our 14th Montreal Battalion, consisting of Corp. E. A. Mott and Scouts Dwyer and Williams, discovered a small hostile patrol endeavoring to approach our wire. One of the enemy was about twenty yards in advance of his comrades. Creeping forward rapidly, our patrol succeeded in surrounding this man, while, becoming aware of its approach, the remainder of the hostile patrol retired hastily to its trenches. The German was then taken prisoner and brought back safely to our lines.

LINER SUNK BY MINE.

P. & O. Steamer Maloja Lost Off Dover With Many Lives.

DOVER, Feb. 28.—The steamship Maloja, a 12,431-ton vessel, belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Line, struck a mine and sank within half an hour two miles off Dover yesterday. More than 40 persons were drowned or killed as a result of the accident.

The Maloja left Tilbury only Saturday for Bombay with mails, 119 passengers of all classes aboard, and a crew numbering about 200, most of them Lascars.

The steamer had just passed Admiralty pier at Dover, and was opposite Shakespeare Cliff, when an explosion shook her from end to end. She listed immediately to port. High seas were running, and the captain, realizing that great damage had been done to the after-part of his vessel, tried to run her ashore, but the engine-room was swamped and the ship became unmanageable.

The plight of the vessel was observed, and dozens of craft went at full speed to her rescue. One of them, the British tanker Empress of Fort William, of 2,181 tons, struck another mine and sank nearby.

Eleven steamers, all but one British, have been reported lost during the week-end. The total loss of life is so far unknown. Some of the vessels were victims of mines and one was burned at sea, while the Fastnet and Tornberg are reported to have been torpedoed. Following is the list: P. & O. liner Maloja, 12,500 tons, over forty lost; Wilson liner Dido, 4,789 tons; Fastnet, 2,227 tons; Empress of Fort William, of Canada Steamships, Limited; Birgit, seventeen saved; Mecklenburg, 2,888 tons; Suevier, 2,896 tons; Denaby, 2,987 tons; Tummel, 531 tons, and Trignac, 1,447 tons, twenty-six lost; Tornberg.

VICTORY FOR BRITISH.

Gen. Lukins' Column in Egypt Routs Enemy Column.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—A Turkish column was attacked and routed by South African troops Saturday at Agagia, Egypt, according to a British official statement issued last night, which adds that the fleeing Turks are being pursued.

The text of the official statement follows:

"The enemy's column, under Nuri and Gasfar, was attacked Saturday morning at Agagia, about 25 miles south of Barrami, by General Lukin's column, consisting of South African troops, yeomanry, and territorial artillery.

"By half-past three in the afternoon the enemy had been completely routed, and was fleeing in scattered columns, pursued by our cavalry.

"At four o'clock aeroplanes reported them to be eight miles south-west of Agagia, and still being pursued."

German Submarine Refused to Aid.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Captain Cargill, of the Liverpool steamship Belle of France, who recently returned home, describes how his ship was torpedoed without warning off Alexandria. He says 54 members of the crew swam to the submarine and clambered to the undersea craft's deck.

The German crew, however, according to Captain Cargill, went below and closed the conning-tower hatches, leaving Captain Cargill's men outside. All but five of the latter perished, and the remainder were picked up by boats from the Belle of France.

Colonies for Soldiers.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Feb. 28.—The New Zealand Government has made such progress with its scheme for settling returned soldiers on the land that numerous large areas have already been set aside, and several of the new "colonies" are ready for occupation.

KERMANSHAH IS TAKEN

Russians Capture Another Fortress on Way to Bagdad.

Pursuit of the Turks is Going on With Unabated Energy, and Announcement is Made That Nearly 12,000 Prisoners Have Been Taken and 323 Guns—Capture of Kermanshah a Crowning Victory.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 28.—Official announcement was made last night that Russian troops in Persia, after dislodging the Turks from a series of positions, had occupied Kermanshah. In the Caucasus the pursuit of the Turks continues without abatement on the roads from Erzerum to Trebizond, the principle seaport, several villages having been occupied. It is again reported, unofficially, that a strong Turkish force has been defeated near Bitlis, the enemy coming from the direction of Mush.

Kermanshah is 230 miles south-west of Teheran and has a population of about 30,000. The route from Bagdad, Shuster, Ispahan by way of Hamadan and Suleimaniyah, meet there and make the city an important centre of traffic. The enemy forces defending it consisted of Turks, Kurds, some Germans, and some Persian tribesmen. At Kermanshah the Russians are within 150 miles of Kut-el-Amara in Mesopotamia, where the British force under General Townshend is besieged.

A Reuter's despatch says that Count Kanitz, the German commander at Kermanshah, committed suicide when the Russians entered the city.

The capture of the city, whose strong natural defences were believed to make it almost impregnable, is the crowning victory of an apparently unimportant and unnoticed campaign in the mountain regions of Persia between an invading Russian army and hordes of loosely organized Kurd and mountain forces under the command of skilled German and Turkish officers, and well equipped with modern guns.

The capture of 235 officers, 12,753 men, and 323 guns in the Erzerum operations was announced in the official statement from the Russian War Office yesterday. The pursuit of the Turkish army continues, and the Russians have occupied the village of Aschkats, 50 miles west of Erzerum on the road to Trebizond. The statement follows:

"Caucasus front: The result of the Erzerum operations was attained with relatively insignificant losses considering the great success we achieved.

"We took prisoner 235 Turkish officers and 12,753 men and captured nine flags and 323 guns, besides taking in Erzerum a Turkish fortress of the first class, with large depots of arms, munitions, supplies, and signaling and telegraph and telephone apparatus."

Heavy fighting ten miles from Bitlis, in Armenia, is taking place between Russian and Turkish armies, according to a report from the Central News correspondent at Amsterdam. It is said that Russian forces from the captured city of Mush drove back the Turkish army after a hotly contested battle.

During the last few days detachments have been vigorously pursuing the Turks in a fierce snowstorm, the Russian soldiers sometimes being up to their chests in snow.

RAILWAY DAMAGED.

French Airmen Wreck Station and Tunnel at Biezberg.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Allied airmen have attacked and destroyed the railway station and damaged the tunnel at Bleyberg, according to the Amsterdam Echo Belge.

In the region of Verdun Adjutant Navarre in a monoplane brought down by the fire of a mitrailleuse two German aeroplanes Saturday. This brings the number of enemy planes brought down this pilot up to five. The two machines fell within the French lines. Two of the aviators were killed and two were taken prisoners. A French air squadron, composed of nine bombarding aeroplanes, threw 144 bombs on the Metz le Sablons railway station. Another squadron bombarded the enemy establishments at Chambley, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

NO POSTPONEMENT.

Piracy Will Begin at Stated Time Says German Paper.

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—No authoritative announcement is available here concerning the report that Germany will postpone the putting into effect her announced intention to sink armed merchantmen without warning. The matter is said to be still under advisement.

According to the North German Gazette, all reports that the German authorities would deviate from their plans with regard to the sinking of armed enemy merchantmen are unfounded.

"An energetic conduct of our submarine war according to the principles laid down in the memorandum will begin at the stated time," says the newspaper, which is the semi-official German Government organ.

Lights Turned Off on Scottish Coast.

LONDON, Feb. 28. — Scotland, from Aberdeenshire to the English border, was darkened last night for the first time, as a result of a stringent lighting order.

Aberdeenshire is on the eastern coast of Scotland. From there to the English border, on the North Sea coast, are the Counties of Kincardine, Forfar, Perth, Fife, Edinburgh, Haddington, and Berwicks. Included in this territory are the important cities of Aberdeen, Dundee, Perth, Edinburgh, Leith, Dunbar, and Berwick.

Why the French Canadian Do Not Enlist

FRENCH Canadian politicians are assigning as the reason of that nationality not enlisting is because of the injustice of Ontario in not giving those of French extraction in this Province equal rights in being taught in their own language. If these craven cowards in Quebec think that they can obtain any concession in this way, and at this particular time they are doomed to dissapointment. The Irish of Ulster could drop Home Rule and fight for the Empire, and it will be to the interests of the French Canadian to show that he is as loyal as the people of Ulster.

Trouble Ahead.

THAT Ontario has probably considerable trouble ahead before the bi-lingual question is settled is becoming more and more evident, and that the French Nationalists of Quebec are taking the wrong time to press the matter is apparent. If Messers. Bourassa and Lavergne would ask the Kaiser if he would grant them their requests they would probably get a decisive answer We are of the opinion that he did not permit any bi-lingual humbug in Alsace and Lorraine. This movement to boycott Ontario wholesale houses is childish. The following despatch appeared this week in the daily papers.

Ottawa, Feb. 21—That French-Canadians should boycott Ontario houses was advocated by Father Guertin, parish priest of Hull, in a sermon there yesterday.

"The school trouble," said Father Guertin, "is just starting and no one can say where it will end. The fight has gone so far that the Pope himself could not stop it now The boycott against Ontario goods which has begun in Montreal should, in my opinion, extend all over the Province.

"As far as recruiting in Quebec is concerned, it is doomed. The Government cannot ask us to go to the relief of Belgium against Germany when the Ontario Government is trying to Prussanize us. No, our plain duty is to stay here and fight for our own flesh and blood. The clergy are a source of great strength in Quebec and we can only tell our people to stay here and fight their own battle. The French are a peace loving people, but once they are aroused, watch out."

Hanover's Reception to Capt. Musgrove

Hanover's reception to Captain Musgrove on his return from the front on furlough was a splendid tribute to the sacrifice and valor of an officer who is deservedly popular in not only his home town, but everywhere else throughout the county. The reception is said to have been the most brilliant and spectular ever witnessed in Hanover A galaxy of officers of the 147th Greys were present from Owen Sound to welcome their brother officer, including Col. Chisholm, of the 31st Regiment, Lt.-Col. McFarland, Major Eaton, Major Fleming, Capt. Corrie, Lt. Adams, Lt. Dobie Lt. Campbell and Lt. Lazier of the 147th Greys.

At 7.3o Captain Musgrove and his wife were driven to the hall at the head of a torchlight procession. The meeting was presided over by Mayor Taylor, who read an address to Capt. Musgrove from the citizens of the town, to which he replied as follows; "My friends of Hanover, I thank you from the bottom of my heart on behalf of the 31st Regiment and myself for this splendid reception. I feel that it is not a personal tribute to myself but an acknowledgement for the whole gallant regiment. All the men that went with me did their whole duty. It never fell to the lot of an officer to take out a finer bunch of men than I took to Valcartier Camp. The Greys were spotted for their good work at Valcartier by Col. Currie of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, who was looking around for men to fill up his battalion, and consequently the Greys were annexed to the Highlanders. The 31st headed all the companies for prowess in shooting. The boys of the 31st acquitted themselves with great gallantry at the front but unfortunately with many it was the end. No one felt worse than I and in a sense I hate to be the first to come back. I feel that they are giving me this tribute for the rest. As to the war, there is no doubt but that the flag will be kept flying. It is a tough job but as sure as night follows day just that sure are we coming out on top. So far it has been at a great cost but there's a greater cost yet to pay. I consider that it is the duty of every man who is physically fit and who cannot satisfy his conscience to get into khaki. The first Greys have a good lead and I know that the new 147th Battalion will add lustre to the Greys. I request the ladies and others to not forget the trenches. Personally I have never wanted for anything but I know of some others who did. You are fairly comfortable at home but the others have no picnic. One thing that would please me immensley would be to have more go from Hanover. I expect to go back again in two or three months."

An interesting feature of the evening was the presentation of a gold-headed cane to Capt. Musgrove, the presentation being made by Mrs. H H. Miller.

Captain Musgrove made a brief reply, thanking the citizens for the handsome present

Hope Bay

The Box Social held on Friday Feb. 18th by Hope Bay L. O.L No. 693 was a decided success. Although the night was very cold and stormy, the proceeds amounted to over $50.00

A fine programme of singing, recitations, dialogues and instrumental music was rendered. A patriotic address given by Capt. A McNally, Adjutant of the 160th, who was twice wounded in the trenches, was enthusiastically received.

The chair was ably filled by Bro. R.W. James who made a few suitable remarks.

At the conclusion of the program Bros. Geo.King and Jas.Watson were presented with wrist watches and the following address.

Hope Bay, Feb. 18th 1916.

To Bro. Pte. King
and Bro. Pte Watson—
Dear Sirs and Brothers—

On learning of you offering yourselves to do duty for his Majesty the King, we, your brother Orangemen, felt a desire to in some way, compliment you, on taking such a noble stand. We feel it the duty of every young man, physically fit, to go forward to duty and help defend the principles which our Orange order has always advocated. namely individual liberty and religious adherence to sacred obligations.

The present war is the outcome of wrong teaching wherein the Germans have been taught that might is right and that militaresm should dominate in the world. Thus innocent people are to-day at war not knowing that their own manhood and liberty is being destroyed

We therefore congratulate you and all British subjects who go forward manfully to uphold the glorious principles of our Empire. May the war soon come to an end but may that mean an honorable peace and ensure for posterity that peace which will uplift and endure.

May our flag ever wave.

Signed on behalf of L. O. L 693

Have You Sent You Renewal Yet?

There are still some readers of The Echo who have not sent in their renewal subscriptions for 1916. We know that they intended to do so, and that the very smallness of the amount involved is just the thing responsible for it being overlooked. If they knew what a convenience it is to the publishers to have all renewals promptly, and what pleasure it gives the editor to see that his work is appreciated, they would certainly make a point of remitting by the earliest possible mail. The Canadian Echo is giving its readers big value for their money. Nearly all the local papers are now $1.50 per year, and while The Echo remains at $1, it must insist upon the payments being in advance

"Granny" Chamberlain

Everybody's friend when they have coughs and colds and their children have croup and whooping cough.

Most everyone knows me. I have been going from home to home for nearly fifty years—always welcome, too, for I never fail in their hour of need.

I have helped young mothers whose babies were choking with croup, and been the comfort of parents whose children tramp to school through the wet winter weather. Many a cold and attack of bronchitis I have warded off, and thousands I have helped through the anxious moments of whooping cough. I have come to the aid of mothers and fathers when they had colds and influenza, and have been a relief to old folks suffering from bronchitis and asthma.

I have had a most varied experience; I go everywhere—among the rich and the poor, in cities and the country.

Now don't forget "Granny" Chamberlain! You will see me often now, for I am going to tell you of my experience and what can be done in your home with

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. Free from harmful drugs.

Hockey

Chesley and Wiarton locked horns here Friday night in the 2nd round of the Northern League and it was a good game played before a pretty full house.

The first period belonged entirely to Wiarton the score standing 4 to 0 and it looked like it might be a white wash for Chesley that night, but a hockey game is something like a horse race, one can scarcely tell how it will turn out.

In the 2nd period Chesley gingered up and came back strong and notched two goals one after another as quickly as shots from a double barrel gun, but that did not pull the fat out of the fire for them. They got 4 goals during this period, but Wiarton got 3, so the total score stood Wiarton 7 Chesley 4. Once during this period Tommy Nimmo, Wiarton goal keeper, thought he would like to take an excursion from his net and got out where the fun was going on, but before Tommy could get back and down to business Chesley had landed a goal.

The Chesley team are good players, the game might have been a little cleaner, the spectators take no pleasure in seeing players sent to the penalty box, and Chesley was the big sinner Friday night.

Tigers vs Indians,

On Tuesday night an exciting game was played in the Wiarton rink, between the Cape Croker Indians and the Tigers, resulting in a tie 4-4. The game was good and clean showing the teams were well matched. The Cape Croker band was in attendance and furnished its usual good music.

Turning the Tables.

The saying that a woman doesn't like to tell her age may be a cruel slander on the sex, but it was true of Mrs. Thomson. She never missed a chance of letting her friends know she was years younger than her husband.

"Yes, George is fifty years old," she remarked to a visitor one day, "and there are ten years between us."

But the visitor was an elderly spinster with a sour disposition.

"Is that so?" she exclaimed, in well assumed surprise. "Now, really, you look quite as young as he does!"

Clock Made of Glass.

A clock constructed throughout of glass is the result of six years' work on the part of a Bavarian glass polisher. The plates and pillars which form the framework are of glass and are bolted together with glass screws. The dial plate, hands, shafts and cogwheels are of glass, and glass wedges and pins are used for fastening the various parts of the running gear together. Like the clock itself, the key by which it is wound is of glass. The construction of the remarkable timepiece was a matter of infinite pains. Some of the parts had to be made as many as forty times before a clock that would go could be produced.

Times Have Changed.

Flo, aged ten, paying a visit to Aunt Edith, was describing a birthday party she had attended the day before. "And Maude, who gave the party, said to me: 'Oh, Flo, you've got on the same dress you wore to my party the last time! I suppose your mother couldn't afford to buy you a new dress this year?' " Aunt Edith laid her hand caressingly on Flo's curls and gently asked: "Of course, dear, you didn't remain at the party after that? If a little girl had made such a remark to me when I was your age I should have gone right home!" "Well, auntie," Flo replied, "times have changed. I slapped her face and stayed!"—London Express.

FARMERS

Farmers and Farmer's Wives? Read Willoughby's Farm Letter Why You Should Own a Farm Near Toronto.

The most valuable, and sufest asset that any nation or individual can possess is LAND. Nations go to war for its conquest; Individuals may well fight for its possession, as it is the one thing that remains for all time, a basis of all valuation and an everlasting source of wealth, and a primary means of sustaining life. Banks may fail, manufacturing corporations go to the wall, stocks rise and decline at the will of the moneyed interests that control the financial world, but the farmer and the Seasons go on forever as a producing power that no combination of promoters can check.

The great farming industry of this country, while greatly on the increase, is only in the infancy in its possibilities. Those who are realizing this fact are making their way towards the farm, where, in a few years, with the same common sense methods that they apply to other lines of business, they will be independent. Hundreds of city raised and city tired people are making this move in time to profit by the rising tide of increasing farm values and increasing prices obtained for farm produce. Are you one of these wise ones who are finding the satisfactory solution to the problem of how best to meet existing conditions of living, with the least possible mental and financial strain, and at the same time get the most of health and enjoyment? That the farmer is the healthiest, happiest, and most independent individual on earth is an accepted fact the world over. Many of our farmers are making the income of the merchant or banker, why not YOU?

The European war opens up an unparalled opportunity to every Canadian farmer, as food products will undoubtedly rise in price and he has double advantage of feeding his family at a minimum cost, and is in a position to sell his surplus farm products at a higher price than ever before.

The selection of the LOCATION in which to enter into farming should be most carefully considered, and should be goverened by these very important factors. First, products. Second, healthfulness, depending upon skill and climate conditions. When considering a farm, go into a section that offers you good climate, good schools, good roads, and good railway facilities, both steam and electric, first class cash markets, home comforts and conveniences, and fine shipping facilities and congenial social advantages.

Where WILLOUGHBY has these farms for sale there is every one of those advantages to be found at its best. The climate is mild with long farming season, and the soil is adapted to any class of farming, fruit, truck stock, grain, dairy or mixed farming, with cash markets right at the door that pay the highest prices for farm produce.

Almost the entire farming section in a few years hence will be supplied by hydro power

In the selection of a farm the inexperienced buyer must largely trust to the agent with whom he deals. It is therefore essential that the purchaser deal only with those who are at the same time known to hold a reputation and trustworthy position in the community in which they live.

I have been located in Georgetown for the past fourteen years and gladly refer you to any of our banks or business men as to my integrity and responsibility.

I make a speciality of selling LARGE AND SMALL FARMS; also small acreage, and will guarantee for fair treatment, the best of consideration, and any and all information you may desire in the purchase of a new home.

Upon application I will be pleased to send you free of charge MY FARM CATALOGUE.

I have about four hundred farms for sale which will give you a good selection to choose from.

Trusting I may be of service to you, I beg to remain,

Yours very sincerely,

PROFFESSOR HUTT, formerly of Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, spea of the Georgetown District

Mr. J. A. Willoughby,
Georgetown, Ont.

Dear Sir—In asking for my opinion regarding the country about Georgetown as a fruit and general farming district, I have no doubt you merely want me to confirm your own good opinion. However, I have no hesitation in speaking of the advantages of that district.

I look upon this as an ideal farming district for the following reasons. First, the country is rolling and picturesque, the land as a rule is good, easily drained, yet well watered by more springs and creeks, than are to be found in most sections of the country. Second, regarding the agricultural and horticultural possibilities of the district. I have seen ample proof in the wonderful crop of apples in some of the best kept orchards, the large shipment of milk and cream daily from the Station and also in the quality of the exhibits I have judged for several years past at the annual fall fair.

It was because of all this and the additional fact that land there has not yet reached the high prices that prevail a few miles farther east and south that I purchased fifty acres near Georgetown last fall and planted at once fifteen acres in orchard and while I cannot live there at present, I hope later to make my residence there and enjoy the fruits of my labors.

In conclusion I wish to thank you for the courtesy and fairness you have shown in all my dealings with you.

Wishing you all success, I am,

Yours very truly,
H. L. Hutt.

Testimonial from R. M. Hamilton, B. A., secretary of the Presbyterian's Laymen's Missionary Movement in Canada

Dear Mr. Willoughby—I am leaving for Alberta to-morrow, and before going away I desire to say that I have appreciated your honesty, integrity and genuine fairness in my dealings with you in connection with the purchase of my farm.

In the matter of terms I found you ready to do almost more than I would have asked, and while it remains to be determined what I shall make out of this investment, as far as an agents responsibility is concerned I have been well satisfied with your part in this matter

With very kind regards, and wishing you all success, I remain

R. M. Hamilton.

Mr. Willoughby, Georgetown, Ont.

Dear Sir—It affords me great pleasure to testify to your ability in hand[illegible] Estate, especially the sale of farms.

Your dealings with us in the sale of our 150 acre farm in the vicinity of Brampton Peel County, satisfied us fully that you are a most honorable, courteous, trustworthy gentleman, one who does his best to satisfy both seller and purchaser, and makes no false representations to either party

I have no hesitation in recommending you to any one requiring assistance in your line of business.

Wishing you every success, I remain,

Yours truly,
Mrs. Perdue, Toronto.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By

GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,

Copyright, 1910, by George Barr McCutcheon.

"No matter how transcendently beautiful woman may be, she always does that sort of thing to herself. I take it," said I.

"She does," said the countess with conviction. She surveyed herself critically. "There! And now I am ready to accept an invitation to breakfast. I am disgustingly hungry."

"And so am I!" I cried with enthusiasm. "Hurray! You shall eat Poopendyke's breakfast just to penalize him for failing in his duties as host during my unavoidable"—

"Quite impossible," she said. "He has already eaten it."

"He has?"

"At half past 6, I believe. He announced at that ungodly hour that if he couldn't have his coffee the first thing in the morning he would be in for a headache all day. He suggested that I take a little nap and have breakfast with you—if you succeed in surviving the night."

"Oh, I see," said I slowly. "He knew all the time that you were napping in that chair, eh?"

"You shall not scold him!"

"I shall do even worse than that. I shall pension him for life."

She appeared thoughtful. A little frown of annoyance clouded her brow.

"He promised faithfully to arouse me the instant you were sighted on the opposite side of the river. I made him stand in the window with a field-glass. No, on second thought, I shall scold him. If he had come to the door and shouted you wouldn't have caught me in this odious dressing gown. Helena"—

"It is most fascinating," I cried. "Adorable! I love dimity, pink things. They're so intimate. And Poopendyke knows it, bless his ingenuous old soul."

I surprised a queer little gleam of inquiry in her eyes. It flickered for a second and died out.

"Do you really consider him an ingenuous old soul?" she asked. And I thought there was something rather metallic in her voice. I might have replied with intelligence if she had given me a chance, but for some reason she chose to drop the subject. "You must be famished, and I am dying to hear about your experiences. You must not omit a single detail. I"—

There came a gentle, discreet knocking on the half open door. I started.

"Come!" I said.

Blatchford gravely swung the door wide open.

"Breakfast is served, sir—your ladyship. I beg pardon."

I have never seen him stand so fantilessly rigid. As we passed him on the way out a mean desire came over me to tread on his toes just as an experiment. Somehow I felt that he would say, "Thank you, sir," and there would be no satisfaction in knowing that he had had all his pains for nothing.

I shall never forget that enchanted breakfast—never! Not that I can recall even vaguely what we had to eat, or who served it, or how much of the naked truth I related to her in describing the events of the night; I can only declare that it was a singularly light hearted affair.

At half past 1 o'clock I was received by Mrs. Titus in my own study. The countess came down from her eerie abode to officiate at the ceremonious function—if it may be so styled—and I was agreeably surprised to find my new guest in a most amiable frame of mind. True, she looked me over with what seemed to me an unnecessarily and perfectly frank stare of curiosity, but, on sober reflection, I did not hold it against her. I was still draped in Poopendyke's garments.

At first sight I suppose she couldn't quite help putting me down as one of those literary freaks who typify intellect without intelligence.

As for her two sons, they made no effort to disguise their amazement. (I have a shocking notion that the vowel "i" might be substituted for the "a" in that word without loss of integrity.)

The elder of the two young men, Collingraft Titus, who being in the business with his father in New York was permitted to travel most of the time so that he couldn't interfere with it, was taller than I, and an extremely handsome chap to boot. He was twenty-six. The younger, Jasper junior, was nineteen, short and slight of build, with the merriest eyes I've ever seen. I didn't in the least mind the grip he bestowed upon me—and preserved with staunch fidelity throughout the whole interview, but I resented the supercilious, lordly scorn of his elder brother.

Jasper I learned was enduring a protracted term of absence from Yale. The time between his freshman and sophomore years already covered a period of sixteen months, and he had a right to appreciated the buttery side of his crust.

Mrs. Titus after thanking me warmly and, I think, sincerely for all that I had done for Aline, apologized in a perfunctory sort of way for having kept me out of my bed all night and hoped that I would not catch cold or have an attack of rheumatism.

I soon awoke to the fact that she was in the habit of centralizing attention. The usually volatile countess became subdued and repressed in her presence; the big son and the little one were respectfully quiescent; I confess to a certain embarrassment myself.

She was a handsome woman with a young figure, a good complexion, clear eyes, wavy brown hair and a rich, low voice, perfectly modulated. No doubt she was nearing fifty, but thirty-five might have been your guess, provided you were a bachelor. A bachelor learns something about women every day of his life, but not so much that he cannot be surprised the day after.

I endeavored to set her mind at rest by politely reminding her that I could not have slept in the bed anyway, having been out all night, and she smilingly assured me that it was a relief to find a literary man who wasn't forever saying flat, stupid things.

CHAPTER XX.

I Indulge in Plain Language.

I TOOK them over the castle—that is, a part of the castle. Mrs. Titus would not climb stairs. She confessed to panting, but drew the line at anything more exhausting. I fear I was too palpably relieved when she declined to go higher than the second story.

"It isn't necessary, Mr. Smart," she said sweetly, "to go into the history of the wretched Rothschetens, as a Cook's interpreter might do. You see, I know the castle quite well, and I have had all the late news from my daughter."

"Of course," I agreed. "Stupid of me not to remember that you are descended from"—

"Mother isn't half as stuck up about it as you might think, Mr. Smart," interrupted Jasper junior glibly. "She prefers to let people think her ancestors were Dutch instead of merely German. Dutch ancestors are the proper thing in New York."

"Jupple," said his mother severely, "how often must I caution you not to speak of New York as New York? Some day you will say it to a Jew. One can't be too careful. Heaven alone knows when one is in the presence of a Jew in these days."

"Oh, I'm not Hebraic!" said I quickly. "My ancestors were Dutch. They came over with the original skin grafter."

She looked puzzled for a moment. The countess laughed. Then Jasper saw the point. Collingraft was the last to see it, and then it was too late for him to smile.

We had tea in the loggia, and I dined with the family in the countess' apartment at 8 that night. I think Mrs. Titus was rather favorably impressed when she beheld me in my own raiment. Britton had smoothed out my evening clothes until they almost shone, and I managed to carry myself with unusual buoyancy.

Everything went very well that evening. We were all in fine humor; and the dinner was an excellent one. I perpetrated but one unhappy blunder. I asked Mrs. Titus if she knew the Riley-Werkheimers and the Rockswerths in New York.

"Visually," she said succinctly, and I made haste to change the subject. The countess looked amused, and Collingraft said something about it being more than likely that we did not have any mutual acquaintances in New York. His sister came to my rescue with a very amusing and exaggerated account of my experience with the Riley-Werkheimers and Rockswerths. Jasper was enthusiastic. Something told me that I was going to like him.

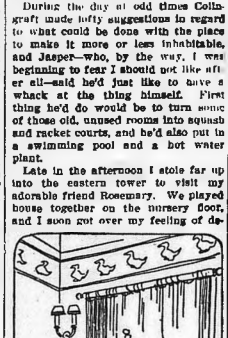
My troubles began the next day, and at the rather unseemly hour of 8 o'clock in the morning. Collingraft came down the hall in a bath gown and slippers, banged on my bedroom door and wanted to know why he couldn't have hot water for his bath. He was too full blooded and all that sort of thing, he said, to take a cold plunge. Moreover, he wasn't used to taking his tub in a tin cup. (That was his sarcastic way of referring to my portable, handy bathtub.) I asked him why he didn't ring for Britton, and he said he did, but that Britton was assisting Jasper in a wild chase for a bat which had got into the lad's room during the night.

"Thank your lucky stars it didn't get into mother's room," he said surlily. I silently thanked them.

He made such a row about his tub that I had to give him the pail of hot water Britton had placed in my bedroom preparatory to my own bath.

At breakfast Jasper complained about the bats. He couldn't for the life of him see why I didn't have screens in the windows.

Later on Mrs. Titus, who had coffee and toast in her room, joined us in the loggia and announced that the coffee was stone cold. Moreover, she did not like the guest chamber into which she had been moved by order of the countess. It was too huge for a bedchamber, and the iron window shutters creaked all night long.



"But you love the view you have of the Danube?" I inquired rather mournfully.

"I don't sit in the window all night, Mr. Smart," she said tartly.

I at once insisted on her resuming possession of my bedroom and promptly had all of my things moved into the one she had occupied during the night. When the countess heard of this arrangement she was most indignant. She got me off in a corner and truely informed me that I hadn't the vestige of a backbone. She must have said something to her mother, too, for when evening came around I had to move back into my own room. Mrs. Titus sweetly assuring me that under no consideration would she consent to impose upon my good nature and hospitality to such an extent, etc.

During the day or odd times Collingraft made lofty suggestions in regard to what could be done with the place to make it more or less inhabitable, and Jasper—who, by the way, I was beginning to fear I should not like after all—said he'd just like to have a whack at the thing himself. First thing he'd do would be to turn some of those old, aroused rooms into squash and racket courts, and he'd also put in a swimming pool and a hot water plant.

Late in the afternoon I stole far up into the eastern tower to visit my adorable friend Rosemary. We played house together on the nursery floor, and I soon got over my feeling of depression. But even in play I was made to realize that I was not the master of the house. She ruled me with the utmost despotism, but I didn't mind. She permitted me to slip honey from that cunning place in her little neck and managed to call me Duke. My heart grew warm and soft again under the spell of her.

The countess watched me at play from her seat by the window. She was strangely still and pensive. I had the feeling that she was watching me all the time and that there was a shadow of anxiety in her lovely eyes. She smiled at our pranks, and yet there was something sad in the smile.

I was young again with Rosemary and full of glee. She took me out of myself. I forgot the three Hines and with them many of my woes. Here was a cure for the blues—this gay little riddle of the unspeakable Tarnowsy!

I lay awake for hours that night, but when I finally went to sleep—and heaven knows I needed it—it was with the soporific resolution to put my house rigidly in order the very next day. The Titus family (omitting the countess and Rosemary) was to be favored with an ultimatum from which there could be no appeal. John Bellamy Smart had decided—with Morpheus smoothing out the wrinkles of perplexity—that he would be master to his own house.

My high resolve flattened itself out a little after the second sleep I had, and I make no doubt I should have quivered sadly in my purpose had not a crisis arisen to shame my courage for me in a rather emphatic way.

Shortly after breakfast Mrs. Titus came downstairs very smartly gowned for the street. She announced that she was going into the town for an hour or two and asked me to have one of the fishboiks ferry her across the river. There was a famous antique shop there—memory of other days—and she wanted to browse awhile in search of brasses and bronzes.

I looked at her aghast. I recognized the crisis, but for a moment was unable to marshal my powers of resistance. Noting my consternation, she calmly assured me that there wouldn't be the least danger of detection, as she was going to be heavily veiled and very cautious.

"My dear Mrs. Titus," I murmured in my dismay, "it isn't to be considered. I am sure you won't persist in this when I tell you that Tarnoway's agents are sure to see you and"—

She laughed. "Tarnoway's agents! Why should they be here?"

"They seem to be everywhere."

"I can assure you there is none within fifty miles of Schloss Rothhoefen. Our men are in the city. Four of them preceded me. This morning I had Mr. Bangs telephone to the hotel where the chief operative is staying—in the guise of an American tourist, and he does it very cleverly for an Englishman too—and he assures me that there is absolutely no danger. Even Mr. Bangs is satisfied."

"I am forced to say that I am by no means satisfied that it is a safe or wise thing to do, Mrs. Titus," I said, with more firmness than I thought I possessed.

She raised her delicate eyebrows in a most exasperating, well bred, admonitory way.

"I am quite sure, Mr. Smart, that Dillingham is a perfectly trustworthy detective, and"—

"But why take the slightest risk?"

"It is necessary for me to see Dillingham, that is the long and short of it," she said coldly. "One can't discuss things over a telephone, you know. Mr. Bangs understands. And, by the way, Mr. Smart, I have taken the liberty of calling up the central office of the telephone company and ask if they can run an extension wire to my dressing room. I hope you do not mind."

"Not in the least. I should have thought of it myself."

"You have so much to think of, poor man! And now will you be good enough to have Hawkes order the man to row me across the"—

"I am very sorry, Mrs. Titus," said I firmly, "but I fear I must declare myself. I cannot permit you to go into the town today."

She was thunderstruck. "Are you in earnest?" she cried after searching my face rather intently for a moment.

"Unhappily, yes. Will you let me explain"—

"The idea!" she exclaimed as she drew herself to her full height and withered me with a look of surpassing scorn. "Am I to regard myself as a prisoner, Mr. Smart?"

"Oh, I beg of you, Mrs. Titus"—I began miserably.

"Please answer my question."

Her tone cut me like the lash of a whip. My choler rose.

"I do not choose to regard myself as a jailer. My only object in opposing this"—

"I have never known anything so absurd." Two bright red spots appeared in her cheeks. "Your attitude is most extraordinary. However, I shall go to the city this morning, Mr. Smart. Pray give me the credit of having sense enough to— Ah, Collingraft!"

The two sons approached from the breakfast room, where they had been enjoying a 10 o'clock chop. Collingraft, noting his mother's attire, accelerated his speed and was soon beside us.

"Going out, mother?" he inquired, flicking the ash from his cigarette.

"If Mr. Smart will be good enough to withdraw his opposition," she said icily.

He gave me a sharp look. "What's up?"

"Mrs. Titus doesn't seem to realize the risk she runs in"—

"Risk? Do you suppose, Mr. Smart, I would jeopardize my daughter's"—

"What's up?" repeated Collingraft insistently.

"Mr. Smart calmly informs me that I am not to go into the city."

"I don't see that Mr. Smart has anything to say about it," said her son coldly. "If he"— He paused, glaring.

I looked him squarely in the eye. If he had possessed the acumen of a pollywog he would have seen that my Dutch was up.

"One moment, Mr. Titus," I said, setting my jaw. "I have this to say about it. You are guests in my house. We are jointly interested in the effort to protect the Countess Tarnoway. I consider it to be the height of imprudence for any member of your family to venture into the city now or at any time during her stay in this castle. I happen to know that Tarnoway is having me watched for some purpose or other. I don't think he suspects that the countess is here, but I greatly fear that he believes I am interested in her cause. He suspects me. You have heard of our recent encounter. He knows my position pretty well by this time. Mrs. Titus says that the man Dillingham assures her there is no danger. Well, I can only say that Dillingham is a fool, and I don't purpose having my own safety threatened by"—

"Your safety?" exclaimed he. "I like that! What have you got to be afraid of?"

"You seem to forget that I am harboring a fugitive from justice," I said tartly.

Mrs. Titus gasped. "How dare you"—

"The Countess Tarnoway is wanted by the authorities for kidnaping, and I think you know the facts quite as well as I do." I went on hurriedly. "God knows I am doing my best to protect her. I am risking more than you seem to appreciate. If she is found here my position isn't likely to be an enviable one. I am not thinking solely of myself, believe me, but after all I contend that I have a right to assert myself in a crisis that may affect me vitally. I trust you will see my position and act accordingly—with consideration if nothing else."

Mrs. Titus did not take her eyes off mine while I was speaking. There was an expression of utter amazement in them. No one had ever opposed her before in just this way, I gathered. She didn't know what to make of it.

"I fear you exaggerate the extent of your peril, Mr. Smart," she said dryly "Of course I have no desire to put you in jeopardy, but it seems to me"—

"Leaving me out of the case altogether, don't you think it is a bit unfair to the countess?" I asked in some heat. "She doesn't want to go to jail."

"Jail?" she cried angrily.

"There's no way to speak about"— began Collingraft furiously.

I broke in rashly. "If you please, Mr. Titus, be good enough to keep your temper. I have no desire to appear harsh and arbitrary, but I can see that it is necessary to speak plainly. There isn't anything in the world I will not do to help you and the countess in this unfortunate business, Mrs Titus. I hope you believe me when I say as much. I am her friend I want to be yours if you will let me But I reserve the right to say what shall be and what shall not be done as long as you are under my roof. Just a moment, Mr Titus! I think we are quite agreed that your sister is to depart from here on the 14th of the month. I am to be her escort, so to speak, for a considerable distance in company with Mr. Bangs. Well, it must be clearly understood that not one of you is to show his or her face outside these walls until after that journey is over. That's plain speaking, isn't it?"

"I shall go where I please, and I'll go to the town today"— roared Collingraft, getting no further for the reason that his mother, seeing that I was desperately in earnest, gave vent to a little cry of alarm and clutched her big son by the shoulder. She begged him to listen to reason.

"Reason!" he gasped.

"If you—or any of you—put a foot outside these walls," I declared, "you will not be allowed to re-enter. That's flat!"

"By crickey!" fell in fervent admiration from the lips of Jasper junior. I glanced at his beaming, astonished face. He positively was grinning. "Good for you! You're a wonder, Mr. Smart! By crickey! And you're dead right! We're chock fools!"

"Jasper!" gasped Mrs. Titus.

"Good for you, Jasper!" I cried warmly and took the hand he proffered.

"Collingraft, please take me to my room," murmured the mother. "I—I feel faint. Send for Aline. Ask Mr. Bangs to come to me at once."

I bowed stiffly. "I am sorry, Mrs. Titus, to have been so harsh, so assertive"—

She held up both hands. "I never was so spoken to in all my life, Mr Smart. I shall not forget it to my dying day."

She walked away from me, her pretty head held high and her chin suspiciously aquiver. Collingraft hastened after her, but not without giving me a stare in which rage and wonder struggled for the mastery.

I ran my hand over my moist brow.

"Gee!" said Jasper junior. "You've corked her all right, all right." He followed me into the study, and I couldn't get rid of him for hours.

CHAPTER XXI.

I Have a Tilt With Collingraft.

LATER in the forenoon the countess, with a queer little smile on her lips, told me that her mother considered me the most wonderful, the most forceful character she had ever encountered. I brightened up at that.

But Collingraft was not yet through with me. He sought me out just before luncheon. I was in the courtyard, listening patiently to Jasper junior's theories and suggestions concerning the restoration of the entire facade of the castle and what he'd do if he were in my place. Strange to say, I was considerably entertained; he was not at all offensive. On the contrary, he offered his ideas in a pleasantly ingenuous way, always supplementing them with some such salve as "Don't you think so, Mr. Smart?" or "I'm sure you have thought of it yourself," or "Isn't that your idea too?" or "You've done wonders with the joint, old man."

Collingraft came directly up to where we were standing.

"See here, Mr. Smart," he began austerely, "I've got something to say to you, and I'm not the sort to put it off. I appreciate what you've done for

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. At any drug store.

Cured Fifteen Years Ago of Piles and Eczema

By Using Dr. Chase's Ointment—Certifies That the Cure Was Permanent.

Some people have tried so many doctors and so many treatments in their search for cure for piles and eczema that they find it difficult to believe there is an actual cure.

MR. KETCHESON

The strong point about Dr. Chase's Ointment is that it not only brings relief promptly, but brings about actual and lasting cure.

In 1897 Mr. Ketcheson, 88 Douro street, Peterboro', Ont., wrote us as follows:—"I was troubled for thirty years with itching piles and eczema. I could not sleep at night, and when I got warm the itching was terrible. Eczema covered my legs down to the knees, perfectly raw. I have tried every preparation I could hear of. Seeing Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised, I procured a box, and this Ointment effected a complete cure."

On Sept. 28, 1912, Mr. Ketcheson wrote as follows:—"I received a letter from you to-day, saying that you found on file a statement made by me 15 years ago. I have always given Dr. Chase's Ointment a good name since it cured me, and shall tell you how I came to use it.

"I had suffered for many years from eczema and piles, and had tried doctors and everything I could hear of in vain. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I purchased it at once, and was soon completely cured. That was fifteen years ago, so there can be no doubt of the cure being a permanent one. I have met a great many people who have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Tara

Allenford was honored by the presence of Capt. Durard and his men on Wednesday afternoon.

They came to us more than 50 strong. When they reached the school they halted and Lieut. Aiken brought the school children into line and the march was continued down town, where Capt. Durard put the men through several exercises and then gave them an hour, during which they were served lunch.

When the school children sang "We'll Never Let The Old Flag Fall," the welkin was made to ring when the soldiers joined in on the chorus. Bring the "Boys" over again Capt. We are glad to see them and there are still certain fine young men in our midst who need to be inspired for Empire service.

The agreement between Tara and the Hydro Electric Commission has been signed and forwarded to the Commission. It is expected that work on the line to supply Tara with electric current will commence in the early part of the summer and should be completed by fall.

On Thursday, Feb.17th, 1916, a quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr.and Mrs. William Breen, Kilsyth, when their daughter Ema Pearl was united in marriage to Mr. Jack Sinclair, of Limerick, Saskatchewan. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Scott, of Kilsyth Presbyterian church, in the presence of the members of the family only. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a suit of navy blue serge and a small French hat.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

OWEN SOUND

Mr Gordon C. McIntosh of the North American Bent Chair Company staff left yesterday afternoon for New York from which place he sails for Rio de Janerio, Brazil, on a business trip for the Company.

He will be away about five months and will visit Buenos Ayres, Argentina and Montevidio, Uruguay, and other large east coast South American cities. The trip is being taken for trade development, the company having already established a connection in South America and the time is opportune when the Austrian competition has been eliminated.

Potatoes were selling on the market yesterday morning at from $1.50 to $1.80 per. bag, milder weather conditions apparently serving to bring down the price. Wheat showed a slight tendency to decline, $1.00 to $1.05 being the ruling figures despite other grains were firm with prices the fact that offerings were light, running as follows: Barley, 55 to 60c, oats, 40 to 47c, peas, $1.50 to $1.60c.

The produce market showed no unusual activity. Butter sold at from 31 to 33c, chicken at 19c, turkey 22c. Eggs were scarce with prices running from 25 to 27c.

A special meeting of the town council was held last evening for the purpose of passing a by law authorizing the purchase from the Dominion Securities Co Limited, Toronto of $200,000 Dominion war loan bonds bearing interest at 5 per cent. and payable semi-annually.

There is a distinct possibility that Owen Sounders may have the benefit of a parlor car service on certain passenger trains on the G T R. when the spring schedual goes into effect. Mr. W H. Smith whom in the city recently saw prominent officials of the G. T. R in this connection and is of the opinion that the parlor car service which is now operated as far as Palmerston will be extended to Owen Sound. The council of the board of Trade met yesterday and forwarded a letter stating that the service in question would be greatly appreciated by travellers to and from this town.

Another Owen Sound business man is in trouble, but in this case there are no real estate dealings at issue, the charge or charges being confined to boiler and accident insurance premiums. The defendant in the case is Robert A. McGregor, a well known insurance agent in Owen Sound, who is charged with failing to account for sums of money which he is alleged to have collected as local representatives of the Canadian Casualty and Boiler Insurance Co., and the General Accident Insurance Co., but which is claimed he has not paid over to the companies concerned. The biggest premium which involved is that of the Union Cement Co., amounting to $200 said paid to him in consideration of boiler insurance. Keenan Bros. also figure for boiler insurance to the extent of $40.00 The premiums McGregor is alleged to have appropriated to his one use represent accident insurance and were for the following amounts:—W.J. Wyllie and son $50., Robt. Douglas $7.00 The case came up for hearing at the police court yesterday morning, but was adjourned until Friday, March 3rd as neither side was ready to proceed with the taking of evidence.

A letter from Edmonton received by Mrs. Neil McDonald, of Sydenham last night, contained the gratifying information that the Hon. A. G. MacKay is recovering rapidly from his recent illness. The letter, which was from her son, Mr. J.C.McDonald was written last Sunday. Mr. McDonald said that he had just returned from the hospital, where he found Mr. MacKay getting along very well He said that he would be able to leave the hospital for his own home at the end of the week, but would require the attention of his physician and a nurse for some time yet. The people of Owen Sound will be greatly pleased to learn of Mr. Mac ay's favorable progress toward recovery.

That the Owen Sound upper lakes passenger business is important and very desirable is evidenced by the fact that the C. P. R. in its 1916 advertising in connection with its upper lakes fleet, are featuring the extra call which the Manitoba will make at Owen Sound, and giving large prominence to the fact that this boat will make connections with trains at both ends of the route. It was announced some time ago, through a communication to the board of trade, that the Manitoba would make an extra call here. But this was the extent of the information vouchsafed at that time. Last Monday, however, Capt. J. K. McLauchlan received a letter from Mr McDuff, manager of the Great Lakes Steamship Service informing him that Owen Sound has been promoted to the rank of a terminal for the Manitoba; and that Port McNicoll had been reduced to the ranks and is merely a port of call.

The Kind of Men They're Killing

(Mail and Empire)

Under the title of "The Kind of Men They're Killing," Mr. J.F. Collins, the London correspondent of the Boston Transcript, has a very fine tribute to a couple of young British officers whom he happened to know very well, and who have fallen at the front. Their names are by no means as famous as many who have laid down their lives in France and Flanders, but what Mr Collins writes of them should be long remembered. They were by no means obscure persons. One of them was one of finest Rugby players of his day, the other almost equally illustrious as an exponent of soccer; but they were not better known than hundreds among the twenty-five thousand British officers who have fallen in this war. They were in the opinion of Mr Collins, just fine representative specimens of British manhood, brave and cultivated gentlemen who neither sought nor shrank from death, whose careers were just beginning, and who, had they been spared, might have become great among the great, for they lacked nothing of the equipment of greatness.

Bently Blair.

One of them was Lieut. P. C. B. Blair, of the Rifle brigade, who was killed in action at Ypres. He was ordered to attack, and had leaped from the trench to lead his men, when a shell fell at his feet, and the next second was his last. Mr Collins says:

"Gone in a flash was all the noble promise of his life, leaving nothing but a memory and grief and pride behind. The one bereavement which alone had the power to daunt and to depress him a month before—his mother's death—now seemed almost a mercy. She had made the crowning sacrifice in giving up her only son for the supreme cause of the fatherland and liberty, and it was well that she was spared this final blow. To us who mourn him, his lonely father above all, these memories I have touched upon, and many more besides, are infinitely precious and abiding. There is no occasion to paint the waste and pity of it all, for these are of the essence and the irony of war. All we can say is that where danger was there went Bently Blair, and no death could be so apt for him as this, perishing in a noble cause. His college and his university will honor him, and the annals of manly sport will keep his laurels green, but if he had the choice he would have preferred next perhaps to a spot in that green hillside of his native shore) his lowly grave at Ypres with his comrades, and a simple cross above it, to any other fame the world has in its gift"

Great Athlete, Fine Scholar.

The writer had met him first as a guide on some of his pilgrimages in the Lowlands of Scotland. He was the minister's son, and a boy that everyone loved. Later on at school and college he had distinguished himself for his athletic prowess and for his scholarship. He played for Fettes three years, and in the last year his school team was the Rugby champion of Scotland. He went to Cambridge with several scholarships and played for his university against Oxford for four years. In 1913 he was an international player. Bently Blair was a young giant as gentle as he was strong, and he mastered his studies as easily as he mastered his sports. He distinguished himself in the Classical Tripos, and after leaving Cambridge studied for the Egyptian Civil Service. After having written his papers he was summoned to meet the Board of Examiners, and there to his amazement, instead of testing him on academic subjects, they asked his opinion of the plays of Shaw. It appeared that he knew as much about them and about temporary literature as he did about Rugby, and convinced the examiners that here was a cultivated man, whose mind was to him a kingdom, and that he could amuse himself and others even in the lonely stretches of a civil year in Egypt.

A Fine Officer

He received his appointment, but in the meantime war had broken out, and he had become a fine recruiting officer, training not fewer than 800 men. He applied for a commission but was told that he had to go to Egypt. Thither he went, but as soon as his first leave came he returned to England and enlisted. He proceeded to the front, and met death at Ypres, but not before his men had learned to regard him as the best officer in the British army. A few days after Bently Blair was killed by a shell, another man hardly his inferior in mental and physical gifts Lieut Cyril Bussy, another friend of Mr Collin's met his death somewhere in France. His father was the Nestor of the British Parliamentary press, famed, too, as an athlete, but in later years noted for his mastery of chess.

From China to Fight

Lieut Bussy was employed by a great bank in China when the war broke out. He immediately resigned his position and returned to England He made an exceptional name for himself in handling and drilling volunteers, and was kept at this task long after he had begged to be sent to the front. Finally the permission came, and it seemed as though his his dearest wish had been granted. He carried into active service the same soldierly thoroughness and efficiency that had marked him in camp. He was, as Mr. Collins says; "a genial and handsome giant, as good as he was great, unwearied in his service of others and in attention to his men." He, too, was stricken down suddenly. It is of the very nature of things, as the writer says that such as he must leave behind them troops of friends to lament their loss, and that such as he should die in war who never had an enemy except the enemies of their race.

All throughout the afternoon and evening were a marked success the proceeds of both the tag results and the tea room amounting to $140.00

NEURASTHENIA THAT FOLLOWS LA GRIPPE

Rest and a Tonic is the Proper Treatment Distinguishee Medical Authority Says

There is a form of neurasthenia that follows la grippe. Doctors call it "post grippal" neurasthenia.

One of the foremost medical authorities of New York city in a lecture to the international clinic, said:

"Broadly speaking, every victim of la grippe will suffer from post grippal neurasthenia also. Lowering of nervous tone with increased irritability is the most striking effect of the disease, languor of mind and body, disturbed, fitful sleep and vague pains in the head and elsewhere. The treatment calls for rest and a tonic."

If you have had la grippe read those symptoms again; "Languor of mind and body, disturbed, fitful sleep and vague pains in the head and elsewhere." If you have any or all of them it means that you are still suffering from the effects of la grippe and that you will not be well and free from danger of relapse until your blood is built up.

The treatment, says the distinguished physician quoted above, is rest and a tonic. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a non-alcoholic tonic, are particularly suited for building up the blood and strengthing the nerves after an attack of grippe. The rich, red blood expels the lingering germs from the system and transforms despondent grippe victims into cheerful, healthy happy men and women.

If you have had la grippe do not wait for a relapse or for the neurasthenia that so often follows grippe, but get a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now from the nearest drug store and begin the treatment at once.

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

160 Battalion C. E. F.

Dear young friend,—

We your friends and neighbors of the vicinity of Adamsville and Colpoys feel we cannot let pass the opportunity of showing you, in a humble way, our appreciation of your prompt and noble response to the call of our beloved King and Country in this terrible struggle. It is a source of great pride to us to see so many of our young men offering their services as you have done for the vindication of the rights of the weak nations, and for the crushing defeat of German militarism.

We ask of you to accept this watch not for its intrinsic value but hoping that during the trying hours through which duty may call you to pass, you may be reminded of the many pleasant associations of your boyhood days. May kind Providence grant you wisdom and judgment, as well as a safe return to your old home, bringing with you laurels of victory and credit to this great Canada of ours.

Signed on behalf of the community and others.
Robert E Tyndall

Believes They All Should Go.

(The Farmers Advocate)

I have read Peter McArthur's and A. Hutchinson's letters in your recent issues, recruiting in the rural districts. I, for one, cannot see with either of them. Have those writers read of the brutal treatment our British prisoners of war are receiving in Germany. To even stand in the way of an eligible man enlisting, knowing as well as I do what German Government would mean to us. To think of putting production before our liberty. This is no excuse for a man not standing for our flag.

The rural population has suddenly become terribly interested in production. I should think any man with a spark of loyalty has no difficulty in realizing his place is on the firing line just as quickly as he can get there. Mr Hutchinson's "arrant nonsence" about the women being helpless is nonsence on his part. My husband left home Jan. 1915, to do his bit; leaving me on a recently bought 50 acres to do what I could, with my father who owns the adjoining 50 acres. We run the 100 acres and I think I did my husband's share. I worked the second team in the spring, and pitched 30 loads of hay. A neighbor helped me half a day, and as the grain came along I followed the binder and stooked all I could, and forked every load to my dad. A neighbor helped us one day with his own boy and team. We had about 40 acres of wheat, barley, and oats, I made bread and always had enough to eat in the house. My little daughter helped considerably in that way, and then had time to attend Red Cross meetings twice a month, and helped sewing and knitting there, and I wasn't killed either. Many more farmers' wives could do it if they had to. Do you not think the farmer has a good deal more to loose than the ordinary working man in the town? His little cottage and few sticks of furniture don't count, as our 50 or 100 or 200 acre farms and stock would, and it's the farms and stock Germany would soon command. Let the medically unfit men come out and work on the farms. Recruiting officers are promising to let the lads home for seeding and harvest if they are in Canada.

On very many farms in Scotland and England, young women have taken the men's places, and what's more, in Scotland a farmer must have a permit from the Government to sell a neighbor a load of hay. In Ross-shire, out of a population of 8000, 5000 are fighting for their King and Country. I think you would find some farm hands missing there. It's time the rural Jack Canucks came forward if you hope to stand on the same footing as the other colonies. There are not many more Old Country men left to go. It is not the boys it is their parents who are holding them back. More shame to them. The same Providence who provided ways and means for me will do the same for all Canadian farmers and their wives. Where there's a will there's a way.

Mrs Arthur Remington.
Middlesex Co., Ont.

Wiarton Enters Senior Northern League Finals.

Unless all signs fail, unless the unexpected happens Wiarton will again enter the finals in the Northern League. The game last Friday night with Mildmay was called with short notice, in fact there is very little time to advertise league games. There will probably be only one more league game here this season, and those wanting to see it better keep asking the central as it is put on with 48 hours notice. The expected happened Friday night, Mildmay was defeated 13 to 4, but the score scarcely indicates the play Mildmay was quick at times as a steel trap. In the first period, within a minute after the game had started, before Wiarton got their eyes rubbed open, and knew that there was a game on, Mildmay notched a goal. That made the people sit up, they thought perhaps the visitors would hand something out to the Wiarton team they were not looking for. In the second period practically the very same thing happened again. Mildmay got away with two goals before Wiarton got really awake, but fireworks do not count. The score at the end of the first period was 5 to 1 in favor of Wiarton and at the end of the second period 13 to 4 in favor of the home team. Before this report is in cold print the return match will have been played in Mildmay, but unless something happens Mildmay is down and out.

The visitors, however, got in some combination, and their wings put up a pretty good game. In defence they were weak However they have not learned to skate a mile a minute because when Dad Ashley got his stride on he left them like a mogul would leave a team of horses hitched to a sulky plow. The Wiarton line up included Potter who played left defence. The game was clean the referee showed good horse sense.

Presentation to Mr Morgan Hahn.

Thursday evening the Bible Class and Choir of the Methodist Church showed their good will to Mr Morgan Hahn in the form of a social evening and a present of a purse of money. The evening was spent pleasantly with games and contests. Mr Prudham read to Mr Hahn the following address—

To Mr Morgan Hahn

On the eve of your departure from our midst your friends of the Choir and of the Adult Bible Class desire to record their appreciation of your fellowship and service. Your talents and devotion have not only won for you a large place in our hearts but we are assured have secured for you the wider field of service upon which you are soon to enter.

Our regret at your leaving us is rather a matter of congratulation, remembering as we must that it is the service of your King and Country that calls you. We shall follow your course both with interest and prayer and will hope that after the war is over you may be able to return with laurels worthily won.

That our appreciation and friendship is more than words we present it in the accompanying tangible form. Our best wishes go with you.

Signed on behalf of the Choir and the Bible Class.

When the average man attempts to stand on his dignity he is apt to discover that his feet are too large for the pedestal.

Helen annoyed her father with 'questions while he tried to read the newspaper. One evening, among other things she demanded, "Papa, what do you do at the store all day?"

"Oh," he answered briefly, "nothing."

Helen was silent a moments and then asked, "But how do you know when you are done?"

CLIPPED FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES

Owen Sound

The first shipment of shells from the new shell department of the Canadian Malleable Iron Co is being made to day. It will consist of one car of sixty-pound high explosive shells, which have passed the final test of the Government Inspector now at the plant. One of these shells is now on exhibition in the windows of The Sun office and is attracting a great deal of attention.

Another Owen Sound boy who has had a touch of a German bullet reached home on Friday night when Lieut A. Wilbur McKnight arrived on the night train. He is in Canada on three week's leave of absence and will return to England on the expiration of his leave. Lieut. McKnight, who is the youngest son of Mr Robt McKnight and one of the best known of young Owen Sound men, is receiving a hearty welcome on all sides from all sides from his many friends here, who are glad to see that he is recovering as quickly as he is from his wounds. Except for a slight limp it has left no bad effects and he will be able to return to active service very shortly.

It was a stray bullet which caught Lieut McKnight, who is with the 4th. Field Engineers, as he was bending over a plan he was making out on the night of Nov. 5th after he had been at the front for some weeks. It passed through the muscle of his back and came out at the side inflicting a wound which was extremely painful. Since November, Lieut. McKnight has been in England.

Lieut McKnight has an older brother, Lieut Robt McKnight, in the trenches They are both graduates of the R. M. C.

Owen Sound Shoe Company loan by-law is likely to be filed amongst the archives under the Barkus is Within' head-ing with the grants company bylaw and several other prospects. This conclusion is forced by a despatch from London, Ont. in Monday's papers which stated that William Edward Wilson, aged 32, until recently treasurer of the C. N. W. Shoe Company, this city, and prominent in the business life of London, was arrested last night on a charge of bigamy. Wilson is living here with his alleged second wife, while Mrs L. Guay, of Lynn, Mass., who laid the complaint, charges that he married her in 1905, under the name of Paul E. Guay, which she contends is his right name. At this stage of the proceedings it is unfair to say what the outcome of the case will be. Certain it is that the matrimonial complications of the shoe proposition promoter will not inspire confidence here. It is a well known fact that since Wilson or Guay attempted to promote the Owen Sound industry he has met with all kinds of opposition. These new developments will be watched with interest. The town holds the check for three hundred dollars to cover the cost of submitting the bylaw, but there are other accounts around town which the holders would be pleased to have settled.

Sheriff's notice of sale have been posted on the steamer Soo City of the Georgian Bay Navigation Company Ltd as a result of a writ issued in favor of Mr. A. J. Creighton, coal dealer, whose overdue coal account is the claim. The Soo City has been on the Georgian Bay for a decade and has been used to a large extent as a sale regulator in the north shore and Manitoulin traffic. Lack of direct railway connection which has resulted in failure so often in the independent service has been disastrous in the case of the Soo City, and she goes on the block as a result. The steamer is one of the few wooden hulls which were as numerous in the early eighties before steel construction came in vogue, and while she is still a serviceable vessel her usefulness is limited by the increasing railway connections at lake ports. A number of other claims will be filed against the vessel and the stock holders of the company which owns her are not liable to realize heavily on their stock. They are principally Bruce Peninsula and Manitoulin Island residents.

The Secretary of the Board of Trade Mr Geo. Menzies, is in receipt of a letter from Mr W.S. Middlebro, M. P. acknowledging receipt of resolution passed by the Board in reference to dredging the harbor and stating that the Department of Public Works at Ottawa had arranged to send on engineers at once for the purpose of making surveys with the view to dredging the deposit of silt in the harbor. This will prove gratifying news to all Owen Sounders.

Hanover

Lieut. Andrew Seim V. S. returned to his home in Mt. Forest recently He has served his term with the Veterinary Corps and may stay at home for some time. He was last stationed at Salonica, Greece.

A quiet military wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr and Mrs John C. Schaefer of town last Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock when their daughter Miss Emma became the bride of Pte. Walter Dunbar Patchell, of the 124th battalion, Toronto. The bride who was given away by her father wore a military dress with violets at her waist, Miss Edythe Lorenz played the wedding march. The rooms were decorated with flags of the allied nations, and ferns, narcissus, carnations and daffodils. Rev. J. Leypoldt performed the ceremony. The guests included just the immediate relatives who sat down to a splendid dinner at the conclusion of the ceremony. Pte. Patchell and his bride went to Toronto on Saturday afternoon. Mrs Patchell will reside in Hanover while her husband is overseas. The wedding was brought to a close by the playing of the National Anthem. The Post joins in extending best wishes to the young couple.

Southampton

The anniversary services of the Southampton Methodist church were held last Sunday and Monday. On Sunday church services were held at the usual hours, 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. at which the pastor Rev S.M. Roadhouse preached two excellent sermons. The choir furnished special music at both services. The soldiers attended the morning services in a body, and as the services in the Presbyterian and Baptist churches were withdrawn in the evening there was an extra large attendance.

So sudden that it was a shock to our citizens was the death of Mrs. Hannah the wife of Quartermaster A. McD Hannah, which occurred last Friday morning Feb 25th Mrs Hannah had been down town the evening before and did not get home till after ten o'clock. She read the paper for an hour or so before retiring, and during the night had risen for a drink of water. Her youngest daughter, Peney, was sleeping with her, and in the morning when she could not awaken her mother the other members of the family soon realized the fact that their mother had passed to the great beyond, silently and quietly in the morning hours, having been stricken with heart failure. Mrs Hannah had just arrived home from Toronto Wednesday night, where she had been visiting with her husband for a week prior to his departure to England with his regiment the 75th.

Corp. Thos. Darlington and Pte. James Evans are home from Galt for a few days days visit, Pte Evans has been in England the last few months, but he was found not up to measurement qualifications, and has received his discharge. Corp Darlington expects to go overseas shortly

Mr A. P. Menzies, of Dollard, Sask., is home from the West, for a visit with old friends in the Burgoyne district.

Walkerton

Manager Cloe Clark has leased his large skating rink here to the 160th Bruce Battalion, who will transform it into an non-commissioned officers training school, where about a hundred recruits from all over the county will assemble and be instructed in the duties of sergeants, corporals, etc. Competent instructors have been secured and the course will last about ten weeks. The rental of the rink for this purpose is $30 per week or $300. In all, which sum the Walkerton Town Council is putting up to finance the scheme. The billeting of about a hundred additional recruits among the homes here was thought at first some problem, but we understand the militia have about secured the necessary accommodation already, which shows how quickly Walkerton rises to an occasion of this kind. Manager Clark, assisted by about one hundred soldiers, will commence removing the ice from the rink on Friday morning and expects to have the job completed in half a day. The rink will be turned over to the militia on Saturday and the school will open on Monday.

While at a recruiting meeting in Paisley on Wednesday of last week, Mr. John Rowland was rather nettled at the verbiage of the seven preachers who occupied the platform and who took up the time vociferating almost to the exclusion of the two noted recruiting speakers who had been brought all the way from London and Sarnia to address the gathering. Bubbling over with enthusiasm for the cause and chagrin at the verbosity of the sermonizers, Mr. Rowland hit them a slam when he said that if they were as tenacious at fighting as they were at talking they would be marvels on the firing line. So many preachers had volunteered to go as Chaplains to the Bruce Battalion that he thought with Sam Hughes that the Clerics should get together and form a regiment of their own. Whatever respect he might have for clerical robes, Mr. Rowland said at present he had greater admiration for khaki clothes, and and suggested that the preachers take the hint and get into them. The slam had a telling effect, for the next day one of the preachers enlisted as a private at Port Elgin, and it is reported some of the others may follow.

The strength of the Bruce Battalion is now slightly over the 850 mark, and still growing. Walkertonians who have enlisted since our last issue are: Sylvester Reinhardt, age 24, factory hand here, born at Walkerton; and Neil Alex. McNeil, aged 27, a Walkerton mechanic born in Brant. The following recruits were discharged on account of physical defects, to wit; Jos. Heffernan, Walkerton; Alex. Hamilton, Cargill; and R. G. Crane, Owen Sound. Roy Van Horne who applied for enlistment failed to pass the examination and was rejected, Mr. Harry Chadwick of Saskatoon, who was formely a lieutenant in the Tecumseh Company of the old 32nd Regt., arrived here Monday and has enlisted as Capt. of D. Co. in the 160th Batt. Lieut. Horace Parker, also formerly of the old 32nd Bruce enlisted this week from Palmerston and has been placed in charge of the machine gun section here.

Chesley

A splendid ovation greet Lance-Corp. Geo. Green Canadian soldier upon his return to his home in Chesley, on Tuesday night from the theatre of war. A guard of honor was formed by the local members of the Bruce Battalion, and the fine band of the same came here expressly for the occasion. By these and hundreds of citizens the hero of the hour was escorted to the Arena Rink by the light of torches, and his sleigh dragged in triumph around the ice. Mr. C. J. Mickle made a stirring speech of welcome, which was modestly replied to by the soldier-hero. It was on the 23rd of April last (appropriately enough, St. George's Day) that Geo. Green was severly wounded and has spent most of the time since in the hospital. He will remain in Chesley for about eight days and then will report in London. Like all true heroes George is not loquacious, but he carries about with him grim momentoes which speak for themselves a piece of shrapnel extracted from his thigh, and a bullet from his knee. Though limping somewhat his cheery disposition remains unimpaired. We trust that his native air and a long rest will restore to perfect health this fine young survivor of the "Fighting First," who "their names immortal made" in the early stage of the great conflict. He's a Chesley boy and we are all proud of him.

FRENCH LINE IS FILM

Crown Prince Fails to Break Through at Verdun.

Saturday Night Attack is Repulsed and Sunday Morning Effort is Likewise a Fiasco—After Fourteen Days of Fierce Conflict the Position is Deadlocked With Chief Fighting Around the Douaumont Plateau.

PARIS, March 6.—Another attempt by the Crown Prince's army to break through the French line was made Saturday night, but the line held and the Germans fell back to their own trenches under the fire of the French artillery. Sunday morning a German force attacked in the woods just east of Vacherauville, a little to the west of the line against which the assault of last night was directed, but with no success.

In the contest for the possession of Verdun the operations have narrowed for the time being to the short sector about the plateau of Douaumont. The Germans concentrated their artillery fire Saturday on the restricted front between the Hindenburg mont wood and Douaumont village. The bombardment was very violent. After great quantities of heavy shells had been thrown, the German infantry made its charge at six o'clock Saturday night. The attacking waves at once were brought under the barrage fire of the French guns and rifle-firing co-operated, and were unable to reach the French trenches. A. the village of Douaumont itself, where the Germans hold the village proper and the French are entrenched in the southern outskirts, fighting of considerable liveliness lasted well into the night, without changing the situation.

The German artillery continued its firing with some intensity throughout the night on the whole front east of the Meuse, and west of the river at Le Mort Homme and the Cote de L'Oie.

Early Sunday morning the bombardment increased in violence along the whole of this front, especially on the sector which had been the scene of Saturday night's attack, but the attack was not repeated here. Instead the Germans shifted their assaulting columns to the west, and sought to make an opening through the woods east of Vacherauville. Here again they were completely repulsed.

German troops being brought up to the fighting front were brought under the fire of the French artillery to the north of Vacherauville and near Louvemont, north-west of Douaumont.

No infantry action is reported from the Woevre, but the artillery of both sides was very active about Fresnes and east of Haudromont.

The French artillery conducted a heavy bombardment Saturday night and Sunday on the German position near the Binarville road, north of the La Harazee, and the Haute Chevauchee in the Argonne.

The German official statement issued yesterday announces the evacuation by the German troops of the trenches captured or taken from the French near the forest of Thaiville, north-east of Badonville, in Lorraine, on February 28. The evacuation was ordered to avoid unnecessary losses under the concentrated fire of the French artillery.

No Change in Position.

LONDON, March 6.—The Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail, telegraphing Sunday, says:

"The fourteenth day of the Battle of Verdun finds the Germans still vainly hurling forces against the impregnable wall of Creusot guns and dauntless infantry holding from Pepper Hill (the Cote du Poivre) to Douaumont.

"Thursday night the Germans held half the village of Douaumont and the French the other half. To-day the relative positions are much the same, though the French probably have the advantage. During Friday and Saturday there were see-saw combats incessantly. On Friday the Germans were driven out by attacks, in which grenades and bayonets played the major part. During the night the Germans prepared another assault, which was delivered early Saturday morning, and was attended with some success. The French, unable to obtain a solid foothold, had to give way.

"The French, however, just before dusk again held all but one or two houses on the north side of the hamlet.

"At 6 o'clock the Germans came on again for something like the 21st time, and made a general attack on the whole plateau from Haudromont to Vaux, and again got the worst of it. They were stopped more than a hundred yards from the French line and fell back. Their losses in these desperate affrays are described as fearful—at least four times those of the French.

"The military critics are somewhat surprised that the Crown Prince after a fortnight's incessant shelling of Goose Hill (the Cote de L'Oie) and Dead Man's Hill (Le Mort Homme) has not attempted an advance in that direction. The only plausible explanation is that the Germans lack sufficient troops to extend their attacking front, and therefore are making enormous sacrifices with the object of gaining the Douaumont plateau and piercing the French centre."

Carmen Sylva Conscious to Last.

LONDON, March 6.—A despatch to The Times from Bucharest says the late Queen-Mother Elizabeth (Carmen Sylva) left all her property to charitable institutions.

The Queen-Mother, says the correspondent, maintained consciousness almost to the last, and one of her last acts was to dictate a reply to a telegram of inquiry from the German Emperor at Verdun.

MOEWE REACHES PORT.

During German Raider Gets Home With Gold and Prisoners.

BERLIN, March 6.—Official announcement was made here yesterday that the German cruiser Moewe arrived yesterday in 'some' German port (Wilhelmshaven). She had on board a large number of British prisoners and $200,000 in gold bars. The announcement says fifteen vessels were sunk by the Moewe, which also laid mines at several points. One of these mines, it is said, sank the British battleship King Edward VII. The statement says:

"The naval general staff states that the Moewe, Commander Burgrave, (von Dohna-Schlodien, after a successful cruise lasting several months, arrived to-day at 'some' home port with four British officers, 29 British marines and sailors, 255 men of crew of enemy steamers, among them 108 Indians, as prisoners, and one million marks in gold bars.

"The vessel brought up the following enemy steamers, the greater part of which were sunk and a small part of which were sent as prizes to neutral ports: The British steamships Corbridge, 3,687 tons; Author, 3,496 tons; Trader, 3,608 tons; Ariadne, 3,921 tons; Dromonby, 3,627 tons; Farringford, 3,146 tons; Clan MacTavish, 5,816 tons; Appam, 7,781 tons; Western, 3,300 tons; Herare, 3,836 tons; Flamenco, 4,629 tons; Saxon Prince, 3,471 tons; the sailing vessel Edinburgh, 1,473 tons; the French steamer Maroni, 3,109 tons, and the Belgian steamship Luxemburg, 4,322 tons.

"At several points on enemy coast the Moewe also laid out mines, to which, among others, the battleship King Edward VII. fell victim."

Count von Dohna, the Moewe's commander, has been awarded the Iron Cross of the first class and the members of the crew have received the Iron Cross of the second class. Count von Dohna has been ordered to meet Emperor William at headquarters.

RIOTS IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

German Troops Suppress Rising of Women in Turk Capital.

ODESSA, Russia, March 6.—It is reported from Constantinople that Turkish women broke into the railway yards, whence troop trains were about to leave, shouting protests against sending the men "to go to their death." They threw themselves on the rails in front of the trains. The authorities refrained from using force to remove them, these advices say, fearing a mutiny among the soldiers. The men were taken from the cars, but later were sent off secretly by night.

It is also reported that the Turkish general staff declined to summon before a court-martial Kiamil Pasha, commander of the Turkish army in the Caucasus, on account of certain disclosures which might be made. Consequently the commander will receive an honorable discharge.

These reports say further that the people of Constantinople were led to believe that the German army had achieved a much greater victory at Verdun than was actually gained, and that when the facts were ascertained rioting occurred. It is stated German troops suppressed the rioting.

Forty persons are reported to have been killed in the wreck of a passenger train on the Berlin-Constantinople railway near Nish, Serbia. Investigation showed that rails had been loosened, and many arrests have been made.

BREWSTER ELECTED.

Liberal Leader in B. C. Defeats Provincial Treasurer Flumerfelt.

VICTORIA, March 6.—The electors of Victoria Saturday elected Harlan Carey Brewster to represent them in the Legislature, and defeated Hon. Alfred C. Flumerfelt, whom Premier Bowser had made Provincial Treasurer. Brewster secured 4,972 votes to 4,626 polled for Flumerfelt, who therefore only saved his deposit by forty votes.

Mr. Brewster, the victor in Saturday's fight, is the leader of the Liberal party in British Columbia. He was born on the coast from New Brunswick, his native Province, in 1906, and has since then been actively interested in the fishing business.

Zeppelins Visit England.

LONDON, March 6.—A Zeppelin raid took place Sunday night, when two hostile airships crossed over the north-east coast of England. The official statement announcing the raid gives no information as to the damage done.

"At the time of this report," the statement continues, "their movements have not been clearly defined. Some bombs were dropped, which fell in the sea. As the short, but information is not yet available as to whether any damage was done on land. A further communication will be issued later."

Germans Imprison Belgian Patriots.

AMSTERDAM, March 6.—The Handelsblad says that the German court-martial in Brussels has sentenced three more Belgians, one of whom was a woman, to imprisonment with hard labor. Marguerite Blanckaert was sentenced to prison for life for treasonable acts against the German administration; a former policeman named Alexander Daume to two years for issuing false passports, and Gustaaf Minnelet to one year for hiding soldiers.

Paris Papers Seized.

PARIS, March 6.—Homme Enchaine, a newspaper edited by Georges Clemenceau, President of the Senate Committee on Army and Foreign Relations, has been seized by the authorities. No specific reason for the action has been given. The new afternoon paper, The Hour, also has been seized and its publication suspended for a week.

RICH BOOTY AT BITLIS

Russians Take 20 Krupp Guns With Turkish City.

Stronghold Which Has Fallen Into Hands of Grand Duke Was a Depot for Military Munitions—Russians Avenged Turkish Cruelty at Bitlis—Entire Van Region Now in Russian Control.

PETROGRAD, March 6.—Having fought desperately and failed to repulse the Russians' assault on a hilltop fort in the vicinity of Erzerum, the last survivors of a Turkish guards regiment, rather than be taken prisoners, leaped to death, one at a time, over a precipice, according to the stirring account given by an eye-witness.

The following official communication regarding the capture of Bitlis was issued by the War Office:

"Details of the capture of Bitlis show that our troops attacked the position without firing a shot. The attack was made at night during a snowstorm. About 3 o'clock in the morning a bayonet charge was ordered, and the Turks after a desperate resistance were dislodged. The Turkish artillery position was stormed after hand-to-hand fighting, as the result of which the defenders, who fought with the greatest desperation, were all killed.

"On the position and in pursuit of the enemy we captured 20 guns of the latest Krupp type, all of which were in good condition. We also captured on the positions a huge quantity of gun and rifle cartridges, and in Bitlis itself a large depot of artillery munitions. During the pursuit numerous Turks were sabred. The number of prisoners has increased, and includes 40 officers."

Two Turkish divisions, reinforced by troops that had fled from Erzerum, are the forces that had been operating against the Russians on the line running through Mush, Bitlis, and Van.

With the occupation of Bitlis, it is pointed out the entire Van region passes under the control of the Russians, while the Russian success separates the two Turkish forces operating in the regions of Mush and Lake Urumiah, respectively.

With the loss of Bitlis, it appears, Turkish reinforcements coming from Mesopotamia would be compelled to travel by roundabout routes in order to reach the third Turkish army.

Russians Took Terrible Revenge.

LONDON, March 6.—The Russian soldiers at Bitlis, according to a Petrograd despatch to The Morning Post, took a terrible revenge on the Turkish troops for the cruelty which the Turks were alleged to have practised toward the Armenians in that district. The correspondent says:

"A terrible slaughter followed the capture of the Turkish position at Bitlis. The Russian troops witnessed at Van, Mush, and many other places an appalling sight, the massacre, namely, by Turkish fanatics of tens of thousands of Armenian Christian men, women, and children. It was unlikely after such deeds that any quarter should be given. The colossal killing completed the destruction of the Turkish third army."

ENVER PASHA ATTACKED.

Turkish War Minister is Said to Be in a Critical Condition.

LONDON, March 6.—Rumors are recurrent of internal trouble in Turkey and of a movement towards peace. As the reports mainly emanate from Rome and Geneva, they must for the present be regarded at least as doubtful.

The Athens correspondent of the Daily Mail, referring to a reported attempt to assassinate Enver Pasha, says it is stated that the Minister of War was gravely wounded, and that his condition is critical.

An Athens despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says:

"Advices from a diplomatic source in Constantinople are to the effect that an attempt has been made to assassinate Enver Pasha, the War Minister, who was wounded. The Duke of Mecklenburg, 'in view of the gravity of the situation,' has telegraphed the German Emperor urging him to send reinforcements to Constantinople."

Positions Retained.

LONDON, March 6.—The British official communication issued last night says:

"Grenade fighting continued last night in the craters northeast of Vermelles. To-day the enemy artillery has been active about Loos and northeast of Ypres.

"The situation in Ypres-Comines Canal is quiet, and our troops retain the ground gained there March 2."

Noted Professor Dead.

LONDON, March 6.—William Angus Knight, professor of moral philosophy in the University of St. Andrews from 1876 to 1902, died Saturday at his residence at Keswick, Cumberlandshire. In recognition of his eminent services to English literature, Dr. Knight was pensioned by the Government about six years ago. He was born February 22, 1836.

Earthquake at Sivas.

ATHENS, March 6.—It is reported here that Sivas, in Asia Minor, is in ashes, following the explosion of ammunitions caused by [illegible] Sivas is some [illegible] Constantinople, and a hundred miles south of the Black Sea, with which it is connected by railway.

New French Marine Chief of Staff.

PARIS, March 6.—Vice-Admiral Ferdinand Jean Jacques de Bon has been appointed chief of the general staff of the marine, replacing Vice-Admiral de Jonquieres, who has been made a member of the Council of the Legion of Honor.

ONTARIO has been promised two referendums why not make it three?

FORTY-TWO recruits are in training at Gore Bay and twenty at Providence Bay on the Manitoulin.

THOSE Americans who think that if they got into the war it would end within six months have a better opinion of themselves than others hold

IT is said that a deputation of 20,000 will wait upon the Provincial Government to-day and ask for a dry Ontario, and that the result will be a referendum upon which the electors will vote in June.

THE town of Bethlehem was taken by the Russians without the firing of a gun. The Russians went in with the bayonet about the middle of the night, during a blinding snow storm Jericho was taken years ago by the blowing of rams horns.

THE reports from the battle-field around Verdun are heart rending, We read of the snow being red, the waters of the Meuse river red, the dead piled in thousands along the hills, and the wonder if this is to be allowed to continue, this is the absorbing thought. Will Germany sacrifice her last man in the life and death struggle?

WITHOUT any doubt the labor question will become acute before long. In order to meet the situation on the farms the Department of Education will allow all the boys in the high schools the privilege of working with farmers this summer, and to further supplement the shortage of labor the government will try to secure 10,000 lumbermen from Michigan.

The Echo doubts if very much is gained by branding a slacker as yellow. He is yellow, but the leopard cannot change his spots, or the elephant his skin. When a young man will not enlist, when there is not enough patriotism in his make up to do his bit for his country, he cannot be changed by calling him yellow. What we need in a war which is taxing our national strength to the utmost is conscription, but as long as we have not got it we have to appeal to the better instincts in men, calling them yellow will accomplish nothing.

Mrs Jackson's home looked very pretty on Wednesday evening, when the Red Cross gave a euchre. The drawing rooms were very prettily decorated with bunting and flags and ten tables played progressive euchre. The winners of the prizes were Miss Scott, Miss Miers, and Mr. W. Barrett. Refreshments were served by the Red Cross girls during the evening.

Under the auspices of the Trinity Church A.Y.P.A. the soldiers were entertained in the Town Hall on Thursday evening. About one hundred soldiers were there and they certainly enjoyed themselves. Soldiers can adapt themselves to anything, and they were all young together, on Thursday evening, as they played "Old Dusty Millar" and they were right there to 'grab' too. The town orchestra was in attendance and delighted everyone with their playing. Refreshments were served during the evenings gaiety, and the entertainment was kept up until late in the evening.

At the home of Dr Wigle, Tuesday evening, a most delightful euchre party was given. Between forty and fifty ladies sat down at 6.30 o'clock to a tasty supper and afterwards played cards till 10.30. While tea was being served Miss H. Parke at the piano and Miss G. Nelson with the violin delighted those present with their music. The tea tables and rooms were decorated with daffodils and a superb bouqe. of deep crimson roses was admired by everyone present. Mrs. Kastner and Miss Ruby Fielding were the lucky winners of the prizes for moves and lone hands, two dainty hand made handkerchiefs with tatted border, while Miss G. Chapman was consoled for her lack of luck by a boquet of daffodils. The proceeds of this very pleasant party, are for the Red Cross Girls.

News of the Churches

Methodist Church.

The Cottage meeting at Mr M. Dealys on Friday evening, was well attended.

Class-meetings have been resumed on Sunday mornings after preaching service.

The Choir and the Adult Bible Class gave Mr. Morgan Hahn a "send off" Last Thursday evening. An address expressing the esteem in which he was held was accompanied by a gift in cash.

The men of the 160th training in town attended service in the Methodist Church Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Prudham's theme was "The Christian Soldiers" In his introduction he discussed Christ's sanction condemnation and antithesis of war. The peoples attitude is reflected in Johns gospel chapter 10 where the shepherds spirit is set against the wolf's spirit. A christian was like a Soldier in the surrender of his will, in implicit obedience in attracting attention in enduring hardships, in makng conquests and in attaining a suitable reward.

The evening subject was "Love Your enemies"

Have You Sent You Renewal Yet?

There are still some readers of The Echo who have not sent in their renewal subscriptions for 1916. We know that they intended to do so, and that the very smallness of the amount involved is just the thing responsible for it being overlooked. If they knew what a convenience it is to the publishers to have all renewals promptly, and what pleasure it gives the editor to see that his work is appreciated, they would certainly make a point of remitting by the earliest possible mail. The Canadian Echo is giving its readers big value for their money. Nearly all the local papers are now $1.50 per year, and while The Echo remains at $1, it must insist upon the payments being in advance

Croup

"I don't think there is a more anxious time for parents than when their children have croup. Without they are prepared with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy they must wait for the doctor and listen to the choking, metallic cough and watch their little one gasping for breath.

"Granny" Chamberlain

You know the great danger of croup is the formation of a false membrane in the larynx, and until this is expelled relief cannot be obtained, and the spasmodic choking continues. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in frequent doses. It will loosen this membrane and cause the child to expel it by vomiting.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

is an absolutely safe and certain remedy for croup, and if given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack."

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. Free from harmful drugs.

Mr D. Martin was over to Lions Head on Thursday and while there he had the pleasure of going up to the Hall and see the boys go through their drill, he reports that they are as fine, able and healthy looking young men as could be got anywhere in Ontario, in fact it makes a man wish he were 10 or 15 years younger to have a chance of being with them.

Mr John Boyle lost a good mare on Thursday, he was going to Pine Tree with a load of logs, and she just laid over against the sleigh tongue and died without any sickness. This will be quite a loss for John.

Mr McCutcheon, of Centreville, was a visitor at Mr Sadlers one day this week.

Mr and Mrs Henry Esch and family were down to Stokes Bay on Saturday night and Sunday visiting Mrs Esch's grandmother and uncle Mrs John Martin sr and M. Martin.

Waste Necessary in Food

Because our ancestors ate coarser waste with their food they developed a long bowel, mostly a muscular tube. This muscle was not intended for digestion purposes but to carry off waste. We have inherited this muscular tube. Waste containing food is as essential to its proper function as light is to the eye. Because modern foods have little waste the human bowel muscles have weakened from lack of exercise. Constipation and indigestion have resulted. Dr. Jackson, who has practised for years as an intestinal specialist, has devised Roman Meal, a food which has plenty of waste to exercise the bowel muscles and is also highly nourishing. It prevents indigestion and constipation. Most grocers sell it.

Made by Roman Meal Company, Toronto, Canada.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body, and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from any harmful drugs. Try it.

His little stomach and bowels may be out of order; his teeth troubling him, or may be bothered with worms. The mother should immediately give him Baby's Own Tablets. They never fail to relieve the baby. Concerning them Mrs. Ronald Hurley, Gilks, N. ## Lower the Cost of Living, Don't Use an Ax!

By MOSS.

"POWERFUL indeed is the empire of habit." wrote Publius Syrus along about the year 1.

Habit's the stuff life is made of.

You get into the habit of eating three meals a day, of a cold plunge in the morning, of wearing a favorite color, of following the business routine of the office, of talking about the weather, of being a grouch or an optimist. Yes, life is all a habit. A powerful empire, indeed, is habit.

Habit automatically solves many of our problems. The habit of forgetting cures anger and sorrow. The habit of saving prevents want and misery. The habit of remembering saves waste and inefficiency.

EFFICIENT shoppers get the habit of following the ads. in this paper closely and intelligently. They know just where they can buy what they want at any time at the lowest prices.

INEFFICIENT shoppers, loose of habit, look up the ads. only when they want something on the spur of the moment, or they even fail to do that. They lose, as a person of slovenly habits always loses.

Don't use an ax to lower the cost of living.

USE HABIT.

Aline and all that sort of thing, but your manner today has been intolerable, and we've got to come to an understanding."

I eyed him closely. "I suppose you're about to suggest that one or the other of us must evacuate—get out, so to speak," I said.

"Don't talk rubbish. You've got my mother bawling her eyes out upstairs and wishing she were dead. You've got to come off this high horse of yours. You've got to apologize to her, and quick at that. Understand?"

"Nothing will give me greater joy than to offer her my most abject apology, Mr. Titus, unless it would be her unqualified forgiveness."

"You'll have to withdraw everything you said."

"I'll withdraw everything except my ultimatum in respect to her putting a foot outside these walls. That still stands."

"I beg to differ with you."

"You may beg till you're black in the face," said I coolly.

He swallowed hard. His face twitched, and his hands were clinched.

"You are pretty much of a mucker, Mr. Smart," he said between his teeth. "I'm sorry my sister has fallen into your hands. The worst of it is she seems satisfied with everything you do. Good Lord, what she can see in you is beyond comprehension! Protection! Why, you couldn't protect her from the assault of a chicken!"

"Are you trying to insult me, Mr. Titus?"

"You couldn't resent it if I were. There never was an author with enough moral backbone to"—

"Wait! You are her brother. I don't want to have trouble with you. But if you keep on in this strain, Mr. Titus, I shall be compelled to thrash you soundly."

He fairly gasped. "Th—thrash me!" he choked out. Then he advanced.

Much to his surprise—and, strangely enough, not to my own—I failed to retreat. Instead I extended my left fist with considerable promptness and precision, and he landed on his back.

I experienced a sensation of unholy joy. Up to that moment I had wondered whether I could do it with my left hand.

I looked at Jasper junior. He was staring at me in utter bewilderment.

"Good Lord, you—you've knocked him down!"

"I didn't think I could do it," said I hazily.

He sprang to his brother's side and assisted him to a sitting posture.

"Right to the jaw," shouted Jasper, with a strange enthusiasm.

"Left," I corrected him.

Collingraft gazed about him in a stupid, vacant fashion for a moment and then allowed his glazed eyes to rest upon me. He sat rather limply, I thought.

"Are you hurt, Colly?" cried Jasper junior.

A sickly grin, more of surprise than pain, stole over Collingraft's face. He put his hand to his jaw, then to the back of his head.

"By Jove!" he murmured. "I—I didn't think he had it in him. Let me get up!"

Jasper junior was discreet. "Better let well enough alone, old"—

"I intend to," said Collingraft as he struggled to his feet.

For a moment he faced me uncertainly.

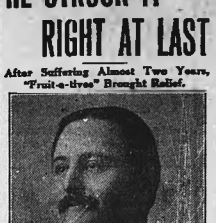
"I'm sorry, Mr. Titus," said I calmly.

"You—you are a wonder!" fell from his lips. "I'm not a coward, Mr. Smart. I've boxed a good deal in my time, but by Jove, I never had a jolt like that!"

He turned abruptly and left us. We followed him slowly toward the steps. At the bottom he stopped and faced me again.

"You're a better man than I thought," he said. "If you'll bury the hatchet, so will I. I take back what I said to you not because I'm afraid of you, but because I respect you. What say? Will you shake hands?"

The surly, arrogant expression was gone from his face. In its place was a puzzled, somewhat inquiring look.



"No hard feeling on my part," I cried gladly. We shook hands. Jasper junior slapped me on the back. "It's a most distressing, sarcastic habit I'm getting into, knocking people down without rime or reason."

"I daresay you had reason," muttered Collingraft. "I got what was coming to me." An eager light crept into his handsome eyes. "By Jove, we can get in some corking work with the gloves while I'm here. I box quite a bit at home, and I miss it traveling about like this. What say to a half hour or so every day? I have the gloves in one of my trunks. I'm getting horribly seedy. I need stirring up."

"Charmed, I'm sure," I said, assuming an enthusiasm I did not feel. Put on the gloves with this strapping, skilful boxer? Not if I was firmly resolved to stop while my record was good. In a scientific clash with the 867 St. Valier St., Montreal.

"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years. I was in constant misery from my stomach and my weight dropped down from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Several of my friends advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and I did so. That was eight months ago. I began to improve almost with the first dose. No other medicine I ever used acted so pleasantly and quickly as 'Fruit-a-tives', and by using it I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble, and all pain and Constipation and misery were cured. I completely recovered by the use of 'Fruit-a-tives' and now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise 'Fruit-a-tives' enough".

gloves he would soon find out what a miserable duffer I was.

"And Jappy, here, is no slouch. He's as shifty as the dickens."

"The shiftier the better," said I with great aplomb. Jasper junior stuck out his chest modestly and said, "Oh, pif. de, Colly." But just the same I hadn't the least doubt in my mind that Jasper could "put it all over me." It was a rather sickening admission, though strictly private.

We made our way to my study, where I mildly suggested that we refrain from mentioning our little encounter to Mrs. Titus or the countess. I thought Collingraft was especially pleased with the idea. We swore secrecy

"I've always been regarded as a peaceful, harmless grub," I explained, still somewhat bewildered by the feat I had performed and considerably shaken by the fear that I was degenerating into a positive ruffian. "You will believe me, I hope, when I declare that I was merely acting in self defense when I"—

He actually laughed. "Don't apologize." He could not resist the impulse to blurt out once more, "By Jove, I didn't think you could do it."

"With my left hand, too," I said wonderingly. Catching myself up, I hastily changed the subject.

A little later on as Collingraft left the room, airy feeling of his jaw, Jasper junior whispered to me excitedly, "You've got him eating out of your hand, old top."

Things were coming to a pretty pass, said I to myself when I was all alone. It certainly is a pretty pass when one knocks down the ex-husband and the brother of the woman he loves and quite without the least suspicion of an inherited pugnacity.

I had a little note from the countess that afternoon, unanimously delivered by Helene Marie Louise Antoinette. It read as follows:

"You did Collingraft a very good turn when you laid him low this morning. He is tremendously interested in his prowess as a boxmaker or a boxster, or whatever it is in athletic parlance. He has been like a lamb all day. I said he really must get over the way you thrashed him. (So much the world!). At first he was as glum as could be about it, but I think he really felt relieved when I told him I had seen the whole affair from a window in my hall. You see, it gave him a chance to explain how you got in the whack, and I have been obliged to listen to intermittent lectures on the manly art of self defense all afternoon, first from him, then from Jappy. I have a headache and no means of defense. He admits that he deserved it, but I am not surprised. Colly is a sporting chap. He hasn't a mean drop of blood in his body. You have made a friend of him. So please don't feel that I hold a grudge against you for what you did. The funny part of it all is that mamma quite agrees with him. She says he deserved it! Mamma is wonderful, really, when it comes to a pinch. She has given up all thought of "putting a foot outside the castle." Can you have luncheon with us tomorrow? Would it be too much trouble if we were to have it in the logetta? I am just mad to get out of doors if only for an hour or two in that walled in spot. Mr. Foopendyke has been perfectly lovely. He came up this morning to tell me that you have not sneezed at all and there isn't the remotest chance now that you will have a cold. It seems he was afraid you might. You must have a very rugged constitution. Britton told Blake that most men would have died from exposure if they had been put in your place. How good you are to me.

ALINE T.

P. S.—I may come down to see you this evening.

* * * * * * *

I shall skip over the rather uninteresting events of the next two or three days. Nothing of consequence happened unless you are willing to consider important two perfectly blissful nights of sleep on my part; also I had the pleasure of taking the countess "out walking" in my courtyard, to use a colloquialism, once in the warm, sweet sunshine, again 'neath the glow of a radiant moon. She had not been outside the castle walls literally in more than five weeks, and the color leaped back into her cheeks with a rush that delighted me. I may mention in passing that I paid particular attention to her suggestion concerning my diligent dated, gone to seed garden, although I had been bored to extinction by Jasper junior when he undertook to enlighten me horticulturally. She agreed to come forth every day and assist me in building the poor thing up, propping it, so to speak.

As for Mrs. Titus, that really engaging lady made life so easy for me that I wondered why I had ever been apprehensive. She was quite wonderful when "it came to a pinch." I began to understand a good many things about her, chief among them being her unvoiced theories on matrimony. While she did not actually commit herself, I had no difficulty in ascertaining that, from her point of view, marriages are not made in heaven and that a properly arranged divorce is a great deal less terrestrial than it is commonly supposed to be. She believed in matrimony as a trial and divorce as a reward, or something to that effect.

My opinion seemed to carry considerable weight with her. For a day or two after our somewhat sanguinary encounter she was prone to start, even to jump slightly, when I addressed myself to her with unintentional directness. She soon got over that, however.

We were discussing Aline's unfortunate venture into the state of matrimony, and I, feeling temporarily august and superior, managed to say the wrong thing and in doing so put myself in a position from which I could not recede without loss of dignity. If my memory serves me correctly I remarked with some asperity that marriages of that kind never turned out well for any one except the bridegroom.

She looked at me coldly. "I am afraid, Mr. Smart, that you have been putting some very bad notions into my daughter's head," she said.

"Bad notions?" I murmured.

"She has developed certain pronounced and rather extraordinary views concerning the nobility as the result of your—ah—argument. I may say."

"I'm very sorry. I know one or two exceedingly nice noblemen, and I've no doubt there are a great many more. She must have misunderstood me. I wasn't running down the nobility, Mrs. Titus. I was merely questioning the advisability of elevating it in the way we Americans sometimes do."

"You did not put it so adroitly in discussing the practice with Aline," she said quickly. "Granted that her own marriage was a mistake, a dreadful mistake, it does not follow that all international matches are failures. I would just as soon be unhappily married to a duke as to a dry goods merchant, Mr. Smart."

"But not at the same price, Mrs. Titus," I remarked.

She smiled. "A husband is dear at any price."

"I shouldn't put it just that way," I protested. "A good American husband is a necessity, not a luxury."

"Well, to go back to what I started to say, Aline is very bitter about matrimony as viewed from my point of view. I am sorry to say I attribute her attitude to your excellent counsel in part."

"You flatter me. I was under the impression she took her lesson of Tarroway."

"Granted. But Tarroway was unfit. Why, the all of them with the same stick? There are good noblemen, you'll admit."

"But they don't need rehabilitation."

"Aline, I fear, will never risk another experiment. It's rather calamitous, isn't it? When one stops to consider her youth, beauty and all the happiness there may be in"—

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Titus, but I think your fears are groundless."

"What do you mean?"

"The countess will marry again. I am not betraying a secret, because she has intimated as much to my secretary as well as to me. I take it that as soon as this unhappy affair is settled she will be free to reveal the true state of her feelings toward"—I stopped, somewhat dismayed by my garrulous

"Toward whom?" she fairly snapped.

"I don't know," I replied truthfully and, I fear, incubriously.

"Good heavens!" she cried, starting up from the bench on which we were sitting in the logetta. There was a queer expression in her eyes. "Hasn't—hasn't she ever hinted at—hasn't she mentioned any one at all?"

"Not to me."

Mrs. Titus was agitated. I could see that very plainly. A thoughtful frown appeared on her smooth brow, and a gleam of anxiety sprang into her eyes.

"I am sure that she has had no opportunity to"— She did not complete the sentence, in which there was a primary note of perplexity and wonder.

It grilled me to discover that she did not even so much as take me into consideration.

"You mean since the—er—divorce?" I inquired.

"She has been in seclusion all of the time. She has seen no man—that is to say, no man for whom she could possibly entertain a— But, of course, you are mistaken in your impression, Mr. Smart. There is absolutely nothing in what you say."

"A former sweetheart, antedating her marriage," I suggested hopelessly.

"She has no sweetheart. Of that I am positive," said she with conviction.

"She must have had an army of admirers. They were legion after her marriage, I may be pardoned for reminding you."

She started. "Has she never mentioned Lord Amberdale to you?" she asked.

"Amberdale?" I repeated, with a queer sinking of the heart. "No, Mrs. Titus. An Englishman?"

She was mistress of herself once more. In a very degage manner she informed me that his lordship, a most attractive and honorable young Englishman, had been one of Aline's warmest friends at the time of the divorce proceedings. But of course there was nothing in that! They had been good friends for years, nothing more, and he was a perfect dear.

But she couldn't fool me. I could see that there was something working at the back of her mind, but whether she was distressed or gratified I was not by way of knowing.

"I've never heard her mention Lord Amberdale," said I.

Her eyes narrowed slightly. Had I but known, the mere fact that the countess had not spoken of his lordship provided her experienced mother with an excellent reason for believing that there was something between them. She abruptly brought the conversation to a close and left me, saying that she was off for her beauty nap.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Duel.

ALONE, I soon became a prey to certain disquieting thoughts. Summed up they resolved themselves into a condition of certainty which admitted of but one aspect—the charming countess was in love with Amberdale. And the shocking part of it all was that she was in love with him prior to her separation from Tarroway! I felt a cold perspiration start out all over my body as this condition forced itself upon me. He was the man. He had been the man from the beginning. My heart was like lead for the rest of the day, and very curiously for a leaden thing it was subject to pain.

Just before dinner Britton, after inspecting me out of the corner of his eye for some time, advised me to try a little brandy.

"You look seedy, sir," he said, with concern in his voice. "A cold setting in perhaps, sir."

I tried the brandy, but not because I thought I was taking a cold. Somehow it warmed me up. There is virtue in good spirits.

The countess was abroad very early the next morning. I discovered her in the courtyard, giving directions to Max and Rudolph, who were doing some spading in the garden. She looked very bright and fresh and exciting in the light of an early moon, and I was not only pleased, but astonished, having been led to believe all my life that a woman, no matter how pretty she may be, appears at her worst when the day is young.

I joined her at once. She gave me a gay, accusing smile.

"What have you been saying to mother?" she demanded as she shook hands with me. "I thought you were to be trusted."

I flushed uncomfortably. "I'm sorry, countess. I—I didn't know it was a secret."

She looked at me somewhat quizzically for a moment; then she laughed softly. "It is a secret."

"I hope I haven't got you into bad odor with your"—

"Oh, dear me, no! I'm not in the least worried over what mother may think. I shall do as I please, so there's the end of it."

I swallowed something that seemed to be sticking in my throat. "Then it is true that you are going to marry?"

"Quite," she said succinctly.

I was silent for a moment. "Well, I'm—I'm glad to know it in time," I said rather more gruffly than was necessary.

She smiled too merrily I thought. "You must not tell any one else about it however."

"I can promise that," I said, a sullen rage in my soul. "Devils could not drag it out of me. Rest easy."

It occurred to me afterward that she laughed rather jarkily, you might say uneasily. At any rate, she turned away and began speaking to Max.

"Have you had your breakfast?" I asked stupidly.

"No."

"Neither have I. Will you join me?"

"Isn't it a thing to be a habit?"

"Breakfast or—you?"

"Breakfast and me."

"I confess, my dear countess, that I like you for breakfast," I said gallantly.

"That is a real tribute," she said demurely and took her place beside me. Together we crossed the courtyard.

On the steps Collingraft Titus was standing. I uttered an audible groan and winced as if in dire pain.

"What is it?" she cried quickly.

"Rheumatism," I announced, carefully raising my right arm and affecting an expression of torture. I am not a physical coward, kind reader. The fact that young Mr. Titus carried in his hands a set of formidable looking boxing gloves did not frighten me. Heaven knows, if it would give him any pleasure to slam me about with a pair of gloves I am not without manliness and pluck enough to endure physical pain and mental humiliation. It was diplomacy, cunning, astuteness—whatever you may choose to call it—that stood between me and a friendly encounter with him. Two minutes' time would serve to convince him that he was my master, and then where would I be? Where would be the prestige I had gained? Where my record as a conqueror? "I must have caught cold in my arms and shoulders," I went on, making worse faces than before as I moved the afflicted parts experimentally.

"There," she exclaimed ruefully; "I knew you would catch cold! Men always do. I'm so sorry."

"It's nothing," I made haste to explain—"that is, nothing serious. I'll get rid of it in no time at all." I calculated for a minute. "A week or ten days at the most. Good morning, Collingraft."

"Morning. Hello, sis. Well?" He dangled the gloves before my eyes.

My disappointment was quite pathetic. "Tell him," I said to the countess.

"He's all crippled up with rheumatism, Colly," she said. "Put those ugly things away. We're going in to breakfast."

He tossed the gloves into a corner of the vestibule. I felt a little ashamed of my subterfuge in the face of his earnest expression of concern.

"Tell you what I'll do," he said warmly. "I know how to rub a fellow's muscles"—

"Ugh, I have a treasure in Britton!" said I hastily. "Thanks, old man. He will work it out of me. Sorry we can't have a go this morning."

The worst of it all was that he insisted, as a matter of personal education, on coming to my room after breakfast to watch the expert maneuvers of Britton in kneading the stiffness out of my muscles. He was looking for new ideas, he explained. I first consulted Britton and then resignedly consented to the demonstration.

To my surprise, Britton was something of an expert. I confess that he almost killed me with those strong, iron-like hands of his. If I was not sore when he began with me I certainly was when he finished. Collingraft was most enthusiastic. He said he'd never seen any one manipulate the muscles so scientifically as Britton and ventured the opinion that he would not have to repeat the operation often. To myself I said that he wouldn't have to repeat it at all.

We began laying our plans for the 14th. Communications arrived from Italy addressed to me, but intended for either the countess or the rather remote Mr. Bangs, who seemed better qualified to efface himself than any human being I've ever seen. These letters informed us that a yacht, one of three now cruising in the Mediterranean, would call at an appointed port on such and such a day to take her out to sea. Everything was being arranged on the outside for her escape from the continent, and precision seemed to be the watchword.

Of course, I couldn't do a stroke of work on my novel. How could I be expected to devote myself to fiction when fact was staring me in the face so engagingly? We led an idle, dolce far niente life in these days, with an underlying touch of anxiety and excitement that increased as the day for her departure drew near. I confess to a sickening sense of depression that could not be shaken off.

Half of my time was spent in playing with Rosemary. She became dearer to me with each succeeding day. I knew I should miss her tremendously. I should even miss Jinko, who didn't like me, but who no longer growled at me. The castle would be a very gloomy, dreary place after they were out of it. I found myself wondering how long I would be able to endure the loneliness. Secretly I cherished the idea of selling the place if I could find a lunatic in the market. I didn't suppose there was anybody in the whole world crazy enough to buy it.

An unexpected diversion came one day when, without warning and disastrously out of a clear sky, the Hassards and the Billy Smiths swooped down upon me. They had come up the river in the power boat for a final September run and planned to stop overnight with me.

They were the last people in the world whom I could turn away from my door. There might have been a chance to put them up for the night and still avoid disclosures had not circumstance ordered that the countess and I should be working in the garden at the very moment that brought them pounding at the postern gate. Old Conrad opened the gate in complete ignorance of our presence in the garden. (We happened to be in a somewhat obscure nook and seated upon a stone bench, so as not to be held blame-

The Bruce Battalion

The Kaiser looked down
And asked with a frown,
"Is the Bruce Battalion Coming I wonder"?
The Crown Prince answered "Yes"
Said the Kaiser "I guess"
This business is settled—By thunder.

I've heard of Bruce County,
And heard of its boys;
They're loyal, whole hearted and splendid
And if they come here
We have reason to fear
That soon this great war will be ended.

I fear not submarines,
Torpedoes or planes,
Or the men of all other Battalions;
But the Bruce County boys
Are no Crown Prince's toys.
And my Kingdom is sure to surrender.

So then he'll saddle his horse,
As a matter of course
And make for his home without plunder.
And shout as he goes,
"The worst of my foes
Have come—as Bruce County Battalion"

"So I'm conquered it seems
In spite of my dreams,
(To be monarch of Europe —my boast)
By this well equipped host
Who will stick to their post—
The brave boys of Bruce County Battalion."

So here's to the heroes
Who fought under Weir,
And made them a name that is glorious.
While we think of their fame
We shout loud and exclaim
"The brave boys of Bruce County Battalion"

American Appeals To Fellow Citizens

Mail and Empire

"Not once or twice" has reference been made in these columns to the work of Mr. William T. Gregoory, an American citizen, now resident at Leamington, Ont., who has distinguished himself for the vigor and enterprise of his recruiting campaign. Mr. Gregory is a native of Native Carolina, and not long ago expressed the opinion that from his old home town a thousand Americans would yet be enrolled in the Canadian army. His campaign to arouse the enthusiasm of his American fellow-citizens took the form a few days ago of a full-page advertisement in the Sunday edition of the News and Observer, of Raleigh. This paper is the property of Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the American navy, and in order that there might be no misunderstanding which could affect the political career of the editor, owner, and Secretary of the Navy, the broadside is labeled "Advertisement. Advertisement. Advertisement." Whether the acceptance and publication of this advertisement had anything to do with a letter the Secretary of the Navy wrote a few days ago to his managing editor we do not know; and at any rate it is not important; but the letter, which has caused a good deal of amusement in the American press, seems to have been a "kick" at the way things were running in Raleigh, while the owner of the paper was directing the affairs of the nation at Washington.

EVIDENCE AGAINST GERMANY.

The advertisement paid for by Mr. Gregory is headed: "Here is the evidence that will forever damn the German army in the eyes of the civilised world. The annals of history record nothing like it." The body of the advertisement is made up of attested instances of German brutality and inhumanity, and there are quotations from leading German publicists to prove that these incidents were not isolated, but were part of a regular German plan, conceived by the General Staff, approved by the Kaiser, and satisfactory to the most prominent Germans in the Empire. It is on the whole most effective advertising, and is especially designed to appeal to the chivalry of Southern manhood, and there can be little doubt that it will draw many soldiers from Raleigh and other parts of North Carolina to the ranks of the Allies, preferably to the ranks of the American legion in this country.

GERMAN IDEA OF LOVE

Here are a couple of typical quotations from German leaders, which are made effective use of by Mr. Gregory:

Prof. Rheinhold Seeby, who teaches theology in the University of Berlin, said in Berlin Cathedral:

"We do not hate our enemies. We obey the command of God. Who tells us to love them. But we believe that in killing them, in putting them to suffering, in burning their houses, in invading their territories, we simply perform a work of charity. Divine love is seen everywhere in the world but men have to suffer for their salvation. Human parents love their children, yet they chastise them. Germany loves other nations and when she punishes them it is for their own good."

Pastor Zoebel, in Lutheran Church, in Empire:

"It is in this deep consciousness of our mission that permits us to congratulate ourselves and rest content with a heart full of gratitude when our guns beat down the children of Satan and when our marvelous submarines—instruments to execute the Divine vengeance—send to the bottom of the sea thousands of the non-elect.

"We must fight the wicked with every means in our power; their sufferings should give us pleasure; their cries of despair should not move German hearts. There ought to be no compromise with hell no mercy for the servants of Satan—in others words, no pity for the English, French and Russians, nor indeed for any nation that has sold itself to the Devil. They have all been condemned to death by a Divine decree.

PROF. MORGAN'S OPINION

Mr. Gregory concludes his stirring appeal by inviting "red-blooded American citizens" to cross the border and join the American legion. The cause for which the Allies are contending to-day is the same cause which led the Americans of 140 years ago to take up arms against King George. He quotes effectively from the report of Prof. Morgan who was commissioned in 1914 by the British Home Secretary to investigate alleged breaches of the laws of humane warfare committed by the Germans in France. The final paragraph is well worth repeating:

"Although I have some claims to write as a jurist I have here made no attempt to pray in aid The Hague Regulations in order to frame the counts of an indictment. The Germans have broken all laws, human and Divine and not even the ancient freemasonry of arms, whose honorable traditions are almost as old as war itself, has restrained them in their brutal and licentious fury. It is useless to attempt to discriminate between the people and their rulers; an abundance of diaries of soldiers in the ranks shows that all are infected with a common spirit. That spirit is pride, not the pride of high and pure endeavor, but the insolence which knows no pity, and feels no love. Long ago Roman warned Stratus of this canker which was eating into the German character. Pedants indoctrinated it generals instilled it, and Emperor preached it. The whole people were taught that war was a mere state of civilization, that the last of conquest and the arrogance of race were the most precious of the virtues. On this Dead Sea fruit the German people have been fed for a generation until they are rotten to the core."

RHEUMATISM A MYSTERY

Unless Rooted Out of the System it Grows Worse and Worse.

Some diseases give immunity from another attack, but rheumatism works just the other way. Every attack of rheumatism invites another. Worse than that it reduces the body's power so that each attack is worse than the one before. If any disease needs curing early it is rheumatism, but there are few diseases physicians find more difficult to treat successfully. Wet weather does not cause rheumatism as was once thought, though weather conditions may start the aches and pains. Rheumatism is now known to be dependent upon the blood condition and medical authorities agree that the blood becomes thin with alarming rapidity as rheumatism develops. Maintaining the quality of the blood is, therefore, a reasonable way of preventing and curing rheumatism. That it works out in fact is shown by the beneficial results which follow a fair use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich blood which drives out the rheumatic poison, and while the blood is kept in this condition there is no danger of the trouble returning. Mr. W. T. Pell Palmero, Ont., says:—"I was attacked with a trouble which was ultimately pronounced rheumatism. Often I was barely able to crawl into bed, and seldom able to do a full days work. In this condition I doctored for a year, absolutely getting no better. Then I consulted another doctor whose chief consolation was that unless I could get rid of the trouble I would be a cripple for life. He prescribed dieting, and I doctored with him for six months, but instead of getting relief I became weaker and less able to get around. Then I decided to try a doctor in Toronto, and was under his treatment for about four months with no better results. I gave up the doctors and tried other remedies which were equally futile. Then one day our store keeper sent me a box of Dr. Williams Pink Pills saying, that if they did not help me I need not pay for them. I took them and then got some more and found they were helping me. I probably used $10 worth before I felt fully cured, but they did cure me and were cheap as compared with the other treatments which did not help me. The cure was made several years ago and I have not had a twinge of rheumatism since. To-day I am well and strong and I believe I owe it all to Dr. Williams Pink Pills."

You can get these pills, from any medicine dealer or by mail, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

War News to the Farmers

If the European War continues on
It may be for years, it may not be long;
There may be some who will suffer much
But the farmers will have gained so much
Their wheat and oats will soar us high,
Their cattle will be hard to buy,
The price that will be paid for stuff
Will sure make all the farmers snuff;
The price of land will go up high,
And just right now is the time to buy.

The extra day in February which constitutes the entire year "leap yr" provides a calendar different from any enjoyed since the centennial year 1876, forty years ago and different to any that will follow for 28 years longer when 1944 will have begun. This is a leap year beginning on Saturday, containing 53 Saturdays and 53 Sundays such as no person under 40 years of age ever knew before and sure as probably a very few will see again repeated in the millennial year—eighty four years hence.

The anniversary services in St. Pauls church Sunday were of more than ordinary interest. The music was much appreciated by the congregation and showed that the choir had made very thorough preparation for the day. The visiting clergyman, who occupied the pulpit, was the Rev. J. A. Hilts, Chesley, who is a preacher of more than ordinary ability. His sermons were heard with great attention. In the evening his theme was patriotic, and he spoke of courage in the present struggle. He is of the opinion that those who are outspoken in their pessimism about the war should be interned and with no uncertain note, with a good voice and logical statements delivered an excellent impression upon the audience.

They Get the Sox and Shirts.

Mrs Nierbegall received the following letter acknowledging the receipt of sox and shirts at the front. She signed her name on a slip of paper, and these letters show that the work done here by the Ladies Patriotic League is appreciated.

Somewhere in Belgium
Nov 24th 1915

Dear Mrs. Neibergall;

To-day after getting back from the trenches we were issued with new socks and in putting them on I found your note, and as you requested I am dropping you this note in recognition of your kindness, they were just fine and what I needed. Your note was dated Feb 15th. 1915 quite a while ago, anyway it goes to show that the time you good people spend in knitting and sewing for the soldiers is not wasted. The weather here is not very good, quite a lot of rain and believe me lots of mud. I would like to tell you where we are and what we are doing but its against the military regulations and rules.

I remain
Yours truly

Xmas Day, 25 Dec 1915.

Dear Mrs Niebergall—

It gives me the greatest pleasure to write you a few lines from the front to thank you for the socks which I received the other day and for which I am very grateful. I may say we were newly out of the trenches which are so muddy and wet this time of the year, and we find it pretty hard to dry any of our clothes, especially our socks, so you may be sure how welcome they were. This is a terrible war and when it will be over is pretty hard to tell, but by this time next year we all hope it will be over and we will be back in Canada once more, but however long it takes we are all determined to beat the Germans whatever comes. As I don't know you personally and am not allowed to give very much news I will again take the pleasure of thanking you for your gift.

Yours Truly,
Pte. Robert Nople.

I wish you a Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year.

The Tobermory soldiers returned to Wiarton after a brief visit with their relatives and friends.

Mr W. Menery and Pte. Williard Currie of Lions Head visited friends in the Tub last week.

We are losing a number of the residents of Tobermory who are going to Wiarton where their husbands are training.

We learn that Rev. W. Veil formerly of Tobermory has enlisted and is now in training. We are all glad to hear he has taken this step. Say, boys, don the khaki.

CLIPPED FROM OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES

Walkerton

Having been notified over the phone by a Paisley cop to be on the watchout for an accused man who was thought to have headed towards Walkerton Chief Ferguson, the local sleuth inwardly smiled and secretcy gave thanks when he beheld his quarry walking a few days later down the street here. Going up he laid a heavy hand on the stranger and dragged him with great glee to the lock up. It was not until he had him safely cucooned behind the bars and was out notifying the world of the capture that the Chief learned that the Paisley police had bagged their man, and that he had been taken to the Walkerton jail and been acquitted by the Judge and that he was just out taking a stroll on the streets after the trial, when the big baton wielder from town, who hadn't been advised of his previous capture, landed on the stranger and took him in. Although incensed at the second arrest, the victim thought so highly of the Walkerton Chief's dexterity that he wanted to take him to Paisley to trail and shadow a man whose scalp he is after there.

Capt. Arthur W. McNally, who has been adjutant of the 160th Bruce Battalion, has been promoted to the rank of Junior Major in the force. Mr. Thos. Hay of Paisley, who formerly held the position, having resigned from the job owing it is said, to ill-health which prevents him from accompanying the Battalion to the front. Prior to the outbreak of the war, Major McNally was Captain of the Wiarton Company of the 32nd Battalion, and left with the First Contingent in command of Company of Vancouver soldiers for the front, where he was twice wounded by German shells. On returning to Canada on sick leave he was made adjutant of the 160th Bruce Battalion, and later promoted to Major.

Messrs. John and Andrew O'Neil have sold their splendid 200 acre farm at Malcom to Mr. Chris. Pegelo for $13,000, and Mr. Pegelo in turn has sold his 100 acre farm in the same section to his brother-in-law Mr. Charles Liefso for $7000.

Mr. J. P. Maloney, who has been conducting the Business College here, left on Saturday to take a lieutenant's course at London.

Spring Impurities In The Blood

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these Pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outbreak in disfiguring pimples, eruptions, and boils—Dr. Williams Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood, which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Chesley

We regret to report that Mr A. G. Ross, son of Mr Wm. Ross of this town, and brother to Mrs S. M. Ewart, died suddenly from apoplexy in Regina. The remains will be brought to Chesley for internment.

W. G. We are glad to receive and insert this welcome information.

Robert Oswald, Chairman of the Dry Ontario Committee for Elderslie Tp, attended the banquet given by the Citizens' Committee of One Hundred in Willard Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday evening, and was one of Bruce County's representatives in the monster parade to the Parliament Buildings, where the petition four miles in length was presented to the Hearst Government, praying, for Provincial Prohibition.

The boys and girls of our public schools are doing their bit in raising funds for patriotic and Red Cross funds. The sale of potatoes from war plots in rural schools amounted to $156. S. S. No 4 Saugeen is the banner school with receipts of $17.50 and U. S. S. No 6 Eld. and Sull. comes second with $7.00. In some plots the potatoes rotted and there were none to sell, but that was not the loyal children's fault. The girl who had the best yield from her 10x16 foot plot had 197 lbs. which is over 400 bus to the acre. At the annual school fairs $12.80 was paid out to the pupils of U. S. S. No 6 Eld. and Sull. which was the highest paid to any school in North Brant or South Elderslie.

OWEN SOUND

Another of Grey's medical men has enlisted for active service Dr. W. T. Little son of Mr and Mrs Johnston Little, 13th street west, who has been practising during the past fourteen months at Flesherton, is the latest recruit from the medical profession, Dr. Little was formerly house surgeon in the General Hospital, in Owen Sound, going from here to Flesherton. Almost ever since the war broke out, he has had application in for a place in the Army Medical Corps, but not until last Friday did the order come to report for duty. His Owen Sound friends wish him bon voyage and a safe return.

The name of Pte. Alex. McKay Gunn, of Owen Sound, appeared in the casualty lists of yesterday as among the wounded, and his sister, Mrs. Leslie Penner, of Derby, received a letter from him telling him that he had been shot just above the knee. The wound is not considered serious. Pte Gunn was on duty with a scouting party when he was wounded. He was formerly with the Owen Sound Fire Dept. and went to Moose Jaw five years ago and enlisted from there He was with the 8th Battalion and is a nephew of Mrs Wm Cullen and Miss McKay, of Sydenham.

The pulpit of Division St Church will be filled the next few months by Rev Peter Walker formerly of Montreal and now of Hillhurst Presbyterian church, Calgary. He has resigned his present charge and will come to Owen Sound very soon, Rev Mr Clark who has preached at Division St church recently is also from Calgary. He has accepted a call to a large church in Halifax.

Justice Mulock said he had a special interest in Owen Sound and was very gratified with the absence of criminal cases.

Thornley Flarity, Jack Cavanaugh, Wilfred Bryce and Archie Wilson are enlisting with the 35th Battery now recruiting in Guelph. These young men were all formely attached to the staffs of the various local banks and went down to enlist in a body. The Bank clerks of this city are certainly doing their share to uphold the traditions of the town.

Tuesday morning License Inspector Beckett made a nice haul of wet goods which amounted in all to 15 or 16 cases of Goodertham and Worts, extra fine poison. Some of the stuff was in cases but the major portion of it was packed in barrels. The juicy consignment is supposed to have been invoiced to a local hotel; but the way freight was side tracked and the goods are being held on the police court siding, pending investigation.

The spectacle of a farmer and his two sons enlisting for overseas service is rather unusual. This week Mr. George Rae, of Balaclava, joined the Grey Battalion and his two sons are already in the 147th. Mr. Rae is a stone-cutter from Scotland who came to this country a few years ago in order to give his sons an opportunity, secured a farm in Sydenham near Balaclava. He has given up his farm and his wife and daughters will reside here in Owen Sound.

There has been little change in the wheat outlook since the decline in price over a week ago. Buyers in the local market on Saturday were paying from 90 to 95 cents, with no prospect of a rise in the near future. The movement of wheat in the outside market has never been marked by no little activity at any previous time since the winter set in, and local buyers are consequently unable to arrange for through shipment of the wheat purchased by them. The same conditions are said to prevail in regard to the great crop of the North West, and what the outcome will be remains to be seen.

Peas, also, are on the slump, $1.25 to $1.37 being the selling figures on Saturday. Barley was in fair demand at from 56 to 57 cents, and oats at from 40 to 42 cents.

The produce market was unusually easy though prices were firm, Eggs sold readily at from 28 to 32c. Several loads of potatoes which bore no trace of scab or rot found ready purchasers at $1.80 per bag. One or two farmers were satisfied subsequently to sell at the price quoted.

The battalion orders of last Saturday announce the promotion of four of the lieutenants in the 147th battalion to the rank of captains. They are Lieut. Corrie the commanding officer of A company, Lieut. W. D. Mercer, commanding officer of B. company, Lieut. R. Pollock, commanding officer of D. company and Lieut. L. Douglas, the second in command of D. company.

She Gained 36 Lbs.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont, writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness and sinking spells, and was in fact a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured and many of my old complaints and gained 36 pounds in weigh

Mr Tranter will be home next month and with his father will run the old homestead and the Gibbard farm in connection. Mr and Mrs Gibbard will reside just east of their present farm where they have a house and six acres of land. # TWO ATTACKS FAILED

Germans at Verdun Gained Little Over the Week End.

Small Trench North of Six Represents Total Advance of Enemy After Two Desperate Assaults—Saturday's Attacks Were Repulsed With Most Murderous Slaughter in the History of the War.

PARIS, March 13.—No infantry attack was made by the Germans hammering at the gates of Verdun yesterday, although their artillery showed a considerable amount of activity on both sides of the Meuse. The French guns were equally active, bombarding points where German troops were being concentrated in the ravine to the south of the Cote du Poivre and shelling German batteries west of Louvemont.

Two attacks were made by the Germans Saturday night; one, executed by a small force armed with hand grenades, was directed against the woods adjoining the Cote du Poivre. This attack was easily repulsed. The second, made with artillery preparation against the region north of Six, gave the Germans a small trench adjoining the Etain road.

The German artillery directed heavy bombardments Saturday night against the wooded hills south of Ville and Bois, north of the Aisne; on the Bethincourt region west of the Meuse, and on the Douaumont-Vaux line to the east of the river. No effort has been made by the Germans to repeat the attack on the Vaux plateau.

Further official details given Saturday night of the infantry fighting west of Douaumont that day show that the Germans suffered with extreme severity in these encounters, in which they were able to make no appreciable progress. Three attacks were made in all. Each attack was made by four lines of men. The French artillery and machine guns mowed down the lines as they came on, and the ground was covered with German dead.

Saturday morning the Germans made new and stronger efforts to capture the Vaux position. After a prolonged bombardment further infantry attacks were made against the village, and the Germans gained a foothold in some houses to the east of the village church. When an effort was made to continue these gains to include the western part of the village the Germans were driven back and the French were left in possession of the western part.

The Germans then turned their attention to the Vaux Fort and were able to make some progress along the slopes leading to the fort, but failed under the French fire to reach the barbed wire entanglements.

The Germans made a spirited attack on the French salient at Bois des Buttes, near the Ville aux Bois, northwest of Berry au Bac. Several hours of preparatory artillery work preceded the attack. French counter-attacks drove the Germans from the north-western and western extremity of the wood, which the Germans had won.

The Germans also won temporary possession Saturday night of an important communication trench on the west side of the Meuse between Bethincourt and Chattancourt. The French recovered the trench immediately by a counter-attack.

It was reported yesterday that Colonel Briant, the hero of the defence of the Caures woods, who it was feared had been killed in the action, has been picked up by German stretcher-bearers.

Assaults made by the French in massed formation Saturday against the newly-won German positions on the left bank of the Meuse, northwest of Verdun, were repulsed with heavy losses to the attackers, says the official statement issued yesterday at the German army headquarters. Since the present operations were commenced in the Meuse region, the statement adds, 26,472 unwounded French officers and men have been taken prisoner and 189 guns and 232 machine guns have been captured.

Bulgars Attack Roumanians.

LONDON, March 13.—The Odessa correspondent of The Daily Mail telegraphs: A conflict is reported between Roumanians and Bulgarians near Lokova (Rahovo?). A Bulgarian frontier guard fired from trenches on a Roumanian ship which was loading a barge on the Roumanian zone. The Bulgarians signaled to an Austrian gunboat, which ordered the Roumanian vessels to the Bulgarian shore. The Roumanians ignored the order. The gunboat then fired with machine guns and rifles. The Roumanian troops replied. There were many casualties on both sides.

Road Foreman Arrested.

REGINA, Sask., March 13.—William Oxmun, a road foreman in the employ of the Saskatchewan Highways Commission, has been arrested at Kinistino, charged with obtaining money under false pretences. The arrest was made by Provincial Police. A preliminary hearing has been held, and Oxmun is on bail of $2,000. His arrest followed investigations by the department in road work during the years 1912-15. The department swore out the warrant.

Major-General Long Resigns.

LONDON, March 13.—A sensation has been caused at the War Office by the sudden resignation of Major-General S. S. Long, Director of Supplies and Transport.

Regarding the resignation The Express remarks:

"His has been one of the master successes of the war. Why is such an enormously valuable asset as his experience permitted to be lost to the Government at such a time?"

RUSSIANS IN KIRIND.

Natives Are Now Joining Grand Duke in March on Bagdad.

PETROGRAD, March 13.—It is officially announced that the Russians have occupied the town of Kirind, Persia, in the direction of Bagdad.

Russian prestige is increasing by leaps and bounds. The fickle tribes of Luristan, said to have been bought over by the Germans, have been impressed by the capture of Kermanshah and are now yielding submission to the Russians.

The Tiflis paper, Kavkaz, publishes an interview with the recently captured Turkish Ambassador in Persia, Assim Bey. Assim declared that in his opinion Russia possessed an inexhaustible power of resistance.

The calculations of German diplomacy on a holy war in Persia, with participation of the nomad tribes, had proved an irreparable error, a political mirage that would soon fade away, since there were no German officers to lead them on the Persian front and there was no likelihood that they could be sent hither after the Russian successes in Armenia.

On the Black Sea coast the Russian fleet keeps up a steady fire on scattered detachments of Turkish troops, and cruising along the coast shells Turkish transport trains and checks every effort to bring up supplies to the hard-pressed Third Ottoman army.

That the Turks are in desperate straits is shown by the fact that in spite of the presence of Russian warships they persist in trying to transport supplies along the open coast road. The Russian ships shell bridges that span the river, now swollen to torrents because of the melting snows, and so make the final coastal road impassable for the Turks. The want of bridges, however, does not impede the progress of the Russians, who have the fleet on their flank.

MUST PROPOSE PEACE.

Germany Must Move, and at Once, Says Maximilian Harden.

LONDON, March 13.—Maximilian Harden is most outspoken in an article in Zukunft, which has been received here. He makes a strong demand for peace, and urges that the German Government start negotiations immediately.

"Germany," he says, "has heaped victory upon victory. Upon her therefore devolves the duty of making an offer of peace. Such an offer could only add to, and not diminish, her prestige. It would be proof of her strength, not weakness. Besides, Germany must propose peace, because she is in need of peace. Germany is victorious in the field, but internally she is beset with difficulties. We already feel that the preparations for the third harvest are more difficult than for the second. We do not yet lack men, but we can no longer procure certain raw materials.

"Meanwhile, our war expenditure is increasing to an alarming extent. At the end of three years of war we should have lost every one of the commercial markets where we had established positions which were seemingly unassailable.

"If Germany waits longer she will find herself reduced to obey the will of her enemies. It thus becomes necessary that she invite the world to conclude peace. This invitation may be interpreted as a sign of weakness, but that matters little. If our offers are declined we shall have fulfilled the final duty which our conscience dictates toward Europe and toward humanity."

Americans Cross Border.

WASHINGTON, March 13. — In three columns, American cavalry, under command of Major-General "Fighting" Fred Funston, the advance guard of a punitive expedition of 20,000 started across the Mexican border yesterday and began the pursuit of Francisco Villa and his bandits. The mounted columns started from Douglas, Ariz., Columbus, N. M. and El Paso, Texas. The advance was made simultaneously.

Villa, with his bandits, is believed to be heading for the fastnesses of the Sierre Madre, further south. He is seeking to get into a wild country of which he knows every foot and where pursuit by the American troops will be most difficult.

Brazil With Allies.

RIO JANEIRO, March 13.—Germany's declaration of war on Portugal has called forth expression of sympathy in various quarters here with the cause of the Entente allies. Saturday night there were enthusiastic demonstrations in the streets of the capital.

The Epocha, commenting on the Governmental decree of neutrality, says:

"We are not neutral. We entertain the most ardent wish for the victory of Portugal and the allies, and in order that may become a reality the majority of Brazilians will do all that they are able, both from a material and a moral point of view."

Conductors Sent to Trial.

OTTAWA, March 13.—Six C. P. R. conductors and three others, charged with conspiracy to defraud the C. P. Railway, were committed for trial in the Police Court Saturday. A seventh conductor, Robt. J. Willoughby, was not sent for trial on this charge, the magistrate holding no evidence had been presented to connect him with the conspiracy. Willoughby, however, will face an individual charge of defrauding the company. The six conductors are Silas Alexander, Mark Baker, Thomas Carter, Harry Dunham, Charles A. Dunham and Francis Nelson, and the others, Clarence Bortse, Harry Marson, and Abraham Pinco.

LEAGUE WITH ROUMANIA

Russia Is Reported to Have Enlisted Her Aid.

German Paper Declares That Roumania Will Soon Throw Her Weight Into the Struggle on the Side of the Entente Allies—Russia May Give Roumania a Part of Bessarabia as Her Price of Action.

LONDON, March 13.—The Sofia correspondent of the Berlin Vossische Zeitung telegraphs, according to a despatch from Amsterdam, that it is expected that Roumania will shortly decide in favor of intervention on the side of the Entente. The Roumanian Minister to Bulgaria, the correspondent says, is expected to return to Sofia with instructions, which it is generally assumed will settle the future relations between Bulgaria and Roumania.

A telegram from Bucharest says that the session of the Roumanian Parliament has been extended to March 28.

An agreement has been reached between Roumania and Russia, which is believed to indicate the definite decision of Roumania to adhere to the cause of the Entente allies, according to a Bucharest despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The agreement permits Roumania to purchase war materials in Russia and to transport through Russia war materials purchased elsewhere.

It is reported that Russia has agreed, further, to give to Roumania part of Bessarabia.

The renewal of Russian activity along the Bessarabian and Rigi fronts is indicated in the official statements issued at Petrograd. So far this has been confined to artillery combats, and to the bombardment of the German positions.

That the Germans are concentrating large bodies of troops in Bukowina in preparation for Roumania's entry into the war on the side of the Allies, is also reported from Petrograd. The Russians have succeeded in shelling several of these columns on the march.

ALLIED WARSHIPS SUNK.

Two Small Russian Craft Destroyed by Mines in Baltic.

LONDON, March 13.—The Russian torpedo boat destroyer Leitenan Pushtchin has been sunk by a mine, according to a report from Sofia, Bulgaria. Four officers and 11 sailors of the crew of the destroyer were rescued by Bulgarians.

The Russian official report says: "On the 9th two of our destroyers reconnoitring near Varna, on the Black Sea, were attacked by enemy submarines, which sank the destroyer Leitenan Pushtchin. Part of her crew was rescued by the other destroyer."

It was officially announced at the British Admiralty yesterday that the mercantile fleet auxiliary Fauvette of 2,644 tons gross has been sunk as the result of striking a mine off the east coast of England. Fourteen members of the crew were lost, including two officers.

The Fauvette was formerly in the service of the General Steam Navigation Company, Limited, of London. The vessel was built at Middlesborough in 1912. She was 315 feet long, 43 feet beam, and 18 feet deep.

Gets Eighth Aeroplane.

PARIS, March 13.—The French official communique reports that Sunday morning Sub-Lieut. Guyemer brought down a German aeroplane, which fell in flames inside the French lines near Thiescourt. This is the eighth aeroplane brought down by this pilot, six having fallen within the French lines and two inside the German lines. Another aviator similarly brought down an enemy aeroplane inside the French lines near Dombasle, in the Argonne. The passengers of the two destroyed machines were killed. The same day French battle aeroplanes fought 13 aerial engagements in the region of Etain, in the course of which the adversaries were put to flight.

Detroit Gunmen Rounded Up.

The announced purpose of the raids is to break up a large band of so-called gunmen and other alleged criminals who have been making Detroit their headquarters.

Burned to Death in Texas.

BRANTFORD, March 13.—That Thos. D. James, an old Brantford boy, had been burned to death in a fire which destroyed his home at El Paso, Texas., was the word received here yesterday by his brother, Simon James. The deceased man left Brantford in 1868 and has been engaged in saddle-making in El Paso. He was married and is survived by six children.

A recent regulation says—The regulations covering plowing and seeding furlough for non-commissioned officers and men of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, as contained in the recent militia order issued at Ottawa were published in camp orders yesterday The order points out that the furlough can only be granted on approval of the A.A.G. to whom applications should be sent one week before the time the furlough is to commence. The period of absence must not exceed one month and only men of good character will be given leave. The furlough is granted only on the understanding that the men leaving will work on the land for the period desired, and proof that a man has actually been working during the time will be required to be presented in the form of a certificate from the employer or employers, confirmed under the signature of a clergyman or two responsible persons resident in the locality. In the case of a man working on his own land he will sign a certificate to that effect, and further proof may be demanded if it is thought necessary. During the period of furlough pay and allowances will be withheld, and will be paid on the return of the man with proof that he has actually been at work. In case of misconduct or failure to engage in work pay and allowances may be cut off for such period as is thought necessary. Men leaving to engage in farm work will be provided with transportation and will wear working suits, leaving their uniforms behind. Commanding officers will be held personally responsible for the proper carrying out of the regulations.

The Lucknow Sentinel has decided to auvance its subscription rate to $1.50 per annum, beginning on July 1st, 1916. The editor says:—With everything that goes to the making of a newspaper, and almost every necessity of life practically double in cost what they were when the one dollar per year rate was established, it was impossible that the country newspaper should remain at the old figure. Men will not continue in a business which does not give average returns, and with the country weekly it has become a matter of go up in price or go out of business. To those who think this unreasonable we would say that it is no more unreasonable than that eggs which used to sell at from 8 to 14c per dozen should now be from 20 to 40c per dozen, or that hogs which used to sell at 3½ to 6c per pound should now be 8 to 10c per pound, etc. It is needless to multiply examples. And the Lucknow Sentinel might have said that the cost of labor is practically 100 per cent higher than twelve years ago

Good For Children

Mothers! Physicians agree that flavour and the body building elements of grain lie in the dark parts usually thrown away. So also does the lime salts which your child needs to harden bones and teeth. Children fed upon dark cereals develop greater resistance. Witness the Bulgars and Serbs. Roman soldiers who conquer the world fed upon two breads of grain food a day. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is a scientifically balanced ration made from several entire grains. It's delicious, easily prepared in a variety of ways and nurishes better than meat. ## Germans Debate American War

(Mail and Empire)

IN the Frankfort Zeitung a writer discusses the problem, "Would war with the United States pay Germany?" He comes to the conclusion that, on the whole, it would pay, and consequently recommends it to the authorities. The article, in view of the censorship in Germany and the high standing of the paper in which it appears, is a remarkable expression of German opinion, and a remarkable revelation of the workings of the German war mind. If war will pay, why then, make war. What else is to be considered? If we can win by resorting to atrocities that will make our name infamous as long as time endures, why should we hesitate? Our only business is to win the war, and if we can win it more speedily by sacrificing hundreds, thousands, or even millions of women and children, and non-combatants who can never do us any harm, the only sensible thing is to sacrifice them. It is true that there would be cries of barbarism, but they have been heard already, and can hardly be any louder. On the other hand, is it not true humanity to end the war at whatever cost to the enemy or to neutrals and thus save the lives of our own soldiers?

What America Could Do

The writer in the Frankfort Zeitung admits that there are two opinions in Germany as to the advisability of war against the United States, one maintained by navalists, who are in favor of the war, and the other by strategists, who are against it. The arguments of the strategists are thus set forth under the heading "What America Could Do"

First. Confiscate our merchant ships now lying in her harbors, the value of which represents at least $250,000,000. Thereby we should be robbed of the kernel of our mercantile marine, while by the same token the Americans would automatically become possessed of a fine merchant fleet. In the early period following peace this would be deplorable, because America would then be in a position to usurp Germany's former sea commerce.

Second. America could place a further $3,000,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 at the disposal of the allies for the continued prosecution of the war.

Third. She could supply our present enemies with double the quantities of munitions they now are getting from her.

Fourth. America's example in taking up arms against us might unfavorably influence Greece and Roumania.

Let Loose the Submarines

The navalists argue, on the other hand, that if the United States were to be recognized as an open foe the German navy could for the first time undertake a really ruthless and effective war, not upon the United States, but upon Great Britain, and in all the calculations Britain is reckoned as the chief enemy. The Germans would, upon the declaration of war upon the United States, declare the British isles blockaded, and would announce to the world that any vessel attempting to reach any British port would be attacked by submarines and sunk without warning regardless of the flag it might be flying. Thus the Germans would be rescued from the trickery of the British by which all merchant vessels are secretely armed, and thus entitled to some consideration as long as the United States remains neutral. The navalists seem to have little doubt of their ability to completely isolate the British Isles, and they say that as there is only about three week's supply of food in the United Kingdom, the war would be brought to an end almost instantly by the starvation of the population. "With the fall of England" says the writer, "Russia and France will also automatically collapse, like the organs of a body whose heart has been bored through"

United States Helpless

The fact that the United States would seize German shipping the navalists consider unimportant. The United States would only keep possession of the interned German ships while the war lasted. As soon as the European Allies were defeated Germany could despatch to the United States a navy several times larger than the American fleet and dictate her own peace terms. These would include the surrender of the ships and a payment of an indemnity to Germany and her allies. As regards points two and three in the strategists' arguments, the navalists say that the United States could supply the Allies with neither money nor munitions if the British coast were effectively blockaded.

No Fear of Neutrals

As regards the effect upon Roumania and Greece, what could it matter what they did if Britain could be starved out? In any event they would not immediately enter the war in the ranks of the Central Powers. They would probably wait to see how matters went. It is to be what success the campaign of starvation had. If it succeed they would not dare protest; if it failed only two other small enemies would be added to a combination already irresistible. If the strategists say that the proposal is after all a huge gamble, and that the navy cannot guarantee performing what it claims, the navalists retort; "He who dares wins." We shall know before long whether the strategists or the navalists have the upper hand with the War Lords. It is not unnatural to suppose that once the Kaiser and his generals realise that all hopes of a decisive victory on land have fled, they are likely to make some desperate attempt upon the high seas, and this attempt may take the form recommended by the Frankfurt Zeitung. This will be the decision awaited and welcomed by the British navy, whose only hope it is that it may have the supreme opportunity and honor of dealing the death-stroke to the German cause

Death of George Johnston.

On Friday evening about seven o'clock Mr George Johnston, one of Wiarton's earliest settlers, passed peacefully away at the age of 63 years, after an illness extending over a period of several months. Heart trouble was the cause of death. In the afternoon he appeared to be much better and asked to be raised up in bed, and talked to his son about half an hour. In the evening he called his wife and asked to be raised again, sat up a moment or two and sank back in her arms, dead. Although told by his physician that his case was hopeless, his death coming so suddenly was a shock to his family.

The deceased was born in Northern Michigan, and as a boy worked in the copper mines in that region, and when still a boy his family moved to Canada, where he learned the mason trade. He came to Wiarton 39 years ago, when Berford street was only a path and all the business places were on the hill, and has been a resident of the town ever since.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. E. Thompson, under the auspices of the Orangemen, of which order he was a member for many years. A large number of Orangemen followed the remains to its last resting place, and six members of L. O. L. 1240, Oxenden, of which lodge he was a member acted as pall bearers. They were Messrs Jas Daw, Chas. Daw, Wm. Evans, D. A. Kent, George, Mallard and George Leonard.

Quite a number of the soldiers of the 160th Bruce Battalion stationed here marched in a body to the cemetery and created an impressive scene.

The floral offerings were numerous and pretty, the most attractive being a beautiful wreath from the boys of the 160th.

He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, five daughters and two sons, viz.,—Mrs E. Hawke, Owen Sound, Mrs Chas. Shaw, Meaford, Mrs E. E. Lougheed, Portland, Ore., Mrs Jos. Couture, Cobourg, Margaret at home Jas. of Vancouver, B. C. and Thos. with the 160th Bruce Battalion, Wiarton.

Uric Acid Suffering

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Tobermory is Doing Her Bit

Tobermory is proud of her boys. A grand recruiting meeting and concert was held here last Friday evening. The town hall was filled to overflowing by proud citizens of the village, who turned out in a blinding snowstorm to honor their boys in khaki. As the boys took the platform at the opening of the meeting they were heartily applauded and well they merited the applause for each looked a true blue soldier of the King.

Music, speeches and cheers made up the program and all tended to make the meeting a grand success.

The Elite orchestra, of Tobermory was the musical feature of the evening. This organization is unsurpassed in Bruce county and proved a rare treat for all present. Patriotic songs were rendered by local talent and brought the patriotic fever to its height. The speakers included Rev. Mr Marner, Mr Wm Gillis, Mr. J. C. Hopkins, Mr. Wm. Simpson and Mr. Geo Golden. The speeches were forceful, breathed the atmosphere of patriotism, and made plain the duty of every true Canadian in stamping out the German tyrant. Nor were the Tobermory boys slow to respond to such appeals for the khaki on the platform was soon hidden by men in civilian clothes who went forward and expressed their willingness to enlist either immediately or in the near future. Among them were some of our most prominent citizens

The chairman, Mr. Wm. Gillis in no small way contributed to the success of the meeting by his oratorical ability and his winning manner with the boys. He expressed his determination to go with them.

The meeting broke up with "God Save the King" three cheers and a God speed to the soldiers.

The boys took back with them three new aspersants to the awkward squad, immediate result of the their recruiting but there are more to follow.

Card of Thank.

Mrs George Johnston and family desire to thank the many friends and neighbors for their kind assistance and sympathy during the illness and death of the late Mr Johnston.

A strand-d traveller reluctantly booked a room at a somewhat shabby village inn recently. He retired to rest, but ten minutes later came downstairs again, with anger on his face.

"I must insist on having another room, sir!" he informed the inn keeper sternly.

"What's the matter with the one you've got?" asked the latter.

"Matter!" snapped the angry man "Why there are a couple of mice fighting —actually fighting in the corner of it!"

"Well, sir, replied mine host coldly, "and what d'ye expect for 2 shilling a night—a bull fight!"

BRIEF FARM NOTES.

The fertilizer value of milk comes back in the skimmed milk, and if this is fed to hogs it stays right on the farm.

With the portable colony house twenty-five hens are about as many as can be kept in one flock, and in the permanent house fifty hens are the limit.

The experiment stations of the several provinces are doing better work each succeeding year. The scientists are maturing, and the people are appreciating.

Is the ram kept from the ewes in the daytime or does he run with them all of the time? Better keep them apart, allowing him with them a few hours daily. Result—better lambs and more of them.

The improvements of good roads and ditches is a matter which concerns every farmer who desires to increase the value of his land or the farm property of the community in which he resides.

Farm Machinery Investment.

A difficult problem on the Canadian farm is to decide how much and what kind of machinery should be purchased. Some farms are so overstocked with machinery that the depreciation, interest, and repairs eat up much of the profits.

Assuming the average depreciation on machinery at 10 per cent. and the interest on the money invested at 6 per cent., we have an average yearly expense of approximately $13 on each $100 invested in machinery. A man who has $1,500 worth of machinery would have $195 expense on this alone in interest and depreciation. If his work could be done with half this amount he could save $97.50. This would be equivalent to the interest on $1,625 at 6 per cent.

A farm of eighty acres cannot profitably use four-horse machinery, because three horses should do the work on a farm of this size. In buying machinery too large in proportion to the size of the farm unnecessary expense is added. This comes, not only in the increased cost of machinery, but also in the maintenance of any extra horse required.

Rotation in Severe Cases.

Recent experiments have shown that in certain sections of the country the soil of a field producing a crop of smutted wheat this year may harbor enough smut spores to cause the appearance of smut in next year's crop if the field be reseeded to wheat. This sometimes occurs where smut is very bad, in spite of the planting of treated seed, and shows that in such localities crop rotation should be practiced, in addition to seed treatment. Bunt or covered smut of wheat attacks no other cereal crop, but other cereals have their own smut diseases.

less.) The quartet brushed past the old man, and I, hearing their chatter, foolishly exposed myself.

I shall not attempt to describe the scene that followed their discovery of the Countess Tarnowsy. Be it said, however, to the credit of Elsie and Betty Billy the startled refugee was fairly smothered in kisses and tears and almost deafened by the shrill, delighted exclamations that fell from their eager lips. I doubt if there ever was such a sensation before.

* * * * *

They brought rather interesting news concerning the count. It appears that he and the baron had quarreled, and at the time of my friends' departure from Vienna it was pretty generally understood that there would be a duel.

"I never liked the baron," I said, with a grim smile that could not have been misinterpreted, "but I hope to heavens he isn't killed."

Mrs. Titus sighed. "Tarnowsy is regarded as a wonderful marksman."

"Worse luck!" growled Collingraft, gloomily twiddling his thumbs.

"What kind of a shot is the baron?" asked Jasper junior hopefully.

No one was able to enlighten him, but Billy Smith shook his head dolefully.

"Maria Tarnowsy is a dead shot. He'll pot the baron sure."

"Hang it all," said I, and then lapsed into a horrified silence.

When the Tuzzards and Smiths departed the next morning they were in full possession of all of our plans, hopes and secrets, but they were bound by promises that would have haunted them throughout all eternity if they allowed them to be violated. I do not recall having seen two more intensely excited, radiant women in my life than Elsie and Betty Billy. They were in an ecstatic state of mind. Their husbands, but little less excited, offered to help us in every way possible, and to prove their earnest, turned the prow of the motorboat down stream, abandoning the trip up the river in order to be in Vienna in case I should need them for any purpose whatsoever.

"You may rest easy so far as I am concerned, Mrs. Titus," said the young diplomat. "As a representative of the United States government I can't become publicly involved in this international muddle. I've just got to keep my lips sealed. If it were discovered that I knew of all this, my head would be under the snickersnee in no time at all. Swish! Officially suicided!"

At 10 o'clock the next morning I was called to the telephone. Smith had startling news to impart. Count Tarnowsy and Baron Umovitch had engaged in a duel with pistols at sunrise and the latter had gone down with a bullet through his lungs! He died an hour later. Tarnowsy, according to the rumors flying about official Vienna, was already on his way to Berlin, where he would probably remain in seclusion until the affair blew over or imperial forgiveness was extended to him.

There was cause for satisfaction among us, even though the baron had fallen instead of the count. The sensational affair would serve to keep Tarnowsy under cover for some weeks at least and minimize the danger attending the countess' flight from the castle. Still, I could not help feeling disappointed over the outcome of the meeting. Why couldn't Count Tarnowsy have been the one to fall?

The countess, very pale and distrait, gave utterance to her feelings in a most remarkable speech. She said: "This is one of the few fine things that Maria has ever done. I am glad that he killed that man. He should have done so long ago, the beast! He was—ugh!—the most despicable creature I've ever known."

She said no more than this, but one could readily grasp all that she left unuttered.

Collingraft rather sententiously remarked to little Rosemary, who could not have comprehended the words of course, "Well, little Rosebud, your papa may be a spendthrift, but he never wastes bullets."

Which was entirely uncalled for, I contend. I was struck by the swift look of dread that leaped into Aline's eyes and her pallor.

On top of all this came the astonishing news by cipher dispatch from old Jasper Titus' principal adviser in London that his offer of $1,000,000 had been declined by Tarnowsy two days before, the count having replied through his lawyers that nothing short of two millions would induce him to relinquish all claims to his child.

I had been ignorant of this move in the case and expressed my surprise.

"I asked father to do it, Mr. Smart," said the countess dejectedly. "It seemed the easiest way out of our difficulties—and the cheapest. He will never give in to this new demand though. We must make the best of it."

"But why did you suggest such a thing to him?" I demanded with heat.

She looked hurt. "Because you seemed to think it was the right and honorable thing to do," she said patiently. "I do not forget what you said to me days and days ago even though it may have slipped your mind. You said that a bargain is a bargain and—well, I had Mr. Bangs write father just what you thought about it."

There was a suspicion of tears in her voice as she turned away and left me without another word. She was quite out of sight around the bend in the staircase and her little boots were clattering swiftly upward before I fully grasped the significance of her explanation—or, I might better say, her reproach. It slowly dawned upon me that I had said a great many things to her that it would pay me to remember before questioning her motives in any particular.

As the day for her departure drew nearer—it was now but forty-eight hours away—her manner seemed to undergo a complete change. She became moody, nervous, depressed. Of course all this was attributable to the dread of discovery and capture when she was once outside the great walls of Schloss Rothhoefen. I could understand her feelings and rather fancied attempted to bolster up her courage by making light of the supposed peril.

She looked at me with a certain pathetic somberness in her eyes that caused my heart to ache. All of her joyous raillery was gone, all of her gentle arrogance. Her sole interest in life in these last days seemed to be of a sacrificial nature. She was sweet and gentle with every one—with me in particular, I may say—and there was something positively humble in her attitude of self abnegation. Where she had once been wilful and ironic she was now gentle and considerate. Nor was I the only one to note these subtle changes in her. I doubt, however, if the others were less puzzled than I. In fact, Mrs. Titus was palpably perplexed, and there were times when I caught her eying me with distinct disapproval, as if she were seeking in me the cause of her daughter's weakness, as much as to say, "What other nonsense have you been putting into the poor child's head, you wretch?"

"I went up to have a parting romp with Rosemary on the last night of her stay with me. The countess paid but little attention to us. She sat over in the window and stared out into the dusky shadows of the falling night. My heart was sore. I was miserable. The last romp!

Blake finally snatched Rosemary off to bed. It was then that the countess aroused herself and came over to me with a sad little smile on her lips.

"Good night," she said rather wistfully, holding out her hand to me.

I deliberately glanced at my watch. "It's only ten minutes past 8," I said reproachfully.

"I know," she said quietly. "Good night."

CHAPTER XXIII.

I Speed the Parting Guest.

FOUR o'clock in the morning is a graceless hour. Graveyards may yawn at 12, but even they are content to slumber at 4. I don't believe there is anything so desolate in this world as the mental perspective one obtains at 4 o'clock. Tombstones are bright beacons of cheer as compared to the monumental regret one experiences on getting up to greet the alleged and vastly overrated glories of a budding day. The sunrise is a pall. It is a deadly, dour thing. It may be pink and red and golden and full of all the splendors of the east, but it is a resurrection, and you can't make anything else out of it. Staying up till 4 and then going to bed gives one an idea of the sunrise that is not supported by the facts. There is but one way to appreciate the real nature of the hateful thing called dawn, and that is to get up with it instead of taking it to bed with you.

Still, I suppose the sun has to come up, and perhaps it is just as well that it does so at an hour when people are least likely to suspect it of anything so shabby.

Four o'clock is more than a graceless, sodden hour when it ushers in a day that you know is to be the unhappiest in your life; when you know that you are to say farewell forever to the hopes begot and nurtured in other days; when the one you love smiles and goes away to smile again, but not for you. And that is just what 4 o'clock on the morning of the 14th of September meant to me.

Britton and I set forth in the automobile just at the break of dawn, crossing the river a few miles below the castle and running back to a point on the right bank where we were to await the arrival of the boat conveying the countess and her escort. Her luggage, carefully disguised as merchandise, had gone to Trieste by fast express a couple of days before, sent in my name and consigned to a gentleman whose name I do not now recall, but who in reality served as a sort of middleman in transferring the shipment to the custody of a certain yacht's commander.

It was required of me—and of my machine, which is more to the point—that the distance of 120 miles through the foothills of the Austrian Alps should be covered and the passengers delivered at a certain railway station fifty miles or more south of Vienna before 10 o'clock that night. There they were to catch a train for the little seaport on the upper Adriatic, the name of which I was sworn never to reveal, and, as I have not considered it worth while to be released from that oath, I am of necessity compelled to omit the mention of it here.

Mr. Bangs went on to Vienna the night before our departure, taking with him Helene Marie Louise Antoinette, a rather shocking arrangement, you would say, unless you had come to know the British lawyer as well as we knew him. They were to proceed by the early morning train to this obscure seaport. Collingraft Titus elected to accompany his sister the entire length of the journey, with the faithful Blake and Rosemary.

Billy Smith was to meet us a few miles outside the town for which we were bound, with a word of warning if there was anything sinister in the wind.

I heard afterward from Poopendyk that the departure of the countess and Rosemary from the castle in the gray, forlorn dawn of that historic 14th was attended by a demonstration of grief on the part of the four Schmicks that was far beyond his powers of description, and he possesses a wonderful ability to describe lachrymose situations, rather running to that style of incident, I may say. The elder Schmicks wailed and boohooed and proclaimed to the topmost turrets that the sun would never shine again for either of them, and to prove that she was quite in earnest about the matter Gretel fell off the dock into the river and was nearly drowned before Jasper junior could dive in and get her. Their sons, both of whom cherished amorous feelings for Blake, sighed so prodigiously all the way down the river that the boat rocked. Incidentally during the excitement Jinko, who was to remain behind and journey westward later on with Mrs. Titus and Jasper junior, succeeded after weeks of vain endeavor in smartly nipping the calf of Hawkes' left leg, a feat of which he no doubt was proud, but which sentenced my impressive butler to an everlasting dread of hydrophobia and a temporary limp.

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the boat slipped into view around the tree covered point of land and headed straight for our hiding place on the bank.

I shall not stop here to describe the first stage of our journey through the narrow, rocky byroads, that ended eventually in the broad alpine highway south and west of Vienna. Let it be sufficient to say that we jostled along for twelve or fifteen miles without special incident, although we were nervously anxious and apprehensive. Our guidebook pointed, or rather twiddled, a route from the river flats into the hills, where we came up with the main road about 8 o'clock.

We were wrapped and goggled to the verge of ludicrousness. It would have been quite impossible to penetrate our motor masks and armor even for one possessed of a keen and practiced eye. The countess was heavily veiled. Grea goggles bulged beneath the green, gauzy thing that protected her lovely face from sun, wind and man. A motor coat two or three sizes too large enveloped her slender, graceful figure, and gauntlets covered her hands. Even Rosemary's tiny face was wrapped in a silken veil of white. As for the rest of us, we could not have been mistaken for anything on earth but American automobilists ruthlessly inspired to see Europe with the sole view to comparing her roads with our own at home. You would have said on seeing us that we knew a great deal about roads and very little about home.

Collingraft and Britton, the latter at the wheel, sat in the front seat, while I shared the broad cushions of the tonneau with the countess, part of the time holding Rosemary, who was clamoring for food, and the rest of the time holding my breath in the fear that we might slip over a precipice. I am always nervous when not driving the car myself.

We stopped for breakfast at a small mountain inn fifteen miles from our starting place. The countess, a faint red spot in each cheek and a curiously bright, feverish glow in her dark eyes, revealed a tendency to monopolize the conversation, a condition properly attributed to nervous excitement. I could see that she was really thrilled by the experiences of the hour. Her quick, alert brain was keeping pace with the rush of blood that stimulated every fiber in her body to new activities. She talked almost incessantly and chiefly about matters entirely foreign to the enterprise in hand. The more I see of women the less I know about them. Why she should have spent the whole half hour devoted to breakfast to a surprisingly innocuous dissertation on Schopenhauer and Nietzsche is, or was, beyond me.

How was I to know that tears lay close to the surface of those shimmering, vivacious eyes? How was I to know that sobs took refuge behind a simulated interest in philosophy?

We had luncheon picnic fashion halfway to our journey's end, diverging from the main road to find a secluded spot where we could spread our cloth and open our hampers without fear of interruption or, to use a more sinister word, detection. It was rather a jolly affair, that first and last al fresco banquet of ours under the spreading branches of mighty trees and beside the trickling waters of a gay little mountain brook that hurried like mad down to the broad channel of the Danube, now many miles away. The strain of the first few hours had slackened. Success seemed assured. We had encountered no difficulties, no dangers in town or country. No one appeared to be interested in us except through idle curiosity; villagers and peasants stared at us and grinned; policemen and soldiers stood aside to let us pass or gave directions politely when requested to do so. There were no signs of pursuit, no indications of trouble ahead. And so we could afford to be gay and confident at our midday meal in the hills bordering the broad highway.

We even went so far as to arrange for a jolly reunion in New York city at no distant day! I remember distinctly that we were to dine at Sherry's. To me the day seemed a long way off.

I suppose, being a writer of fiction, I should be able to supply at this point in the narrative a series of thrilling, perhaps hair raising, encounters with the enemy in the form of spies, cutthroats, imperial mercenaries or whatever came handiest to the imagination. It would be a very simple matter to transform this veracious history into the most lurid of melodramas by the introduction of the false and bizarre, but it is not my purpose to do so. I mean to adhere strictly to the truth and stand by the consequences. Were I inclined to sensationalism it would be no trouble at all for me to have Tarnowsy's agents shooting at our tires or gasoline tank from every crag and crannoy or to have Rosemary kidnaped by aeroplanists supplied with drag hooks or to have the countess lodged in a village prison, from which I should be obliged to liberate her with battleax and six shooter, my compensation being a joyous rest in a hospital with the fair Aline nursing me back to health and strength and cooing fond words in my rapacious ear the while I reflected on the noble endowments of a nature that heretofore had been commonplace and meek. But not! None of these things happened, and I decline to perjure myself for the privilege of getting into the list of "six best sellers."

So far as I am able to judge there was absolutely no heroism displayed during our flight through the hills and valleys unless you are willing to accept as such a single dash of dirty milles an hour which Britton made in order to avoid a rain shower that threatened to sank us if we observed the speed laws.

But wait! There was an example of bravado on my part that shall not go unrecorded. I hesitated at first to put it down in writing, but my sense of honor urges me to confess everything. It happened just after that memorable picnic luncheon in the shady dell. The countess, I maintain, was somewhat to blame for the incident. She suggested that we—that is to say, the two of us—explore the upper recesses of this picturesque spot, while the others were making ready for the resumption of our journey.

Shame, contrition, humiliation or whatever you may elect to call it, forbids a lengthy or even apologetic explanation of what followed her unfortunate suggestion. I shall get over with it in as few words as possible.

In the most obscure spot in that ancient hills I succumbed to an execrable impulse to take her forcibly in my arms and kiss her! I don't know why I did it or how, but that is just what happened. My shame, my horror over the transcendental folly was made almost unbearable by the way in which she took it. At first I thought she had swooned, she lay so limp and unresisting in my arms. My only excuse, whispered penitently in her ear, was that I couldn't help doing what I had done and that I deserved to be drawn and quartered for taking advantage of my superior strength and her gentle forbearance. Strange to say, she merely looked at me in a sort of dumb wonder and quietly released herself, still staring at me as if I were the most inexplicable puzzle in the world. Her cheeks, her throat, her brow grew warm and pink with a just indignation. Her lips parted, but she uttered no word. Then I followed her dejectedly, cravenly back to the roadside and executed an inward curse that would bang over my miserable head so long as it was on my shoulders.

Her vivacity was gone. She shrank down into the corner of the seat, and, with her back half turned toward me, gazed steadfastly at the panoramic valley which we were skirting. From time to time I glanced at her out of the corners of my eyes, and eventually was somewhat relieved to see that she had closed her own and was dozing. My soul was in despair. She loathed, despised me. I could not blame her. I despised myself.

And yet my heart quickened every time I allowed myself to think of the act I had committed.

The day was a glorious one and the road more than passably good. We bowled along at a steady rate of speed and sundown found us about twenty-five miles from our destination. Not caring to run the risk of a prolonged stay in the town, we drew up at a roadside inn and had our dinner in the quaint little garden, afterward proceeding leisurely by moonlight down the sloping highway.

Billy Smith met us six or eight miles out, and we stopped to parley. He examined the countess' skillfully prepared passports, pronounced them genuine and then gave us the cheerful news that everything was lovely and the goose hung high. The train for the coast was due to leave the Staatsbahnhof at 10:05, and we had an hour to spare. He proposed that we spend it quite comfortably at the roadside while Britton went through the pretense of repairing our tires. This seemed an agreeable arrangement for every one but Britton, who looked so glum that I, glad of the excuse, offered to help him.

No sooner was I out of the car and Billy Smith in my place beside the countess than she became quite gay and vivacious once more. She laughed and chatted with him in a manner that promptly convinced me that propinquity so far as I was concerned had had a most depressing effect upon her and that she reveled in the change of companions.

I was so disturbed by the discovery that Britton had to caution me several times to handle the inner tubes less roughly or I would damage them and we might suffer a blowout after all.

Every one appeared to be gay and frivolous, even Blake, who clattered sotto voce with Britton, that excellent rascal spending most of his time leaning against the spare tires in order to catch what she was saying for his benefit. All efforts to draw me into the general conversation were unavailing. I was as morose and unresponsive as an Egyptian mummy, and for a very excellent reason, I submit. The countess deliberately refused to address a single remark to me. Indeed, when I seemed perilously near to being drawn into the conversation she relapsed into a silence that was most forbidding. My cup of misery was overflowing.

I wondered if she would feel called upon at some distant confessional to tell the fortunate Lord Amberdale that I had brutally kissed her. And Lord Amberdale would grin in his beastly supercilious English way and say, "What else could you have expected from a bally American bounder?" She would no doubt smile indulgently.

All things come to an end, however. We found ourselves at last uttering our goodbys in the railway station, surrounded by hurrying travelers and attended by eager porters.

The countess did not lift her veil. I deliberately drew her aside. My hot hand clasped hers and found it as cold as ice and trembling.

"For God's sake," I whispered hoarsely in my humbleness, "say that you forgive me!"

She did not speak for many seconds. Then her voice was very low and tremulous. I felt that her somber eyes were accusing me even as they tried to meet my own with a steadiness that was meant to be reassuring.

"Of course I forgive you," she said. "You have been so good to me."

"Good!" I cried bitterly. "I've been harsh, unreasoning supercritical from the day I met"—

"Hush!" she said, laying her free hand upon my arm. "I shall never forget all that you have done for me. I—I can say no more."

Lord Shaughnessy Has His Doubts.

Montreal, March 9.—Lord Shaughnessy doubts the practicability of Canada raising 500,000 soldiers called for by Sir Robert Borden, and he so stated at a meeting of business and military leaders held under the auspices of the Montreal Board of Trade this afternoon with a view to encouraging recruiting in this military district, where recruiting is admittedly unsatisfactory. Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, who addressed the gathering, said this city with its 700,000 population, should easily be able to recruit 70,000; at least 50,000. To this Lord Shaughnessy replied that if so women would have to be called upon to enlist. He expressed entire devotion to the cause of Great Britain and the allies, but took the ground that the methods of giving the greatest assistance were not being followed at present. He also deprecated the multiplicity of battalions under formation at the one time.

A resolution was passed approving of what had already been done in Montreal towards recruiting, and calling upon employers to furnish lists of eligible men to the Citizens' Recruiting Association and encourage their employes to enlist at once.

"I cannot believe that the suggestion eminating from the Premier," said Lord Shaughnessy, "that we should endeavor to raise 500,000 men is a practicable suggestion. If we were to attempt to raise 500,000 or add 225,000 to our present army, we would be making a draft upon the working population of this country that would be seriously felt. Within the past few days I have received a communication from the Agricultural Department, asking if the C. P. R. could not lend its assistance towards bringing 10,000 agriculturists to the western provinces to assist in seeding and harvesting and taking them home after it is finished. With such conditions facing us we must go slowly about recruiting, and carry out the best plans for the country in a sane, methodical and businesslike way.

Not Needed Now.

Further Lord Shaughnessy said, "Some of the first contingent are still in camp in England. Meanwhile we have 130,000 men here representing an outlay of $10 000,000 or probably $12,000,000 a month, who by no means I know of can be moved across for a very long time to come. Probably it would have been better to have moved more slowly and saved some $5,000,000 a month for use hereafter, but we have them now and must maintain them.

"But will it be wise for us, with those 130,000, to go on increasing our financial responsibilities, increasing the debt of the country and therefore lessening our ability to be of financial service to the Empire when the time comes, if it should, when we are called upon for such assistance? If the time comes, we must make any sacrifice whatever to get the requisite number of troops to the front to save the situation. We must resort to conscription if necessary, although I do not think we are prepared for that, or that it will be necessary."

Lord Shaughnessy advised, that instead of starting more battalions, the units approaching completion should be entirely organized first. He suggested that employers prepare lists of eligible employes who might be canvassed carefully and intelligently. In this way he thought a sufficent supply of men could be obtained to fill the places of the troops going to England, and in turn take the places of those going to the front, supplying the losses from military wastage. Sir Sam Hughes did not agree with Lord Shaughnessy that any industry was threatened with shortage of labor, nor would it be if twice 500,000 men went to the front, he said. "We are willing to trust Baron Shaughnessy with the management and raising of railways" said Sir Sam, "but I have probably had as much experience as most men in the raising of men and so far with fairly good success."

This Talk About Production

A gentleman writes the following last week in the Tara Leader.

Dear Sir—

Permit me through the Leader to make a few remarks in connection with part of the world's wheat production, and the part that Canada has had, will have, and should have in that production. Canada last year, 1915, chased the 400,000,000 mark very close, this present year can do even better, provided the season is favourable, and I do say that it is necessary to produce all we can in order to bring money in to the country. Wheat is one of our chief articles of export, therefore every acre capable of producing wheat should be seeded. But let no man imagine for one moment that Canada's wheat is the first and most essential assistance that we can render the 'Empire. We all remember the drop wheat took last spring when it was supposed the Dardanelles was going to be forced. Why did wheat go down in Canada and the States. Simply because Russia's millions of bushels of wheat could be put on the markets of Great Britain, France, and all their Allies; that did not happen and wheat soared up. Russia still has the crop of 1914 plus 1915 and possibly plus 1916, before the war is over, and if the Dardanelles should remain in Turkish possession all the present year (which is very unlikely) Canada's 200.000,000 bushels in elevators and farmers granaries together with what the United States has for export will more than supply all the allies outside of Russia. But some will say, perhaps the States will not sell to the central powers unless they deliver, that means that there is no sale in that quarter, and if the Americans will not sell their wheat when they can get cash for it that will make the eighth wonder and will almost convince me that the end of the age is at hand, and the prophets about the end of the age, wiser than we gave them credit for being. Now as I have said Canada's first aid to the Empire is not wheat What then? Men and more men. But the farmer will say, if the young men are taken how can we raise produce to sell to keep up the finances of Canada, and how is the war debt going to be paid. My answer is, there are enough men over forty-five years with the assistance of those under that age, who are physically unfit for recruiting, and the boys under eighteen years, to farm 500,000 acres more than was farmed in 1915. But they will say, would it be wise to take the boys from school? I say there are ten thousand boys in Woolwich England, working twelve hours each day making munitions, and any Canadian parent or guardian who will not allow his son to assist in any and every kind of manual labor that is required to be done in Canada for the coming summer is an enemy and should be interned. Some men will say I require the help of all my sons on my farm. That makes no difference if they are fit to fight let them go, and hire boys. Some will say boys cannot take a man's place on a farm. I wonder if some of our farmers ever were boys, if they were they must surely know, that at least one third of the boys between the ages of fifteen and eighteen are much better men than some of their fathers ever were. Give the boys a chance to help the Empire for a few months. And I would go further and advise to take all the girls of that age, that are fit, from school and give them employment in every store, bank and office in Canada, and let the men who own the establishment go and do their bit or furnish a substitute and if they will not, let the ancient custom be again revived, have them taken to the outskirts of the town, and have a woman loose their shoes and spit in their face. We are either for the Empire or against. No straddle the fence. The day for excuses is past Judge Klein said at Wiarton a few days ago that there were enough young men, married and single, in Bruce to form six battalions. Is he correct? In conclusion all I have to say is for every man that is physically fit to stand in front of a large mirror and if possible have the picture of your father and grandfather alongside of you and if you see any resemblance between you and them do not disgrace their dust but enroll at once as a soldier of your King Thanking you; Mr. Editor for space, I remain yours truly.

"Miss Brown told me that you paid her such a charming compliment the other evening," said Mrs. Coddington to her husband, "something about her being pretty. The poor girl was so pleased. I don't see how men can be so untruthful."

"I should think you'd know by this time that I'm never untruthful," said Mr. Coddington reproachfully. "I said she was as pretty as she could be, and so she was."

Wonderful Defences Protect Verdun

(Mail and Empire)

Richard Harding Davis, who was in Verdun a few weeks ago, is of the opinion that it cannot be captured by the Germans: that it is in effect a huge trap or a bewildering succession of traps, and that to order an army to take the place is sheer murder. Too defences have been arranged so that the forts themselves are mere bases or rallying points. Actual fighting will take place in the open, and it is to be inferred from what he says that the further the Germans penetrate toward the city the more dangerous will become their position. This accounts probably for the extreme cheerfulness of the French commanders and the French people. They know what awaits the Germans at Verdun; the Germans do not. The Germans who advance towards Verdun may be in precisely the position of the hunter who advances into the bear's den.

Fourth Attack on Verdun

This is the fourth time Verdun has been attacked, always by the Prussians. In 1792 it surrendered immediately. In 1870 it made a gallant defence and then was taken; and in October 1914 it was threatened by the Crown Prince and General von Strantz. They employed seven army corps, and the defence was conducted by General Sarrail, now in command of the allies at Salonica, who had only three. The attack was made upon Fort Troyon, some 20 miles south of Verdun, and the fort was destroyed, but the Germans were repulsed. This action, however, appears to have been a mere feint, for a few days later the real attack was launched on the village of St. Mihiel, 15 miles south of Troyon. The object of General von Strantz was to break through the Verdun-Toul line to enclose Sarail from the south, and at Revigny to link arms with the Crown Prince's army. Had it succeeded Sarrail would have been completely surrounded. But the gallantry of the French at St. Mihiel prevailed, and von Strantz was forced to dig himself in.

Crown Prince's Failure

Then the Crown Prince's army took up the attack, and on October 3 it was launched through the forest of the Argonne between Varennes and Verdun; but the move had been foreseen by Sarrail and the attack was repulsed, the French capturing Varennes and Sarrail being allowed to link up his army with the fourth army of General Langle. The line formed in these engagements is practically the line of to-day. The attack from the south and the north having both failed, the Germans have now driven an offensive directly against the forts, and have, as we all know, made some gains in territory, but at a frightful cost. They have, of course, inflicted heavy losses upon the French, but the Germans are no longer able to swap soldier for soldier and life for life with the Allies. Even the capture of the fortress would be a poor recompense for the tremendous loss of life in the Crown Prince's army.

Every Inch Swept By Guns

For 20 miles in front of Verdun, Mr. Davis says trenches and barbed wire have been spread. In turn these are covered by artillery positions in the wood and on the height. Even were the fort destroyed the foe would have to pass over a terrain every foot of which is under fire. He speaks of the approaches to a fort which he visited last month, which he says were more impressive than the fort itself. "The glacis of the fort stretched for a mile, and as we walked in the direction of the German trenches there was not a moment when from every side French guns could not have blown us to fragments. They were mounted on the spurs of the hills, sunk in pits, ambushed in the thick plus woods. Every step forward was made cautiously between trenches or through mazes of barb wire and iron burdles with bayonet-like spikes. Even walking leisurely you had to watch your step. Pits opened suddenly at your feet, and strands of barbed wire caught at your clothing. Whichever way you looked trenches flanked you. They were dug at every angle, and were not further than 50 yards apart.

The Nests of the "Seventy-fives."

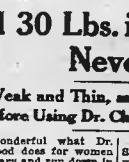
"On one side, a half-mile distant, was a hill heavily wooded. At regular intervals the trees had been cut down and uprooted, and like a wood road a cleared place showed. These were the nests of the seventy-fives. They could sweep the approaches to the fort as a fire hose flushes a gutter. That a human being should be ordered to advance against such pitfalls and obstruction and under the fire from the trenches and batteries seemed sheer murder. Not even a cat with nine lives could survive. No rehearsal could teach a man to avoid the pitfalls that surround Verdun. The open places are as treacherous as quicksands, the forests that seem to offer him shelter are a succession of traps. And if he captures one fort he but brings himself under the fire of two others."

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD



Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Gained 30 Lbs. in Few Weeks Never Felt So Well

Was Pale, Weak and Thin, and Had Nervous Headaches Before Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is truly wonderful what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does for women who are weak, weary and run down in health. New, rich blood is what is needed in nearly all such cases, and because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new blood it brings cure — not mere relief, but actual cure—in the great majority of such ailments.

With an abundance of rich, red blood coursing through the veins the nerves are strengthened and vigor and vitality are carried to every organ of the human body.

With the nerves properly nourished headaches and neuralgic pains disappear, appetite improves, digestion is good, you sleep and rest well, and gain in strength and weight.

Mrs. H. Laich, Cannington Manor, Sask., writes:—"You will remember me writing you last spring. Well, I gave up my doctor and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This treatment cured me rapidly and I was soon myself again. I was pale, thin and weak, suffered from stomach troubles and liver complaint, and frequently had sick, nervous headaches.

"I was surprised to find that in a few weeks' time I had gained 30 pounds in weight. I never felt so strong and well in all my life. Headaches never bother me any more, and I am grateful for the cure. If people would only give this medicine a fair trial they would certainly be cured."

Everywhere people are talking about this great food cure, which cures in Nature's way, by supplying the ingredients to form new blood, and so overcome weakness and disease by an abundance of vitality. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

To those who do not wish to buy or cannot get yarn we will supply it from the league. We ask all mothers who have boys in khaki to get yarn and knit for their boys and when finished send them to the Public Library, Wiarton, or to the Secretary with the name of the boy who they are for and the knitter. No boy will receive more than two pairs and we will feel privileged to use extra ones for other boys. # THE MEMORIAL

To the Dominion Government Passed by the Hamilton Recruiting League, March 7, 1916

Whereas, this Dominion is engaged in a war involving the very existence of British institutions—a war that calls for the most rigid economy of men and means—a war that can be successfully concluded only by the fullest utilization of all our resources.

Whereas, under the present voluntary system there is great waste of the Nation's resources.

The Hamilton Recruiting League humbly begs the Government of Canada to appoint a Commission for the purpose of:

(a) Taking a census of all men in the Dominion from 18 years of age and upwards, specifying those married and unmarried.

(b) Classifying the men according to their occupations or their fitness or preference for certain kinds of work,

(c) Classifying the industries with a view to the restriction or the ultimate elimination of such as are non-essential to the welfare of the country or are not economic factors.

(d) It being understood that the foregoing is urged with a view to the immediate application of some just and comprehensive system of draft whereby the men necessary to complete the Canadian Expeditionary forces may be readily secured.

The Hamilton Recruiting League has been a very active agency in th enlistment of soldiers. It may fairly claim a share of the credit that is due to Hamilton for her splendid contribution to the Forces of the Empire.

From its intimate knowledge of the workings of the voluntary system the League has reached the conclusion that for Canada to continue its present methods would be highly detrimental to the welfare of the country.

Canada has without a doubt attracted to the colors a very superior class of men who are actuated by the noblest principles of patriotism and duty.

Very many of these have left positions of great importance for which competent men cannot be found.

Almost every industry and family is suffering unnecessary loss through the present haphazard method of enlistment.

The first class of men who should be called upon for service are the unmarried fit men who could be released from their present occupations without serious loss to anyone.

Probably this class would suffice to complete the forces which Canada is pledged to supply.

The country could thus fulfil its obligations without serious loss of revenue or serious disturbance of its internal economy.

A system of wise selection should appeal strongly to every loyal member of the community. It is not contrary to the spirit of true Liberty nor which the Empire is fighting. That liberty for which a man will not fight is not deserving of the name. No man is free from the duty of defending the State.

It is not suggested that the proposed System of Selection should be permanent. Extraordinary need justifies extraordinary measures.

It is hoped that all who are in sympathy with the above Memorial will exert their utmost influence to further its objects.

Walkerton

The Walkerton Lutheran Church is not to be outdone by the other congregations of the town in showing its loyalty to the 160th Batt. Although only a small congregation, the members continued last week the handsome sum of $60 to the Band Fund.

Constable H. Armstrong, of Kinloss, while in Walkerton on Wednesday, offered to enlist as a guardsman on the Welland Canal and in this way to do his bit for the flag. We understand his application has been sent to the department, who are advertising for fifty men to guard the canal against the intrigues of pro-Germans who are threatening to blow it up.

In the list of Arts students of Toronto University, who are signing up for active service, and whose pictures were published in Friday's Daily Star, appears the likeness of James M. Stalker, youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm Stalker of Walkerton. Most of the students from Walkerton, who are studying in the various Universities, will soon be in khaki and enrolled in defence of the flag.

Mr. Duncan Bell, a well known cattle dealer and farmer of Saugeen township, came to Walkerton last week and enlisted as a private in the 160th Battalion. Mr. Bell, who is tall and straight as a sapling, handed over his farm to his sister, who has been living with him on the place and who will run it while her brother goes forth to fight for the empire. Bell's example in donning the khaki will, it is expected be a strong incentive to others in Saugeen to join the colors, and renewed recruiting activity in that neighborhood is looked for.

Mrs. Henry Bacon, Walkerton's oldest citizen and one of the very first settlers in this town passed away at her home here about 10 o'clock on Thursday night, at the advanced age of 93 years. The end came peacefully, though suddenly, she partaking of a lunch about ten minutes before her death. Notwithstanding her advanced age she was endowed with her full mental faculties till the last, and was bright and cheerful to the end. There were only a few settlers in Walkerton when the deceased and her late husband, Mr. Henry Bacon, located here some sixty years ago, and she has resided here ever since she has been practically an eye-witness of the growth of the town from the start.

Preparations are under way at London for the mobilization of no less than thirteen county regiments including the 160th Bruce Battalion. An immense block of land has been acquired outside of the city where the battalions will be properly accommodated for battalion and brigade manoeuvres and rifle and machine gun practice. Walkerton people would like to see the 160th Battalion stay here until they are ready to go to England but the expense that would be entailed to provide the regiment with the proper facilities for mobilizing would, it is understood, put it quite out of the question. A good deal can be said in favor of mobilizing the regiment in the County, and in case a second regiment has to be raised it would no doubt prove a great stimulus to recruiting but it is doubtful whether this consideration will have sufficient weight with the military authorities. It is believed that the 160th will be ordered to report at London about the third week in May.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Southampton

Mr. Wm. Eldridge of Arnabel was in town last week. He has about completed shipment for this season of the pulpwood, having about a half dozen carloads to go out yet. He has shipped thes winter from Southampton station over one thousand corde of pulpwood, about eighty carlords. This has meant considerable to the people of this district, particularly to the Indians on the Reserve. They received $3.60 per cord for it last spring piled on the roadside or in a field easy to be got at. Then this winter they were paid $1.00 per cord for hauling it to the station here. Mr. Eldridge states that some weeks he paid out as much as $1,000 on the Reserve for pulpwood. He has also been shipping some white birch to the bobbin factory at Walkerton. Mr. Eldridge sells all his pulpwood to an American firm, getting a stated price for it delivered. His territory is a large one covering all this district north from Goderich and east as far as Collingwood. Mr. Eldridge states there is still a lot of timber of this kind in his district and he ships from a number of points besides Southampton.

Last Monday evening the local detachment of the 160th Batt. were entertained at the Town Hall by the ladies of the business section of the town. The first part of the evening was spent in progressive euchre. Guests of honor were Pte Arthur Robinson, "our returned hero", Mr. J. C. Eckford, "the father of the regiment", Dr. C. J. Laird, "physician and friend of the boys in khaki", Each of the these gave addresses. A bountiful repast was served by the ladies, and the soldier boys demonstrated that they not only the making of good soldiers, but were also good with the cards and also splendid feeders. The ladies voted the soldier boys gentlemen all, and Lieut. McLeod moved a vote of thanks to the ladies for the splendid entertainment. The prize winners in the card games were; 1st in games—Harold Tront, pocket knife 2nd in games—Jack Lonye, khaki silk handkerchiefs; 1st lone hands—John Abayahbe, pocket flash; 2nd lone hands—Norman Pegelo, khaki silk handkerchief.

Nervous Diseases In the Spring

Cured by Toning the Blood and Strengthening the Nerves.

It is the opinion of the best medical authorities, after long observation, that nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than any other time of the year. Vital changes in the system, after long winter months, may cause much more trouble than the familiar spring weakness and weariness from which most people suffer as the result of indoor life, in poorly ventilated buildings. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus dance epilepsy and other forms of nerve trouble are at their worst, that then, more than any other time, a blood-making, nerve-restoring tonic is needed.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the ystem really needs strengthening, while purgatives only gallop through the bowels leaving you weaker. Dr. William's Pink Pills are the best medicine, for they actually make the new, rich, red blood that feeds the starved nerves, and thus cure the many forms of nervous disorders. They cure also such other forms of spring troubles as headaches, poor appetite, weakness in limbs, as well as remove unsightly pimples and eruptions. In fact they unfailingly bring new health and strength to weak, tired and depressed men, women and children.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

After spending a couple of years in Toronto he was appointed manager of a Loan Co in Regina at a lucrative salary, and held that position when he was stricken with apoplexy. Deceased was a financial expert of unusual ability.

J. H. Nichol has been appointed recruiting officer at Teeswater and left for, that village on Tuesday. Lieut Nicol is a fine soldierly looking fellow and has splendid executive ability and good tact. He will be in command of the squad at Teeswater. Lieut Nichol went with a London regiment to South Africa in the Boer war but it was nearly over when he got there. When he leaves this time with the Bruce contingent he hopes to be sent to Egypt or the Balkans.

Tara

There was a large number of spectators at the Division Court held here before Judge Greig on Tuesday. The interest centred on the appeal case of Wm. Calhoun, of Eldersile. Calhoun was appealing against a decision of magistrates, McDonald and Potts, who in December fined Wm Calhoun jr $100 and costs for assaulting Chas J. Henry at an entertainment in the Dobbington Methodist Church. A great many witnesses were examined on both sides, the evidence at times seeming very contradictory. The Judge ordered that the conviction stand and also ordered that Calhoun pay all costs of the appeal.

The military parade to the Methodist Church on Sunday 12th was well attended by men in uniform, about fifty in number, led by Capt Dannard and Sergt Martin, of Rifly. Members and friends of the church also gathered in numbers despite the unfavorable condition of roads for those living in the country. At the church the service was marked by a spirit of deep reverence and devotion on the part of all. Impressive music was rendered by the choir and a sermon delivered by the pastor from the text I Cor 16; 13 It was an appeal for christian manhood and clean stalwart heroism on the part of all engaging in the war. At the close a Roll of Honor was unveiled bearing the names of those men now at the front or in training who have in times past attended the Methodist Sunday School and church services. Of these men the church has reason to feel proud and will ever pray for their highest usefulness and success. The names of those on the Roll of Honor are:—Wallace H. Thomas, G. Nelson Thomas, Victor F. Roberts, Donald Mc. Neil, Victor McNeil, Melville Park. Edward E. Walker, Garfield L. Gibbons, Earl Plant, Melvill D. Prowd, Dr. Thos. E. Humphrey, Edward Harris.

Mr. Burgess has been in Bentinck for many years and has a legion of friends and his wife who came to Bentinck a few years ago from Nova Scotia has become greatly esteemed. A purse of money was presented to them by Mr. Alex McDonald on behalf of those present and Mr. Alex Wilson read a suitably worded address, expressing regret at their coming departure and wishing them all kinds of success in their new home. Mr. and Mrs. Burgess both replied in appropriate words. Solos were rendered by Miss Boyd, Miss Ada Eby and Mr. John Patterson and recitations by Miss Pearl Wilson and Mr. Dave Burgess. The evening was spent very pleasantly in playing games.

BATTLE FOUGHT IN AIR

Greatest Conflict Since War Began Occurs in Alsace.

With a Score of Combatants on Each Side French and German Aviators Engage in Struggle in Which Seven Machines Are Driven to Earth—Frenchmen Had Raided Muelhausen and Dropped Shells on Railway.

LONDON, March 20.—A raid by a French aeroplane squadron comprising 23 machines on upper Alsace Saturday night resulted in one of the greatest aerial battle fought in the war. The number of German machines taking part in the engagement is not announced, but the two squadrons appear to have been fairly evenly matched. Four French aeroplanes were driven to earth, and three German machines. Two of the German machines fell in flames. The raid which precipitated the battle was directed against Muelhausen and Habsheim, on the edge of the Hartweld, just to the east of Muelhausen. Altogether 72 shells were dropped on the Muelhausen freight station and the aviation camp at Habsheim.

The German squadron, which rose to drive off the invading French, gave battle at once. One of the most dramatic incidents of the engagement was a duel between a French and a German machine, which resulted in each of the two machines being so riddled by the bullets of the other's machine gun that both were compelled to descend. Three other French aeroplanes were so seriously damaged that they were forced to land in enemy territory.

The official announcement of the aerial battle given out yesterday in Berlin says that the occupants of all four of the French machines which descended are dead. The German statement says that seven inhabitants were killed and thirteen injured at Muelhausen by bombs dropped by the French machines, and that one soldier was killed at Habsheim.

Another raid of small proportions was made by the French about the same time on Metz, Chateau-Salins, and Dieuze, just east of Chateau-Salins. The targets in this raid, in which five double-motored aeroplanes took part, were the balloon station at Metz, the ammunition depots near Chateau-Salins and the aerodrome at Dieuze. Twenty large shells were dropped on the station at Metz, and ten more were divided between the other two objectives.

German aviators also executed two raids Saturday on French railway works, the first on the Clermont-Verdun line and the second on the line from Epinal to Vesoul, and also bombarded the region to the south of Dijon.

A German aeroplane, reconnoitring in the Verdun region, was brought down by a French machine near Montsaville, the German machine landing within the French lines. This was announced in the afternoon communique.

Last night's official communique tells of the bringing down of another German machine by Adjutant Navarre, making the seventh machine brought down by that aviator.

The British headquarters in France sends the following report on aerial activity on the British front:

Hostile aeroplanes were active, and there were many combats. A hostile machine was brought down in the vicinity of Rodingchem. One of our reconnaissances was heavily engaged but drove off all attacks and brought down one hostile machine in a damaged condition. All our machines returned safely, having completed their missions.

A German aeroplane from Coblenz landed at Herpt, Holland, according to the Amsterdam Telegraaf. The machine and its occupants were interned.

FRENCH DESTROYER LOST.

The Renaudin is Sunk in Adriatic by a Submarine.

PARIS, March 20.—The French torpedo boat destroyer Renaudin has been sunk in the Adriatic by a submarine. Three officers and 44 of the crew were lost. Two officers and 34 of the crew were saved.

The Ministry of Marine made the following official announcement last night regarding the loss of the destroyer: "The squadron torpedo boat Renaudin was sunk in the Adriatic by an enemy submarine on the morning of March 18. Three officers, among whom were the commandant and second officer, and 44 seamen were lost. Two officers and 34 seamen were rescued by a French torpedo boat which accompanied the Renaudin."

Brazil Has Not Seized German Ships.

RIO JANEIRO, March 20.—From a reliable source it was declared that the Brazilian Government, despite reports to the contrary in circulation in the United States, has taken no action towards requisitioning merchant vessels of German ownership interned in Brazilian ports. According to information published in the newspapers, the Brazilian Government would not consider taking such action without an amicable agreement with all interests concerned. The neutrality of Brazil in the war between Germany and Portugal has been decreed.

Canadian Girl Decorated.

LONDON, March 20.—At an investiture Saturday the King decorated with the Royal Red Cross Miss Vivien Tremaine of Montreal, acting matron of the Daughters of the Empire Canadian Hospital for officers. She is the nurse who was obtained quite fortuitously to attend upon the King when his Majesty met with his recent accident in France. She travaled to England in charge of the Royal patient.

ROUMANIA IS DECIDED.

No Further Doubt Remains Regarding Her Intentions.

LONDON, March 20.—All doubt as to Roumania's course seems at an end. On the authority of persons high in allied councils, whose names, for obvious reasons cannot be divulged, I am able to predict—so far as it is possible to anticipate events—that Roumania will join the Allies, probably in May.

Additional assurance to this effect were given me Saturday by a French official who has just returned from a mission in the Balkans. He was as confident that Roumania would cast her lot with the Allies as that the Germans would be defeated at Verdun.

Roumania is astir with preparations for war. Her factories and arsenals are running night and day to create the implements and supplies formerly furnished by the Krupps and the Skodas.

Railroads from Bucharest to Predal, on the Hungarian border, have suspended all passenger traffic. For ten days, says the Havas correspondent at Bucharest, nothing but military trains have been allowed to move toward the frontier. Trenches have been prepared and everything made ready for defence.

Machinery for shellmaking and war supplies of all kinds is being rushed from England through Russia unimpeded by the countless checks at frontiers.

Verdun has been a boomerang for the Germans in the Balkans. The rash undertaking was launched principally for its effect on Roumania and to hearten the failing Turks. It has had the opposite result. It has shown Roumania that the Teuton tide has reached its crest and split on the rock of French resistance.

Roumania's entry, it is believed, has been timed with the grand allied offensive on all fronts. On the east fresh Russian armies, re-equipped and re-munitioned, are awaiting the coming of spring. In the Balkans the Allies have gathered through the winter 300,000 troops at Salonica for the reconquest of Serbia and the invasion of Bulgaria and Thrace. They are under the command of General Sarrail, the former French commander of Verdun, one of the few commanders who have gone through the war with the reputation of never having experienced defeat.

ROUTED THE SENUSSI.

British Auto Squadron Performed Remarkable Exploit in Egypt.

LONDON, March 20.—An official statement issued by the War Office Saturday tells of the exploit of an armored automobile squadron under the Duke of Westminster on the western frontier of Egypt. It appears from the wording of the statement that the Duke is present in person on the Egyptian front. The armored car squadron bearing his name was presented by him to the Government early in the war, and distinguished itself at Neuve Chapelle.

According to Saturday's statement the squadron was used to dispose of the Senussi gun defences in the pursuit of the tribesmen near Sollum, on the Egyptian-Tripolitan frontier. The gunners in the machines shot down the gun crews of a gun and two machine guns which sought to stay the pursuit, and the action finally resulted in the capture of all the tribesmen's artillery. The British advance totalled 160 miles.

The War Office issued the following statement Saturday night:

"Egypt: Reports have been received from officers returned from Sollum regarding the action of armored cars on Tuesday under the Duke of Westminster. An aeroplane reconnaissance discovered that the Birwar camp was empty, and orders were given to pursue. The main camp was seen 25 miles west of Sollum.

"As the cars approached one gun and two machine guns came into action. These were smartly handled by the enemy, but the gun teams were shot down. The cars dashed at the camp, the enemy scattered, and the pursuit proceeded.

"Our casualties were one officer wounded. During the operation we advanced 150 miles. The report of Nuri's death is untrue."

Ninety shipwrecked sailors who had landed on the Cyrenaica coast and had been seized by the Senussi were rescued.

The report concludes: "In three weeks the force under Major-General Peyton has captured the hostile commander, killed or captured about 50 per cent. of the Turkish subordinate commanders, has driven and scattered the remnants of his force far beyond the Egyptian border, and has taken all his artillery and machine guns."

Sir Sam in England.

LONDON, March 20.—Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia, arrived at Falmouth yesterday, where he received the freedom of the city.

It was recently stated in Ottawa that Sir Sam had gone south for a rest. It is understood that after a visit to the Canadian units training in England Sir Sam will go to Flanders and spend some time with the expeditionary force there.

War Policy Approved.

ROME, March 20.—The Chamber of Deputies, at the conclusion of a stormy session Saturday night, voted to support the Government. A resolution in which approval of the Government's policy in the war was unreservedly expressed was adopted by a vote of 394 to 61.

Discussions Depress Soldiers.

LONDON, March 20.—Canadians largely attended St. Margaret's yesterday when Chaplain Shatford was the special preacher. Speaking from his experience at the front he said nothing more depressed the men than hearing of quarrels and dissensions at home.

ASSAULT FELL SHORT

Germans Failed to Reach French Lines Near Vaux.

Heavy Bombardments Have Been the Order of the Day on the Verdun Sector, but Since Failure of Saturday Germans Are Evidently Taking a Rest—Enemy Munition Depot Blown Up Near Damloup.

PARIS, March 20.—The Germans resumed their attack in the region of Vaux Saturday without changing the situation. The attack, like the violent assaults which marked the earlier efforts of the Germans to take this sector, was preceded by an intense bombardment. But on this occasion the infantry forces used to carry home the attack were small. Using these smaller forces, the Germans made a series of assaults against the line between the Vaux village and the wood to the south of the Haudromont farm. The French artillery, machine guns and rifles, threw out the customary fire curtain and at no point were the enemy troops able to reach the French lines.

Heavy bombardments occurred in the course of the day in the Verdun sector. The German artillery directed an especially heavy fire against the line Montsaville-Bois Bourrus, on the western bank of the Meuse, south of Chattancourt. The French guns were also active on the whole front, particularly in the Woevre. A German munition depot was blown up in the Moranville woods, south-east of Damloup.

Information that German troops were being brought north of Verdun front from the eastern part of the St. Mihiel salient caused the French guns to keep up a heavy bombardment Saturday night of the road between Apremont and Vigneulles.

The afternoon communique told of heavy French artillery fire on Hill 265 and the Corbeaux wood, to the west of the Meuse, to which the Germans made no response.

After their repulse Saturday the Germans apparently decided to take a breathing spell, as Sunday passed quietly without any infantry attacks. Even the bombardment by the artillery decreased in violence.

The French bombarded German trenches in Champagne and German depots north-east of St. Mihiel.

TURKS SURRENDERING.

Large Proportion of Officers Giving Up to the Russians.

PETROGRAD, March 20.—After three weeks of suspended activity the main Russian forces beyond Erzerum, which have been waiting for the development of operations on the Black Sea and in the Lake Van region to make their position secure against possible flank attacks by the Turks, have again resumed their westward march toward Sivas.

Although the Russian advance is yielding a constantly growing number of Turk prisoners, there is no reason to suppose that the Turks have begun to offer serious resistance to their pursuer. According to unofficial reports, the large number of prisoners is accounted for by the Turkish discontent with conditions prevailing in the Turkish army, which has resulted in a growing disposition of the soldiers to surrender. In this connection it is interesting to note that an exceptionally high percentage of officers have been taken prisoner. Some of them say that they were unable longer to tolerate German control of the army.

The capture of Mamahatun bridge shows that the Russian forces are within 60 miles of Erzinjan, on the road to Sivas. Sivas will probably mark the first organized resistance of the Turkish armies.

A MYTHICAL BATTLE.

Germans Claim Victory on Eastern Front to Cheer Up People.

LONDON, March 20.—In order to offset the news of the repeated defeats of the Germans at Verdun, the Berlin official report is manufacturing victories on the Russian front. Sunday's report contained this announcement:

"Eastern war theatre: The expected Russian attacks on the front of Drisviaty Lake and Postavy and on both sides of Narocz Lake began with the greatest violence, but the enemy was everywhere repulsed, with extraordinarily heavy losses. Before our positions on both sides of Lake Narocz we counted 9,270 dead Russians. Our losses were very small."

Neither the Saturday or Sunday Petrograd official report contains any reference to these alleged attacks. Saturday's report does, however, refer to the explosion of a mine by the Germans north of Lake Drisviaty, and to the repulse of two offensives by the enemy.

Japs Smash Paper Office.

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 20.—Japanese recruits in this city, who have been training for about two months in expectation of being utilized by the Canadian military authorities, and have become dissatisfied because they have not been supplied with uniforms, demolished the newspaper plant of The Canadian News, owned by Rev. Goro Kaburagi, Saturday night, in revenge for an article in the paper in question deprecating assaults by the Japanese as an outcome of their dissatisfaction. Police reserves were called out, and ten Japanese were arrested, after a scrimmage fight.

To Stay in America.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Francis Neilson, author, playwright, and Liberal member of the British Parliament for the Hyde division of Cheshire, long prominent as a land reformer, who came here recently, announced yesterday that he intended to make his home in America.

Methodist Church.

Sermons taught by the war was the subject of a sermon preached by the Rev. Mr Prudham, Sunday evening, upon the occasion of the anniversary of the Methodist Church. One thing made plain is that some nation or nations have sinned, all conflict is the result of sin. The handcuffs are placed on the criminal because of sin, and disease often sets in the body because of the same thing.

It has been a fundamental tenet of German culture that a government exists to enforce law and to make ware consequently we need not be surprised. The war teaches that we are mutually dependent upon each other, and that no nation can be cut off from international good will. Every nation contributes something to other nations, and Britain is great because her subjects are drawn from the ends of the earth.

This struggle also shows the evils that nations have endured. Most of nations have a common fault, the liquor traffic is one. Immediately upon the outbreak of war Russia and France took drastic measures to curtail the traffic, Russia prohibited the sale of vodka, France put a ban upon absinthe and Great Britain has been aroused as never before.

The war shows too, that in times of strife that the base passions of nations come out, and this war has shown the importance that nations attach to their cause being righteous. All the nations insist upon this, their cause is righteous. In concluding a sermon certainly replete with suggestive thought Mr Prudham pictured many of the good results which would follow the war.

Presentation to Mrs Masters.

Wiarton, Mar 15 1916.

Dear Mrs Masters

Having heard that you are about to leave Wiarton, we feel that we cannot let you go without an expression of our regret at your departure. You have for the past two years taken a warm interest in Trinity Church and its various organizations, especially the choir and Anglican Young Peoples Association and your assistance in these two bodies will be greatly missed.

The circumstances under which you are leaving Wiarton are unusual and unique. When your good husband, now in France, in the service of the King as a Chaplain to the forces, came into possession of the incumbency of this Parish a little over two years ago, the possibility of such a contingency arising at that time was indeed far from our thoughts, for a great war such as the European conflict raging at the present time we hardly believed possible in this enlightened age. In God's Providence however, Mr Masters has taken his place in the struggle for freedom as opposed to tyranny and while he is not we understand in the firing line, he is nevertheless doing his duty at a point not far distant from the scene of hostilities.

Your sacrifice in consenting to the separation is a noble one, we believe that the women of the land, whose husbands, sons and brothers are in the service of their country, are making sacrifice as great as the men, and in your case, the sacrifice on your part in remaining in Canada while Mr Masters is in France should be an example to others.

On behalf of the members of the choir of Trinity Church, Wiarton, we wish you to accept this electric toaster as an expression of our good wishes and when you use this aid to the daily breakfast table we hope that it will remind you of your many friends in Wiarton.

We hope and pray that the terrible struggle may soon be over with honorable victory to our arms, and that your husband along with the many thousands of our brave soldiers may safely return to Canada's shore and we trust the day is not far distant when you may be reunited again to do the work of the church in Canada.

Signed on behalf of the choir of Trinity Church.

The Bruce Herald last week said—After the Wiarton boys had been told by Col. Weir, while on a visit to that town, that he had never set eyes on a better bunch of men, it was something of a shock to the pick of their crowd, when on arriving at the N. C. O. school here the other day to be lined up by a husky Kincard.nite and in a tone of sickly confidence advised that Walkerton had a splendid lot of boys and he hoped the Wiartons wouldn't spoil them. As he finished one of the Wiartonians fell forward in a ghastly faint, and although things looked serious for a time, yet as he recovered a ripple of merriment stole over the faces of all for it appeared evidently too much for that Wiartonian to think that they had anybody up there that could spoil a Walkerton boy.

RHEUMATISM ARRESTED

Many people suffer the tortures of lame muscles and stiffened joints because of impurities in the blood, and each succeeding attack seems more acute until rheumatism has invaded the whole system.

To arrest rheumatism it is quite as important to improve your general health as to purify your blood, and the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is nature's great blood-maker, while its medicinal nourishment strengthens the organs to expel the impurities and uphold your strength.

Scott's Emulsion is helping thousands every day who could not find other relief. Refuse the alcoholic substitutes.

Dealing With the Consumer is R. R. Stevens' Method.

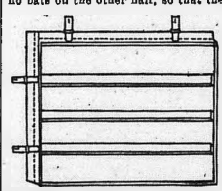
"If we could only make a fair percentage of the retail price for our milk," many dairymen have been heard to remark, "we would be able to make that industry pay fairer returns for the immense amount of labor involved." When a farmer sees milk selling in the cities and towns for six to ten cents per quart, and his receipts allow him only about four cents, he is dissatisfied; but how to bridge the gulf between producer and consumer with only one profit seems beyond the average man's ability. Many, however, have attempted it, but nearly as many have failed. R. R. Stevens of Glenrae Dairy Farm, near Bowmanville, is one of the few dairymen in Ontario who is able to put his own products directly into the hands, or rather almost into the mouths, of the consumers. To-day Mr. Stevens owns a fine farm, splendid house and barns, and one of the best herds of twenty cows in the whole Province. He is able to sell the total output of milk from his herd, all the year round, for seven cents per quart. Every pound of grain and roughage he feeds to his cows and six horses is grown on the eighty-acre farm, only the bran and meal concentrates being purchased, says Gordon Furrow in The Toronto Globe.



This is what the average visitor to Glenrae Farm will find to-day, but let us go back a few years. The comfortable living Mr. Stevens is making now is the result of unceasing toil from his early manhood. Only in the last few years has his path begun to run smoothly, and should his attention even now be relaxed the old twists and bumps in his road to prosperity would at once reappear.

"When did you make a start in dairying?" I asked Mr. Stevens when visiting the farm a short time ago. "It was just after I was married," the owner replied. "My father-in-law presented us with a pure-bred Holstein, and practically every cow you see in front of you now is related to her. The animal was a good one, but, contrary to the usual heavy producer, it was hard to induce this animal to let down her milk. The only pure-bred Holstein bull at that time was several miles away, but, despite this inconvenience, we used that breed for this animal and her progeny exclusively. Gradually we built up a herd of from eighteen to twenty cows.

"We raise only about three of the best heifers every year; the others, including the bull calves, are disposed of to our neighbors. Another point in which we are particular is the testing of our herd for tuberculosis. This is done every spring."

A Durable Stack Cover.

A very durable stack cover can be made of boards in sections about four feet wide by six feet long. Place four boards one inch by four feet by six inches side by side and fasten together by braces. Paint joints on upper side and paint bats before covering the joints. Do not run bats way to the top, but run one bat along the top, extending over about two inches on half of them and put no bats on the other half, so that the bat will cover them both. Put bats on right side of each section so that it will cover the edge of next section. Place barn hasps on the bats so that they will fit staples on the companion section. Care should be taken to get these hasps and staples rightly located. These covers will be found to be very convenient to use as stack covers, covers for machinery, chick coops, pig shade, cattle shade, etc. Being light and movable, they can be put to a great number of uses and, being rigid, are not easily blown away, nor will they sag.—Farm Progress.

NEW SILAGE POINTERS.

Both of these gases will smother a person, but they gradually disappear if the silo is well ventilated.

In a special research on the subject of silos and silage the Iowa station has found these illuminating facts on subjects supposed to be about exhausted:

The greener the corn is the more acid will develop in the silage. Most of the acid is formed in the first seven days, and at the end of three weeks fermentation is complete.

The gases which form in a silo are chiefly carbon dioxide and nitrogen, the latter forming in the largest quantity.

The kind of material a silo is made from has little effect on the quality of the silage so long as the silo is well made.

The temperature of silage in a wood stave silo, a hollow clay tile silo, and a solid concrete silo, is about the same, other things being equal.

A high degree of fermentation is not necessary for the production of good silage. Too high an acidity is harmful, and good silage has been made where the temperature did not exceed 91 degrees F.

A Good Silo.

The silo should be smooth on the inside and perpendicular from top to bottom. Uneven walls prevent the silage from settling evenly, all air is not excluded, and spoiled silage is certain. A good silo yields greater returns in proportion to cash than any other building on the farm.

King George was once enjoying the hospitality of a prominent peer at his country seat near the scene of one of Cromwell's historic battles. Strolling out one day by himself the king met the village blacksmith returning from a shooting expedition.

"I say, my good fellow," said his Majesty, genially, "I understand there was a big battle fought somewhere about here."

"Well-er," stammered the blacksmith, recognizing and saluting the King, "I did 'ave a round or two with Bill, the postman, but I didn't know your Majesty 'ad 'eard of it."—Tit-Bits.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Count Wants the Castle.

I SAW them board the train. In my heart there was the memory of a dozen kisses I had bestowed in repentant horror upon the half asleep Rosemary, who, God bless her little soul, cried bitterly on being torn away from my embrace.

"Well," said Billy Smith, taking me by the arm a few minutes later, "let's have a bite to eat and a cold bottle before we go to bed, old chap. I hope to heaven she gets through all right. I am strong for her, aren't you?"

"I am," said I, with conviction, coming out of a daze.

He led me off to a cafe, where he seemed to be more or less at home, and where it was bright and gay for him, but gloomier than the grave to me.

* * * * * * *

I drove the car home the next day. When he got down at the garage, Britton shivered and drew a prodigious breath. It was as if he had not breathed for hours. We had gone the distance in little more than half the time taken on the trip down.

"My word, sir," was all he said, but there was a significant tremor in his voice. It smacked of pride.

Mrs. Titus placidly inquired how we had got along and appeared quite relieved when I told her we had caught the train at K. Jasper junior revealed a genuine interest in the enterprise, but spoiled it all by saying that Alice, now prematurely safe, was most likely to leap out of the frying pan into the fire by marrying some blithering foreigner and having the whole beastly business to do over again.

"How soon do they go?" asked Poopendyke late that afternoon, after listening to Mrs. Titus' amiable prophecies concerning Alice's future activities and getting my harassed ear in a moment of least resistance.

"I don't know," said I hopelessly. I had heard about all I could endure concerning his lordship's magnificent estates in England, and the sort of a lord he was besides. "There's nothing to do but wait, Fred."

"She is a remarkably fine woman, but"— He completed the estimate by shaking his head, trusting to my intelligence, I suppose.

We waited two days for word from the fugitives. Late in the afternoon of the second day Britton returned from town with a telegram for me. It said:

Cargo safely aboard Pandosia, Captain Pardee commanding. Clear at 2 today. Everything satisfactory. C. G. RAFT.

No sooner was this reassuring news received than Mrs. Titus complacently set about having her trunks packed. The entire household was in a stew of activity, for she had suddenly decided to catch the 5 o'clock train for Paris. I telephoned to reserve accommodation on the Orient express from Vienna and also to have it stopped at the town across the river, a concession secured at a no inconsiderable cost.

She was to travel once more as my mother.

"You will not fail to look us up when you come to New York, will you, Mr. Smart? Mr. Titus will not be happy until he has expressed to you in person his endless gratitude. You have been splendid. We shall never forget your kindness, your thoughtfulness, your—your forbearance. I—I"—

Upon my word, there were real tears in the dear lady's eyes! I forgot and forgave much in recognition of this instant of genuine feeling on her part. It was not necessary for her to complete the sentence so humbly begun.

Their departure was made with some degree of caution. Mrs. Titus rather considerately reminding herself that my interests were at stake. I saw them aboard the train. She played her part admirably—I will say that for her. She lifted her veil so that I could bestow a farewell filial kiss upon her cheek. Jasper junior's eyes popped very wide open at this, and as he shook my hand warmly at parting he said:

"You are a wonder, John—a sure enough wonder. Why, hang it all, she doesn't even let dad do that."

But Jasper junior was very young, and he couldn't understand.

At last we were to ourselves, my extensive household and I. Late that night I sat in my study considering the best means of reducing my staff of servants and in computing, with dismay, the cost of being a princely host to people who had not the least notion what it meant to do sums in economic subtraction. It was soon apparent to me that retrenchment, stern and relentless, would have to follow upon my wild though brief season of prodigacy. I decided to dismiss the scullery maid.

I was indescribably lonely. Poopendyke was worried about my pallor, my lassitude. At the end of a week he took it upon himself to drop a line to the Hazzards, urging them to run out for a visit in the hope that company might take me out of myself. All attempts to renew my work on the ill fated novel met with utter failure. The power of mental concentration was gone. I spent most of my time in the garden.

The Hazzards came and with them the joyously beautiful Betty Billy. Poopendyke must have prepared them for the task in hand, for they proceeded at once to transform the bleak, dreary old castle into a sort of hilarious merry go round, with me in the very vortex of it all. They succeeded in taking me "out of myself," I will say that for them. My spirits took an upward bound and, wonderful to relate, retained their altitude in spite of all I could do to lower them. I did not want to be happy. I figured that I owed it to my recently aroused temperament to be permanently unhappy. But the wind blew another way, and I drifted amiably with it, as a derelict drifts with the currents of the ocean, but preferably with the warm gulf stream.

We had word from Mrs. Titus in London that negotiations had been reopened with the count and that a compromise might be expected. The obdurate nobleman had agreed, it seemed, to meet Jasper Titus' lawyers in Paris at no distant date. My chief concern, however, was for the countess herself. That she had successfully reached the high seas was apparent; if not, the newspapers, which I read with eagerness, would have been filled with accounts of her seizure. We eagerly awaited the promised cablegram from New York announcing her safe arrival there.

Smith joined us at the end of the week. I nerved myself to question him about the Englishman.

"Splendid fellow," said he, with discouraging fervor; "one of the finest chaps I know, eh, George?"

"For an Englishman," admitted Hazzard.

"He's a gentleman, and that's more than you can say for the tagtag of nobility that paid court to Aline Tarnoway. He was in love with her, but he was a gentleman about it. A thoroughbred, I say."

"Good looking?" I inquired.

"Well, rather—the sort of chap women rave about. Ask Betty. She was mad about him, but he couldn't see anything in her. I think she hates him now. He had eyes for no one but the fair countess. An awful grind on Betty. She's used to something different."

Hazzard scudded the clouds that drifted over our heads. "I wonder if Aline cared anything for him."

"I've always believed that she liked him better than she cared to admit even to herself."

"I fancy he'll not let any grass grow under his feet now that she's free," said Dr. Hazzard.

"Think she'll have him?"

"Why not? He has a much better position in England than Tarnoway has here, and he's not after her money. I hate to say it, but Aline is a seeker after titles. She wouldn't be averse to adding 'your ladyship' to her collection."

"Oh, come!" I protested. "That is a nasty thing to say, George."

"She may have been regenerated," he said obligingly. "You know her better than I do, old chap. What say?"

"I didn't say anything," I muttered.

"I thought you did."

I hesitated a moment and then purged myself of the truth. "As a matter of fact, I have reason to believe she's in love with Amberdale and has been for a long time. I'm not saying it in disparagement, believe me. God knows she's entitled to something decent and fine in the shape of love. I hope he's good enough for her."

They looked at me with interest, and Smith broke the momentary silence.

"Oh, he's good enough for her," he said, with a queer smile.

"I'm glad of that," I said gruffly.

"The old is—I mean Mrs. Titus—will be tickled to death if the match is pulled off," said Hazzard.

"She was tickled the first time," said I sententiously, and changed the subject. There was no sense in prolonging the agony.

Toward the close of their visit a message arrived from the countess herself, signed with the fictitious name we had agreed upon. The news she gave caused us to celebrate that night. We had a bonfire in the courtyard and drank to the god of good luck.

Cargo safely landed in New York and forwarded to the Adirondacks for storage and to await the appearance of a claimant. Former owner has agreed to accept $2,50,000 and release all claims. When are you coming over? ALROSE.

By the most extraordinary coincidence a curt, businesslike letter arrived in the evening post from Maris Tarnoway postmarked Paris. Its contents staggered me.

John Bellamy Smart, Esq.:

Dear Mr. Smart—Will you put a price on Schloss Rothhoefen? I am desirous of purchasing the castle if you care to sell and we can agree upon a fair price for the property. Sentiment moves me in this matter, and I earnestly hope that you may be induced to part with your white elephant. If you will be so kind as to wire your decision, you will find me deeply grateful and at the Ritz for the ensuing fortnight. Faithfully yours,

MARIS TARNOWSY.

My "white elephant!" I was so eager to get rid of it that I would have wired at once, naming a figure proportionately low had it not been for the united protests of my four friends and the canny advice of Mr. Poopendyke.

"Soak him!" said he, and I arose to the occasion.

I waited for three days and then telegraphed him that I would not take a dollar less than $250,000, more than doubling the price I had paid for the property. I was prepared, however, to come down a paltry hundred thousand or so if he revealed signs of reluctance.

We built another bonfire that night and danced around it like so many savages.

Terms acceptable. Will come to Schloss Rothhoefen at once to complete the transfer. TARNOWBY.

Accompanied by Hazzard and Smith, I went over the castle from top to bottom in quest of the reason for Tarnoway's prompt acceptance of my demand. We had no doubt that he had a good and sufficient reason for wanting the place, and but one thing suggested itself to our imagination; his absolute certainty that treasure was hidden somewhere about the ressemble pile, treasure of considerable magnitude, you may be sure, or he would not have revealed such alacrity in accepting my terms. Sentiment had nothing to do with this surprising move on his part. That was all bosh. He had an ulterior motive, and it was for me to get the better of him at his own game if I could. While I was eager to get rid of the castle at any price, I did not relish the thought of being laughed at for a fool by Maris Tarnoway after he had laid his greedy hands upon treasure that had been mine without my knowledge.

He was no fool. The castle meant nothing to him as a home or as an investment. No doubt he would blow it to pieces in order to unearth the thing he knew its walls secreted.

We spent two unprofitable days in going over the place, and in the end came down tired, defeated and without the slightest evidence in our possession that so much as a half crown lay hid deo there as treasure trove. I gave in and announced that if Tarnoway could find anything worth having he was entitled to it so far as I was concerned and I wouldn't begrudge him a farthing's worth.

He telegraphed that he would arrive on the morning of the third day, accompanied by his lawyer, a notary and an architect. My four guests departed in haste by the late night train after extracting a promise from me to join them in Vienna when I was no longer the master of Schloss Rothhoefen rather relished the thought of a brief vacation.

Then, like the spider, I crept back into my web and waited for the foolish fly, knowing all the time that he would have the better of me in the long run.

I confess to a feeling of sadness in parting with the place, after all, elephantine though it was in every sense of the word. Within its gray and ancient walls that beautiful thing called love had come to me to live with me forever. It had come unbidden, against my will, against my better judgment and in spite of my prejudices, but still it was a thing to cherish and to hold in its virgin youth all through the long years to come. It would always be young and sweet and rose colored, this unrequited love of mine. Walking through the empty, dismantled rooms that had once been here, I grew sick with longing and in something like fear fled downward, absurd tears blinding my eyes. Verily, I was a fool—a monstrous, silly fool!

Tarnoway was as bland and smiling as a May morning as he came jauntily down the great hall to where I awaited him.

"I am here incognito, my dear Smart," he said, extending his gloved hand, which I took perforce. "Sub rosa, you might say," he went on, with a wry smile. "A stupid, onebivalric empire has designs upon me, perfunctorily perhaps, but it's just as well not to stir up the monkeys, as you Americans would put it."

"Our late friend, the baron, was not totally without friends, I take it," said I dryly.

He made a grimace. "Nor enemies," he declared. "Brave men usually have more enemies than friends, and he was a brave man, a truly brave man. Because he was a brave man I have no feeling of regret over the outcome of our—er—meeting. It is no honor to kill a coward, Mr. Smart."

He introduced his three companions. I was surprised to see that the lawyer was not the fawning Schymansky and later on inquired for him. Tarnoway laughed. "Poor old Schymansky! He is in prison."

"Aha! I am not surprised," said I.

"He was my second, poor chap. It did not occur to him to run away after the—er—duel. They had to make an example of some one. His trial comes up next week. I am afraid he may be dealt with rather harshly. I miss him dreadfully. But let us come to the matter in hand, Mr. Smart. I daresay your time is valuable. You have no objection to my going over the place with Mr. Saks, I am sure. He is the architect who is to rebuild the castle for me. My attorney and Mr. Pooly, the notary, will, with your assistance, draw up the proper contracts preliminary to the formal transfer, and I will sign them with you upon my return."

"Would it not be better to discuss the question of payments before we go any further, Count Tarnoway?"

"You will be paid in cash, Mr. Smart, the instant the deed is transferred," he said coldly.

I followed him to the top of the stairs which descended to the basement of the castle. It was rather significant that he elected to explore the lower regions first of all.

"I shall accompany you," said I defiantly.

A faint scowl came into his face. He eyed me fixedly for a moment, then shrugged his shoulders and said that his only desire was to avoid putting me to any unnecessary trouble. If I cared to come he would be more than grateful.

"It isn't necessary to visit the cellars, Saks," he said to the architect. "Ample time for that sort of rummaging. I particularly want your opinion on the condition of the intersecting walls on this floor and above. My scheme of improvement, Mr. Smart, contemplates the enlargement of these halls by throwing them into one."

"A very simple process," said I, "if the whole structure doesn't topple down upon your heads while you're about it."

"I shall contrive to save my scalp, Mr. Smart, no matter what happens. It is very precious to me."

CHAPTER XXV.

I Burn a Few Bridges.

WE went over the castle rather hurriedly, I thought, but he explained that Saks merely wanted a general idea of the structure; he would return another day to make a careful inspection.

"I dare say you are surprised that I should be willing to pay double your original price for Schloss Rothhoefen," he ventured, pausing in the corridor to light a cigarette. We were on our way to the top of the east wing.

"Oh, no," I said coldly. "I am aware that treasure is buried here. As a matter of fact, I've tried to unearth it myself, but without success. I wish you better luck."

"Thanks," said he ineonically, after the first swift glance of inquiry. "It is doubtless a fairy tale, handed down by tradition. I take no stock in it. My principal object in acquiring Rothhoefen is to satisfy a certain whim which besets me. I have it on excellent authority that my ex-father-in-law—the man Titus, you know—talks of buying the property and performing the stupendous, characteristic American feat of removing it stone and timber, just as it is, to his estate north of New York city. No one but a vulgar, purse proud American would think of doing such a thing."

The nerve staggered me. Could there be anything in what he said? If it was true that Jasper Titus contemplated such a quixotic move there could be but one compelling force behind the whim—sentiment. But not sentiment on the part of Jasper Titus.

"I cannot believe that he considers doing such a thing," I said, rather blankly. "You see, if any one should know, I am that one. He has not approached me, of that you may be sure."

He did not appear to be interested.

"My information is not authoritative, Mr. Smart," said he. "It came to me through my representatives who conferred with his lawyers a fortnight ago in regard to certain difficulties that had existed between us. From what they were able to gather, the idea has taken root in the old man's head. Now, I want to buy this place for no other reason than to tell him that he hasn't enough money in his possession to purchase it from me. D'you see? Vanity but it pleases you may call ... me to coddle it."

» as I do.'

Very thoughtfully I strode along beside him. Would I be serving the countess ill or well by selling the place to Tarnoway? It was her whim, of course, and it was a foolish one.

"Suppose that he offered you twice what you are to pay me for the place," said I, struck by a sudden thought.

He laughed easily. "You will not, it seems, acquit me of cupidity, Mr. Smart. I should not sell to him under any consideration. That is final. Take it or leave it."

By this time we were in the rooms once occupied by the countess. He glanced about the apartment carelessly. "Deserted, I observe," he remarked with a queer smile.

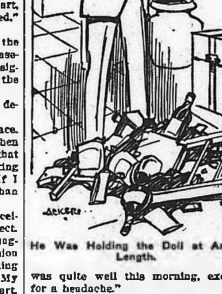
My heart almost stood still. "Eh! What do you mean?"

"If I am not mistaken, these are the rooms once occupied, by your valet's wife. Am I right?"

I steadied myself. "She has gone away," I said. "Couldn't stand the climate."

"I see," said he, but he was still smiling. "How does your valet stand it?"

"Nicely," said I, with a conscious blush.



"I mean the separation, of course."

"Certainly! He is used to it."

"Isn't it rather odd that he should still think she is here in the castle?"

"Does he?" I murmured.

"I inquired for her when I encountered him downstairs. He said she was quite well this morning, except for a headache."

He Was Holding the Doll at Arm's Length.

"She is subject to headaches, I believe," said I, with the utmost nonchalance. He lifted his right eyebrow slightly, but said no more on the subject.

A pile of rubbish lay heaped in one corner of the room, swept up and left there by the big Schmicks to await the spring housecleaning season, I presume. Tarnoway at first eyed the heap curiously, then rather intently. Suddenly he strode across the room and gingerly rooted among the odds and ends with the toe of his highly polished boot.

To my horror a dilapidated doll detached itself and rolled out upon the floor, a well remembered treasure of Rosemary's and so unique in appearance that I doubt if there was another in the world like it. Indeed, I have a distinct recollection of being told that the child's father had painted to the extraordinary features and had himself decorated the original flaxen locks with singular stripes of red and white and blue, a sardonic tribute to the home land of her mother.

I turned away as he stooped and picked up the soiled, discarded effigy. When next I looked at him out of the corner of my eye he was holding the doll at arm's length and staring at it with a fixed gaze. I knew that he recognized it. There could be no doubt in his mind as to the identity of that telltale object. My heart was thumping fiercely.

An instant later he rejoined me, but not a word did he utter concerning the strange discovery he had made. His face was set and pallid, and his eyes were misty. Involuntarily I looked to see if he had the doll in his hand and in that glance observed the bulging surface of his coat pocket.

In silence we stood there awaiting the reappearance of Saks, who had gone into one of the adjoining rooms. I confess that my hand trembled as I lighted a fresh cigarette. He was standing moodily at the door, his hands clasped behind his back. Something smacking of real intelligence ordered me to hold my tongue. I smoked placidly. Pat waited for the outburst. It did not come. It never came. He kept his thoughts, his emotions, to himself, and for that single display of restraint on his part I shall always remember him as a true descendant of the nobility.

We traipsed down the long flights of stairs side by side, followed by the superfluous Mr. Saks, who did all of the talking. He was, I think, discoursing on the extraordinary ability of ancient

OWEN SOUND

Mr Chas Johnston, a well-known and popular resident of Kemble, was taken suddenly with a coughing spell on Sunday evening and died within 30 minutes. The deceased had always enjoyed the best of health and his sudden demise came as a shock to his numerous friends. He was in his 66th year and had followed farming the most of his life. He was born in the Township of Glenford, was the eldest son of the late Edward Johnston, one of the pioneers of Keppel. The deceased took up his residence in Keppel when he was 14 years of age and resided for 47 years on the farm where he died. His wife was Miss Spears of Holland Centre, and the widow, together with two sons and four daughters, is left to mourn his loss. Mr Johnston was a member of the Presbyterian Church which he attended regularly. The sons and daughters are; Thomas on the homestead; Charles, storekeeper at Kemble; Miss Kate, Owen Sound; Mary, at home; Mrs. John McGregor and Miss Margaret, of Keppel. ——— Of

A letter from Mr. W. C. A. Moffatt, of the Calgary News-Telegram, who is in Edmonton at present, states that Hon. A. G. McKay, who has been dangerously ill, was able to leave the hospital on March 10th, but is yet very weak and it is unlikely that he will be able to attend the present session of the Alberta Legislature. At a recent meeting of the House, the Opposition members extended sympathy to him on the floor of the House, remarking that A. G. was a strong Liberal and a husky fighter, but he never hit below the belt.

By an agreement arrived at between the solicitor for the prosecutors in the McGregor insurance case and the County Crown Attorney, the defendant Mr. R. A. McGregor, has been allowed to make restitution and there will therefore be no further proceedings taken unless some unfortunate developments should arise to warrent the original charge being pressed.

Friday afternoon a meeting of the several newspapermen of this section of Grey and Bruce was held in the board of trade rooms. The meeting was called at the request of the Canadian Press Association to discuss local condition generally, especially the question of increasing the subscription of the newspapers from one dollar to one dollar and a half. The discussion was general and it was shown conclusively that while in the past ten years the price of labor and living had increased a hundred per cent. The subscription price of newspapers has been stationary. At its last meeting the Canadian Press Association discussed the question and urged concerted action all along the line. The result has been that districts in eastern and western Ontario have adopted the advanced rate. Some sections commencing in February last and the majority fixing the date for July 1st. next. The association has the advantage in dealing with the question this year in that the president Mr. W. E. Smallfield of Renfrew, Ont. is the publisher of The Mercury, a weekly newspaper, and is in touch with that section of the Association and in sympathy with the increased rate. His presence at the meeting on Friday had much to do with a clear understanding of attention and the necessity for the advance in price. The meeting unanimously carried a resolution favoring the advanced rate to go into effect on July 1st, and another meeting will be called at some time when travel will be more agreeable than it was on Friday, to deal with the matter finally. The report the daily papers are about to advance their subscription rate may be acceptable, as it is known that for some time the figure realized is not sufficient to cover the cost of the white paper and the advertising department has been compelled to make up the deficiency. A resolution thanking Mr Smallfield for his attendance and the interest shown, was unanimously carried before the meeting closed. The president left on Saturday morning and will attend two other district conferences before returning east.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Flaxseed as Food

Flaxseed has been known throughout historic time to possess wonderful and medicinal properties. The Romans fed it to slaves to keep them in condition and health. The civilized palate has generally rebelled at its linseed odor and taste. It has remained for a physician to discover a method of driving oxygen out of the linseed oil by electricity, changing the oil into a resin, odorless and tasteless as starch, yet leaving food and medicinal properties unchanged. This is now used in Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal, claimed to be the most nourishing food sold and a positive relief to dyspeptic and constipated. Most grocers sell it.

Owen Sound Presbytery.

The regular meeting of the Owen Sound Presbytery was held on March 7th with a fair attendance considering the state of weather and roads.

The Congregation of Mar from which Mr Robertson has been called to Knox, Sydenham, and Woodford are to be cited to meet the Commission on Calls, March 13th to give reasons, if they so desire, why Mr. Robertson should not be transferred. It is still hoped that Mr Robertson may see his way to accept the Call, or leave the question in the hands of the Presbytery. The resignation of Mr Sinclair of Keady was laid on the table till June meeting, and Mr Sinclair's capacity and popularity with his brethren were recognized by his election as moderator for the current year. Mr Phalen's resignation of the charge of Markdale and Markeley was also laid over till the June meeting. The Presbytery learned with deep regret that Mr Phalen's resignation was necessitated by health failure with it hopes may be soon relieved. A memorial from St. Pauls Owen Sound, urging reinstatement of the congregation as an Ordained mission was, after consideration, referred to the H. M. Committee for consideration and report. Messrs Barbor of Beaford, Johnston of Shallow Lake, and Jamieson of Thornbury were appointed ministerial commission to the General Assembly. Elders to be selected from the sessions of Markdale, Kilsyth, and St. Paul's Sydenham, whose names with P O. address should be reported without delay to the clerk of presbytery will also be commissioners.

Committees to have oversight of various departments were appointed with conveners, as follows:—Home Missions, Rev. Thompson of Wiarton Foreign Missions. Rev. Barbour, Meaford; Sabbath School and Y. P. Societies, Rev. Matheson, Allenford; Students for Ministry, Rev. Pilkey, Owen Sound; The Budget, Rev. Jamieson, Thornbury.

A most interesting letter from Capt (Rev. Dr.) Tharlow Fraser was read and the Clerk instructed to express to Capt. Fraser the Presbytery's appreciation of his courtesy and of the valuable information given as to the work of the army chaplains and the assurance of its continued remembrance of him and intercession on his behalf.

An Overature to the General Assembly, to meet in Winnipeg next June, was adopted, recommending that the Basis of Union be approved as a basis on which local union of congregations may be effected where desired and found practicable, the united congregation affiliating for oversight, administration and general work of the Church with the denomination preferred by a majority of its members an adaptation of the local option principle which pending Union of the Churches, may do much to minimize the evils of denominational division.

The next meeting of Presbytery will be held in Thornbury on the 27th of June, at the same time and place as the annual meeting of the Presbyterian Women's Mission Society.

Germany's Hatred Many Years Ago

Mail and Empire

There are quite a few people who since August, 1914, have had good reason to remark, "I told you so." They predicted the war, and some of them called every subsequent turn in the game. Lord Roberts, for instance. Maxsee Blatchford, and others did not hesitate to warn their countrymen that Germany meant to make war at a favorable moment; but by the politicians and the great masses of the people who take their opinions only after they have been filtered through the speeches of their favorite politicians they were ignored, contradicted or laughed at. A prophet who had no illusions about German feeling toward the British Empire was Henry W. Wolff, who wrote an article in the Monthly Review, April 1901, on "German Anglophobia." It is true that Mr. Wolff was not so successful a prophet as he was a correct observer of facts. He warned his readers that Germany hated England, but he seemed to think that the feeling would pass away.

British Were Astonished.

Some of his remarks, which were probably disregarded when they were written, have a new significance when read in the light of the events of the past nineteen months. The German display of hostility toward Great Britain which was brought to a climax by the Transvaal war astonished those who were the objects of it. Mr. Wolff says: "We are absolutely at a loss to suggest any cause that we can be supposed to have given for that strong outburst of adverse feeling. We, on our side, have always studied to play the part of good neighbors by our half-kinsmen on the Continent. Willingly setting an example of the 'open door' we have freely admitted them to the coasts, our markets and our colonies. Keen competitors as we know them to be, we have allowed them to carry on their competition against ourselves right in our midst. To those who have come to settle amongst us we have gladly held out the right hand of fellowship. We have rejoiced at their union into a strong and prosperous empire. One of our Ministers has gone so far as publicly to offer them an alliance—which they themselves previously desired—only to find that the offer was contemptuously rejected."

Unworthy Leaders

It is well for us to be reminded of these things, to recall the days when servile or short-sighted British politicians and publicists were the anxious friends of Germany, fearful of giving her offence, permitting her to trade as though Germans had been British subjects, blindly cooperating with her while all the time she was storing up munitions with which she purposed to blow to atoms these friends whom she despised. Nobody dared rebuke Germany. British rebukes were for most part reserved for men like Lord Roberts, and French rebukes for men like Delcasse. Mr Wolff says that the German hostility to Great Britain was created by Bismarck in order to make his own task easier. Before Bismark's day Great Britain was popular in Germany. She admired the greatness and freedom of the British people, she never grudged them a foot of colonial territory, probably because she did not realize the importance colonies

Hatred Aroused

When Germany began to realize the necessity of finding colonies for herself, that is to say after she had become a united and powerful empire and a great manufacturing nation, she looked about, only to find that the most desirable colonies had been already appropriated. Though these colonies had not been seized as the result of the war, German historians did not hesitate to represent every foot of land outside of the British Isles where the Union Jack floated, as a prize won by brutality or criminal cunning from worthier people. The German people were taught their hatred of England. They did not see England oppressing and thwarting them. They saw phenomena capable of a different explanation, but their philosophers, their historians, their authors and their editors explained to them that everything they appeared to lack was due to the fact that perfidious Albion had been first in the field,

A Manufactured Passion.

Bismarck's reason for inspiring his people with hatred of Great Britain was not, perhaps, because he hated the British, though his feud with the Empress Frederick is historic, but because he realized that if Germany adopted British institutions he would never be the great man he aspired to be. He could not be a dictator. The common people would rule. He argued that if he could inspire the German masses with the notion that the British were contemptible, they would not wish to imitate them. The universities, the churches, and the schools, as well as all the rest of official Germany, entered into the conspiracy with Bismarck, and finally led the German people to that stage where the "Hymn of Hate" became a national anthem. It may be, as Mr. Wolff says, that this hatred will not be permanent. The German people, when they see their nation in ruins, may turn their hate apparatus upon someone else. They may be so busy hating the Kaiser and the German military caste that they will neglect to hate the British.

Hockey

Wiarton Hockey Team Champions Again in Northern League.

The hockey season is over King Sol cannot tolerate this form of amusement any further, the boys must have a chance to play marbles and later on there will have to be a ball game by way of diversion. Hockey is our national sport in winter, it is a most strenuous game but for the spectacular, and all that is exciting it has all other games left a whole mile. Long live hockey.

This season has ended with a very great amount of credit to the Wiarton hockey team. At first it was thought practically impossible to re-organize. Simmie was at the front, Miers and Gildner were not in town, but the boys organized all the same, and they closed the season with a team playing just as good hockey as was ever seen here. There was a wonderful development and without any paid trainer at that Nimmo developed great skill and strength at goal, McDonald and Brown are workers and with another season, and practice in shooting will be two of the best men on the team. Dad and Allan Ashley never played better hockey than they did in the games with Hamilton, they are as good players as can be found in amateur hockey. Barrett is right on his job, not afraid of his hide and was of great strength to the team, and so too were Mathieson and Porter both good on defence. The crowds at the rink were not as large as in former years, due no doubt to the all absorbing attention given to patriotic work, but the games were well patronized all things considered. In the O. H. A. Wiarton fell down at Port Colborne. It was a long trip travelling all day, and then the boys were of the opinion that they got a raw deal from the referee that night, but in the Northern they have come out on top playing the finals with Hamilton and winning the round by a score of 18 to 2. It was a good trouncing to give Hamilton here a score 12 to 1 but to beat them on their own ice Friday night by 6 to 1 was rubbing it in. However Hamilton deserved it for there were two or three on the team who have not yet learned that 'dirty' work in hockey is not sport.

The game here last Wednesday night was the most exciting of the season and it was the best hockey The ice was hard and favored the fast skaters here. Hamilton scoured a goal within one half minute after the game started and it then looked like they might put up a strong argument for the honors, but that was the only look in Hamilton got. They have a goal keeper as big as a Siberian soldier, but Wiarton found the net at different angles and landed 6 the first period and 6 again the second. There was some splendid work done by individual players, but in the game the work of the whole team has to be considered and it was the work of the whole team that won out. In the return match Friday night defeating Hamilton on their own ice by a tune 6 to 1 the boys simply made a whirlwind grand stand finish. The work of the team this winter was good and the management deserves credit.

What Hamilton Thought.

The Saturday Herald said—Wiarton seniors are Northern league champions and the proud possessors of the London Free Press trophy. They won it for the third time by defeating Hamilton Rowing club in the final round by a margin of 16 goals. In Wiarton on Wednesday night they took an 11 goal lead and last night at the local Arena they increased this gap by five. The defeat was the second suffered by the Scullers on the home ice this season. The score was 6 to 1.

Harry Reid the conscientious little center player, was the only Sculler to show true form. He played a fine game. The others acted as if they realized they were up against a stiff proposition in attempting to overcome such a lead as Wiarton brought with them, and certainly did not put their best foot forward. "Dad" Ashley and Nimmo were the stars for the visitors. The work of the latter in the nets was superb and Ashley lived up to his reputation as one of the best hockey players in Canada. His individual rushes were pretty and effective.

Their opinion before, Fridays Herald paid this compliment—That the Wiarton players are gentlemen on and off the ice, and that in "Dad" Ashley the northern club possesses one of the best hockey players in the game, is the opinion the Scullers brought back from Wiarton. They contend that they would have made a vastly different showing if they had been at full strength, but make no attempt to be little Wiarton's well-earned victory. "Playing against a club like Wiarton is a treat" said President Russell E. Smith.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Fenwick, 8th con., Elderslie, on Wednesday March 15th at 6 p.m. when their eldest daughter, Miss Ethel May, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert James Wallace of Owen Sound in the presence of immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Hills, pastor of Geneva Church. The bride's dress was shadow lace over mull trimmed with mauve. The bride's travelling suit was navy blue with hat to match. Those present from a distance were: Mrs. W. H. Fenwick and daughter Edna of Toronto; Mrs. McLennan, Toronto; Mr. Wm. Wallace of Owen Sound and Miss Hattie Wallace of Flesherton. After a few days visit among friends the newly wedded couple will take up their residence in Owen Sound.

Kincardine

Nearly every farmer for miles around came to town last Wednesday with his hogs for shipment, and the scene around both weigh scales was a busy one. The price paid was $10.30 per cwt. and over 500 hogs changed hands. In all about $12,000 in cash was paid out to the farmers. This is said to be the highest price ever paid here. We heard of one farmer whose ticket called for $2200 —this amount being for twelve hogs.

The price paid at Kincardine was 40c higher than at Port Elgin and according to the following item from the Durham Chronicle Kincardine buyers paid 30c more than that town:—"Live hogs are $10 to-day, the highest we ever quoted so far as memory serves. On one occasion they were $9.75 and the $10 mark was expected, but we don't think that amount was ever paid during the past nineteen years."

Walkerton

The 160th Bruce Batt., which was three months old on Tuesday night, has reached a strength of 1015 men, which is away ahead of the record established by any other county battalion in Ontario. The force is still going strong, and has the unique feature of being the only Battalion in the Province having an N. C. O. training school in connection. With a brass band, which is now 26 strong, and a bugle band of 16 drums and as many horns now forming, the force will be lead on by the greatest musical sensation that ever stepped out of Bruce. The round of the 160th, coming will make all hands sit up and stare.

The effort to sell the Walker House here by public auction on Wednesday afternoon proved an unmitigated, dismal failure, not one bid being forthcoming in answer to the auctioneer's loud stentorian cries for an offer on the structure. The fact that the morning dailies announced on the very day of the sale that Ontario would go dry on Sept 1st without a vote being taken, scared probably any prospective purchasers of this licensed hotel completely off the job, so that no man could be found with sufficient faith to even make a bid for the fourth bar in a town where until recently seven bonzeries flourished like a bay tree. As a result Mr Ward the proprietor, will fix the place up and stay with the ship, and will, in all likelihood, be found on the job when the prohibition wave passes over the province and wrecks all the bars in September.

With hogs selling in Walkerton on Tuesday at $10.10 per hundredweight the highest in the history of the town the squeal of a pig these days is something of an aristocratic sound. And the noise even threatens to become more expensive still, for as one lager said, the price will go up to $12.00 before June. The prodigal son, who heided amegswize, would feel that he'd been in high society if he could see what each of his old chums would be worth in these days.

A marked promotion came on Saturday to Harry Chadwick, an old Teeswater boy, who is in charge of the N. C. O. training school here, when he was raised from a captaincy to the rank of major in command of a company. Major Chadwick is one of the best qualified officers in the Battalion, having got certificates in musketry, signalling and many other branches of the military art.

FOE'S HANGARS RAIDED

Seaplanes and Ships Descend on Schleswig-Holstein.

Planes Convoyed by Cruisers and Destroyers Strike an Effective Blow at German Sheds Near Sylt, and Brisk Battle Occurs—British Lose Destroyer and Germans Lose Two Armed Trawlers in Fight.

LONDON, March 27.—Great Britain gave her first effective answer Saturday morning to German air raids. A squadron of five seaplanes, convoyed by light cruisers and destroyers, crossed the North Sea and went straight to the home of the German planes which have frequently visited the English coast of late. They attacked the German airship sheds in Schleswig, east of the Island of Sylt. They were met, however, by an effective anti-aircraft defence, while their convoys were engaged by German patrol boats. A battle royal, both in the air and at sea, outside the harbor of Sylt, ensued. Only two of the British planes returned, the three others, including a battleplane, were brought down, according to the official statements. Stormy weather prevailed, and in the course of an exciting naval engagement, the British destroyer Medusa was collided with the destroyer Laverock. The Medusa is believed to have been lost, but her crew are safe. The Germans, on their part, lost two armed trawlers, the Braunschweig and the Otto Rudolph.

During the engagement four German torpedo boats were cut off by a number of British destroyers, but eventually succeeded in making their escape, says a despatch to the Central News from Copenhagen.

The Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail said in a later telegram last night:

Several miles off the Island of Fanoe there was fighting Saturday between a squadron of twenty ships and a German squadron five cruisers and twenty destroyers and two Zeppelins. A number of German aeroplanes also took part in the engagement.

Two German vessels were disabled, the remainder retired behind the Island of Roem, on the west coast of Schleswig. During the fighting several British seaplanes suddenly rose from the warships and raided Toendern, where they dropped bombs on the Zeppelin sheds, which found their mark. Two aeroplanes, however, were shot down.

The Ambaus Tidente states that 25 miles from Esbjorg fishermen sighted the opposing squadrons. The thick, snowy weather prevented the view, but firing was heard for twenty minutes.

The paper's correspondent at Esbjorg says that the German squadron was more than forty vessels strong, including several disguised merchantmen. Preliminary to the main action twelve British destroyers last Friday got beyond four German destroyers and Heligoland.

The Germans were compelled to steam northwards, and were joined later by some twelve armed trawlers and other vessels carrying four seaplanes and two Zeppelins.

It is reported that part of this flotilla has been destroyed, but there is no confirmation of this report yet. Fishermen who arrived at Esbjorg report that the German trawlers Otto Rudolf and Braunschweig were sunk.

Three British cruisers on Sunday inspected Blaavand, north-west of Esbjorg, but immediately afterwards steamed in a south-westerly direction.

The Daily News' Copenhagen correspondent telegraphs: Fishing cutters report Sunday evening that they saw about 50 German and 80 English warships at sea. Severe cannonading was again heard Sunday night from Fance and Esbjorg.

AUSTRIA APOLOGETIC.

Newest Levy of Soldiers Has Aroused Widespread Dissatisfaction.

VIENNA, March 27.—The following seeming apology was issued by the War Ministry in publishing the mandate extending the military age to fifty-five years:

"The new measure has been adopted owing to the necessity of calling up the newly-formed Landstrum unit into active service. The measure could under no circumstances have been avoided if the war is to be carried on successfully, and this urgent necessity justifies the new sacrifices demanded of the public. The new extension order is being carried out under most precise rules in order to consider the personal interest of those concerned, and to insure the sacrifices being borne in the same degree by all."

The last sentence is of interest under the circumstances, for originally the extension was designed to affect only the peasantry and the working classes, and not the middle class or merchant population. The dissatisfaction was the greatest on account of this undemocratis aspect of the scheme.

School Teacher Killed.

While Miss Patterson was focusing a camera to take a picture of Miss Nicholson holding the rifle the accident happened. Miss Patterson receiving the charge in her breast.

U. S. PERTURBED.

Sinking of Sussex Has Aroused Diplomats at Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—While everything indicates that the Channel steamer Sussex was torpedoed deliberately from bloodlust or an attempt to force the United States into the war, official information upon which President Wilson will decide whether the sinking of the steamship Englishman and the damaging by an explosion of the Channel steamer Sussex were the results of acts in violation of international law is being gathered from every available source by Consular representatives of the United States in England and France.

Despatches already received indicate that several Americans were injured or killed in the Sussex disaster. Four American citizens who were aboard the Englishman, and who were said in despatches Saturday not to be among the rescued, still are unaccounted for.

Only one despatch of importance concerning the explosion which damaged the Sussex was received by the State Department during the day. This contained an affidavit made in London at the American Embassy by two American survivors, Edward S. Hosley and Francis E. Drake, of New York. Both swore that the explosion occurred "without the slightest warning," and they credited the commander of the Sussex as saying that he saw the wake of a torpedo before it struck his vessel.

The position of the United States will be decided upon official reports from its own officers. Should either the Sussex or the Englishman have been torpedoed the United States would consider the act to be a most flagrant violation of the rights of humanity, the principles of international law, and the broad assurances regarding the conduct of submarine warfare which have been given by the German Government. There is no evidence, or even a suggestion, that either of the ships weer armed, so no defence could be offered on that score.

SIX BURNED TO DEATH.

Fire in Halifax Causes Death of Four Italians and Two Russians.

HALIFAX, N.S., March 27.—Four Italians and two Russians were burned to death, and an Italian woman and a Russian were badly injured in a fire early Sunday morning that completely destroyed the building on Pleasant street, formerly owned by the Canadian Bioscope Company, and for the past year rented by an Armenian, A. Dombalagian, as a boarding house. The place went up like a torch. The cause will probably never be known. The dead: Travaglini Secondo, Toudi Quinto, Antonio Bianco, Randina Natale. Two Russians known as "Ivan." The injured: Seely, a Russian, burned about the face and hands; Mrs. C. Resquil, Italian, fractured arm.

So quickly did the fire spread that the sixty inmates, mostly Italians and Russians, had no time to get dressed, but made wild scramble for the doors and windows. In a few minutes the whole place was ablaze and every window and door gave outlet to frantic and screaming men. There were but two women in the building. One was hauled through a window. The other appeared at an upper window and, to the horror of all the spectators, wrapped her tiny baby boy in a blanket and threw him out, the little fellow landing in a snow bank and being none the worse. The mother was not so fortunate. She jumped and broke her arm. She was followed by her husband, who escaped injury, amidst a terrific crackling as the fire ate up the wooden walls, a man was observed to crawl out on the roof. He was stark naked, and screaming with terror. Everybody shouted to him to jump, but he ran up and down the roof, without courage to make the leap. Several men climbed up and took him down with them.

RUSSIANS ADVANCING

They Are Forcing a Big Battle on Von Hindenburg.

Ground Has Been Gained on the Dvinsk Sector and the Gains Consolidated—Hard Fighting is in Progress Near Postavy and Near Lake Sekly Several German Defensive Barriers Have Been Broken.

PETROGRAD, March 27.—In the big battle which they are forcing on von Hindenburg on the front from near Vilna to the Gulf of Riga, the Russians have advanced from Jacobstadt to the fortified Village of Lepuyn, which they are now attacking. They have gained further ground on the Dvinsk sector, capturing another line of German trenches and consolidating most of their gains, and they have broken through several obstacles in the sector north-west of Lake Sekly in the Widay region, where they are now engaged in a violent fight.

Their troops immediately followed up their successful piercing of the German front in the Jacobstadt sector by advancing to the fortified environs of Lepuyn Village, where they were encountered by a body of Germans, which took the offensive and was repulsed by their fire. Intense firing has been going on at other points of this sector, and there has also been fighting on the left wing south of Livenhef.

Westward of Dvinsk the Russians are continuing their advance and have consolidated the ground, which they have gained in some places. Some prisoners have been captured.

Desperate fighting is still proceeding in the region westward of Postavy and Lakes Narocz and Vichnewskoie. In the sector north-west of Lake Sekly in the Widay region, the Russians have broken through several defensive barriers erected by the Germans. Here they were fired on with explosive bullets by the Germans. The Germans attempted to repair their entrenchments which had been damaged by the Russians under cover of a heavy snowstorm, but they were stopped by the fire of the Russian artillery.

The Riga front was the scene of exchanges of rifle and artillery fire. The Germans shelled Shlok and the Iskull bridgehead. Heavy exchanges of gun and rifle fire is reported from the rest of the front from the lake region to the Rokitno marshes. The Germans who attempted to open an attack westward of Doraino were repulsed by rifle fire and the hurling of grenades.

The Germans attacked Russian positions at the confluence of the Stripa and the Dniester and were repulsed.

INFANTRY RESTING.

Operations Around Verdun Confined to Artillery Duels.

PARIS, March 27.—The intensely violent German bombardment of the French lines on the west bank of the Meuse, particularly in the vicinity of the village and wood of Malancourt, continued yesterday, but no infantry attack has yet been made, although the bombardment of this sector has been kept up since Saturday without cessation.

Esnes and Hill 304 were included in zone of specially heavy fire Saturday night. So sustained has been the cannonade directed against the French positions in this sector that it is assured another infantry attack is contemplated.

The French guns have been very active for the past 24 hours along the whole Verdun front, notably to the east of the Meuse, where the German fire recently has been only intermittent.

Two attacks were made by the Germans Saturday night against the French trenches at Croix des Carmes, in the Bois le Fetre. Both were repulsed and the Germans driven back, leaving some dead on the field.

A German aeroplane was brought down yesterday morning in the Dounaumont region by French pilots.

Violent artillery actions took place on both the Argonne and Verdun fronts Saturday, but there were no infantry movements by either the French or German armies. A surprise attack by the French Friday night in the Argonne district was successful. The German official statement announces that artillery set fire to the city of Verdun.

LONDON, March 27.—A mystery has been disclosed by a little girl, who on peering down into an old, dry thirty-five-foot well on the Eastbourne golf links, saw a soldier imprisoned there. He must have lived many days on the water trickling down the side of his cell.

Lions Head Methodist Church

As the Centerville and Lions Head church reception services were held on March 29th at which eleven persons were received into fellowship. The Pastor spoke on the character, privileges, responsibility, of church membership from 1 Cor. 12 and 2 Cor. 6, 17 and 18. There were good congregations present at each service.

The pastor made fiting references to the recent loss by fire to some of the residents of the village, and in token of their sympathy the congregation rose to their feet.

The Union Prayer meetings held in the various homes since Mr. Francess's departure have been a great blessing to many. They are to be continued.

"Very often in recruiting meetings I have heard such arguments as these—If you do not enlist the British Empire will go down and the Huns will rule the world. no such thing, the British Empire will not go down, but you will miss the greatest opportunity of your life in not assisting to defend it". The speaker was the Rev. H.S. Mullowney, Owen Sound, Chaplain of the Grey County battalion, in the Baptist Church Sunday evening. "It was the occasion of the anniversary of the church and the speaker stood before the congregation in khaki, and in the congregation were upwards of one hundred soldiers, there was a desire on the part of the soldiers to hear the minister who was wearing the Kings uniform just like themselves. He took his text from the conversation between Mordecai and Queen Esther, where the latter said "if I perish, I perish" and stated that we may fail in our duty through guilty silence. Expediency is mans wisdom, doing right is God's trust in God and do right act along the path of duty. Expediency is another name for Cowardice. Queen Esther knew that if the Jews were killed she would die too. Then too, there is the silent indolence. The people are becoming so indolent that they will not read the Bible, they will go to shows but are too indolent to go to a lecture where they will have to think. At the close of the sermon he related how the call had come to him to enlist for his king and country, and made a strong appeal to all the young men present to do the same thing.

The local saw mills are stocking in a small way and while there will not be the long season's cut of former years yet there will be enough to give all the spare men employment. If all the mills were to operate this year at full capacity it would be very difficult if not impossible to obtain labor.

Hogs sold at $10.10 Monday the highest price for years. If fifteen years ago the average farmer had been told that live hogs would sell at $10 per cwt he would have thought he could then soon become a millionaire, but there are quite a few flies in the ointment.

Of the 250,000 Canadians who have donned the khaki, 118,000 are from Ontario, 55,000 from Manitoba and Saskatchewan combined, 30,000 from Quebec and 25,000 each from British Columbia, Alberta and the Maritime provinces. From this it will be seen that Quebec is the slowest to take on the recruiting spirit, and Ontario has contributed over 40 per cent of the whole force so far.

am not absolutely certain. I am confident Tarroway did not hear a word the fellow said.

In my study we found Poopendyke and the two strangers.

"Have you made out the papers?" demanded the count harshly. An ugly gleam had come to his eyes, but he did not direct it toward me. Indeed, he seemed to avoid looking at me at all.

"Yes, Count Tarnoway," said the lawyer. "They are ready for the signatures."

"Perhaps Mr. Smart may have reconsidered his offer to sell," said Tarnoway. "Let him see the contracts."

"I have not reconsidered," I said quietly.

"You may sign here, Mr. Smart," said the notary as he gave me the document, a simple contract, I found.

"Jasper Titus will offer more than I can afford to pay," said the count. "Please do not feel that I am taking an unfair advantage of you. I am absolutely certain that he wants to buy this place for—his granddaughter, a descendant of barons."

The significance of this remark was obvious, and it was the nearest he ever came to uttering the conviction that had been formed in that illuminating five minutes upstairs. If he suspected—and I think he did—he preferred not to ask the questions that must have been seeming his curious brain. It was a truly wonderful demonstration of self restraint. I would have given much to be able to read his innermost thoughts, to watch the perplexed movements of his mind.

"Schloss Rothhoefen is yours, Count Tarnoway," said I. "It is for you to say whether his whim shall be gratified."

His lips twitched. I saw his hand touch the bulging coat pocket with a swift, unseeing movement.

"Will you be good enough to sign, Mr. Smart?" he said coldly. He glanced at his watch. "My time is valuable. When can you give possession?"

"The day the deed is transferred."

"That will be in less than three days. I have satisfied myself that the title is clear. There need be no delay."

We signed the contract after I had requested Poopendyke to read it aloud to me. It called for the payment of 50,000 kronen, or a little over £2,000, at the time of signing. His lawyer handed me a package of crisp banknotes and asked me to count them. I did so deliberately, the purchaser looking on with a sardonic smile.

"Correct," said I, laying the package on the table. He bowed very deeply.

"Are you satisfied, Mr. Smart, that there are no counterfeits among them?" he inquired, with polite irony; then to his lawyer: "Take the gentleman's receipt for the amount in the presence of witnesses. This is a business transaction, not a game of chance." It was the insult perfect.

As he prepared to take his departure he assumed an insinuating air of apology and remarked to me:

"I owe you an apology, Mr. Smart. There was a time when I did you an injustice. I suspected you of keeping your mistress here. Pray forgive my error."

Five days later I was snugly ensconced in the ducal suit at the Bristol, overlooking the Kartnerringstrasse, bereft of my baronial possessions, but not at all sorry. My romance had been short lived. It is one thing to write novels about medieval castles and quite another thing to try to write a novel in one of them. I trust I may never again be guilty of such arrant stupidity as to think that an American born citizen can become a feudal baron by virtue of his dollars and cents any more than an American born girl can hope to be a real, dyed in the wool countess or duchess because some one needs the money more than she does. It would be quite as impossible, contrariwise, to transform a noble duke into a plain American citizen, so there you are, even up.

My plans were made. After a fortnight in Vienna I expected to go west to London for the autumn and then back to New York. Strange to relate, I was homesick. Never before had my thoughts turned so restlessly, so wistfully to the haunts of my boyhood days. I began to long for the lights of Broadway (which I had scornfully despised in other days) and the gay peacockery of Fifth avenue at 4 in the afternoon. It seemed to me that nowhere in all the world was life so joyous and blithe and worth while as in "old New York;" nowhere were the theaters so attractive, nowhere such restaurants. Even, in retrospect, the subway looked alluring, and as for the Fifth avenue stages, they were too beautiful for words. Ah, what a builder of unreal things a spell of homesickness may become if one gives it half a chance!

As for Schloss Rothhoefen, I had it on excellent authority no less a person than Conrad Schenck himself that I barely had I shaken the dust of the place from myself before the new master put into execution a most extraordinary and incomprehensible plan of reconstruction. For the first place, he gave all the servants two weeks' notice and then began to raze the castle from the bottom upward instead of the other way round, as a sensible person might have been expected to do. He was knocking out the walls in the cellars and digging up the stone floors with splendid disregard for that ominous thing known as a cataclysm. The grave question in the minds of the servants was whether the usual and somewhat mandatory two weeks' notice wouldn't prove a trifle too long after all. In fact, Hawkes, with an inspiration worthy of an office boy, managed to produce a sick grandmother and get away from the place at the end of one week, although having been paid in full for two.

The day on which I left for Paris still saw Tarnoway at work, with his minions, heroically battering down the walls of the grim old stronghold, and I chuckled to myself. It was quite evident that he hadn't found the bidding place up to that time.

After several days in Paris I took myself off to London. I was expecting letters at Claridge's, where I always take rooms—not because I think it is the best hotel in London, but because I am to some extent a creature of habit.

My mother took me to Claridge's when I was a boy, and I saw a wonderful personage at the door, whom I was pleased to call the king. Ever since then I have been going to Claridge's, and while my first king is dead there is one in his place, who bids fair to live long, albeit no one shouts encouragement to him. He wears the most gorgeous buttons I've ever seen, and I doubt if King Solomon himself could have been more regal, certainly not Nebuchadnezzar. He works from 7 in the morning until 7 at night, and he has an imperial scorn for anything smaller than half a sovereign.

There were many letters waiting there for me, but not one from the Countess Aline. I had encouraged the hope that she might write to me. It was the least she could do in return for all that I had done for her notwithstanding my wretched behavior on the last day of our association. While I had undoubtedly offended in the most flagrant manner, still my act was not unpardonable. There was tribute, not outrage, in my behavior.

Poopendyke didgeted a good deal with the scanty results of my literary labors, rattling the typed pages in a most insinuating way. He oiled his machine with accumulative frequency, but I failed to respond. I was in no mood for writing. He said to me one day:

"I don't see why you keep a secretary, Mr. Smart. I don't begin to earn my salt."

"Salt, Mr. Poopendyke," said I, "is the cheapest thing I know of. Now, if you had said pepper I might pause to reflect. But I am absolutely, inexorably opposed to rating anything on a salt basis. If you"—

"You know what I mean," he said stiffly. "I am of no use to you."

"Ah," said I triumphantly, "but you forget. Who is it that draws the salary checks for yourself and Britton and who keeps the accounts straight? Who, I repeat? Why, you, Mr. Poopendyke. You draw the checks. Isn't that something?"

"If—if I didn't know you so well I wouldn't hesitate to call you a blooming fool, Mr. Smart," said he, but he grinned as he said it.

"But he who hesitates is lost," said I. "This is your chance. Don't let it slip." He looked at me so steadily for a moment that I was in some fear he would not let it slip.

Before I had been in London a week it became perfectly clear to me that I could not stretch my stay out to anything like a period of two months. Indeed, I began to think about booking my passage home inside of two weeks. I was restless, dissatisfied, homesick. On the ninth day I sent Poopendyke to the booking office of the steamship company with instructions to secure passage for the next sailing of the Mauretania, and then lived in a state of positive dread for fear the confounded American tourists might have gobbled up all of the cabins. They are always going home it seems to me, and they are always trying to get on a single unfortunate ship. In all my experience abroad I've never known a time when Americans were not tumbling over each other trying to get back to New York in time to catch a certain train for home, wherever that may be. But Poopendyke managed it somehow. He must have resorted to bribery.

If I have by any chance announced earlier in this narrative that the valley of the Donau is the garden spot of the world I must now ask you to excuse the ebullience of spirit that prompted the declaration. The Warm Springs valley of Virginia is infinitely more attractive to me.

I arrived there early one bright November morning three days after landing in New York. You will be rendered unhappy, I fear, by the announcement that I left Mr. Poopendyke behind. He preferred to visit an aunt at New Rochelle, and I felt that he deserved a vacation.

Before leaving New York I had a rather unpleasant encounter with my publishers. It was in the nature of a luncheon at which I was led to believe that they still expected me to supply them with the manuscript of a novel at a very early date. They seemed considerably put out when I blandly informed them that I had got no farther along than the second chapter.

"We have been counting on this book of yours for January publication," said they.

I tried to explain that the muse had abandoned me in a most heartless fashion.

"But the public demands a story from you," said they. "What have you been doing all summer?"

"Romancing," said I.

I don't know just how it came about, but the suggestion was made that I put into narrative form the lively history of my sojourn on the banks of the Danube, trusting implicitly to the imagination yet leaving nothing to it.

"But it's all such blithering rot," said I.

"So much the better," said they triumphantly—even eagerly.

"I don't suppose that you, as publishers, can appreciate the fact that an author may have a soul above skittles," said I indignantly. "I cannot, I will not, write a line about myself, gentlemen. Not that I consider the subject sacred, but"—

"Walit!" cried the junior member, his face aglow. "We appreciate the delicacy of—er—your feelings, Mr. Smart, but I have an idea, a splendid idea. It solves the whole question. Your secretary is a most competent, capable young man and a genius after a fashion. I propose that he write the story. We'll pay him a lump sum for the work, put your name on the cover, and there you are. All you will have to do is to edit his material. How's that?"

And so it came to pass that I took myself off that evening for Hot Springs, secure in the thought that Poopendyke would attend to my literary estate far more capably than I could do it myself and that my labors later on would be pleasantly devoted to the lazy task of editing, revising and deleting a tale already told.

If you are lucky enough to obtain rooms in the Homestead looking out over the golf course, with the wonderful November colorings in the hills and gaps beyond; over the casino, the tennis courts and the lower levels of the fashionable playground, you may well say to yourself that all the world is bright and sweet and full of hope. From my windows I could see far down the historic valley in the direction of Warm Springs, a lazy blue panorama wrapped in the air of an Indian summer and redolent with the incense of autumn.

Britton reminded me that it was a grand morning for golf, and I was at once reminded that Britton is an excellent chap, whose opinions are always worth considering. So I started for the links, stopping first at the office of the hotel on my way out, ostensibly to complain about the absence of window screens, but in reality to glance over the register in quest of certain signatures.

A brisk, oldish little man came up beside me and rather testily inquired why there were no matches in his room; also why the hot water was cold so much longer than usual that morning. He was not much of a man to look at, but I could not fail to note the obsequious manner in which the two clerks behind the desk looked at him. You couldn't possibly have discovered anything in their manner to remind you of hotel clerks you may have come to know in your travels. A half dozen boxes of matches were passed out to him in the twinkling of an eye, and I shudder to think what might have happened if there had been a hot water faucet handy, they were so eager to please.

"Mr. Brewster gone out yet?" demanded this important guest, pocketing all of the matches. I could see at once that he was a very rich man. "Did he leave any message for me? He didn't? He was to let me know whether he could play golf with—eh? Playing with Logan, eh? Well, of all the— He knows I will not play with Logan. See if Mr. Scott is in his room. Tell him I'd like to take him on for eighteen holes this morning."

He crossed to the news counter and glanced over the papers while a dusky bellboy shot off in quest of Mr. Scott.

"They all hate to play with the old geezer," said one of the clerks—a young one, you may be sure—lowering his voice and his eyebrows at the same time. "He's the rottenest player in the world."

"Who is he?" I inquired, mildly interested.

"Jasper Titus," was the reply. "The real old Jasper himself."

Before I could recover from my surprise the object of my curiosity approached the desk, his watch in his hand.

"Well, what does he say?" he demanded.

"The—the boy isn't back yet, Mr. Titus," said one of the clerks, involuntarily pounding the call bell in his nervousness.

"Lazy, shiftless niggers, the whole tribe of them," was Mr. Titus' caustic comment.

At that instant the boy, quite out of breath, came thumping down the stairs.

"Mr. Scott's got rheumatis, Mr. Titus. He begs to be excused"—

"Buncombe!" snapped Mr. Titus. "He's afraid to play me. Well, this means no game for me. A beautiful day like this and"—

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Titus," said I, stepping forward. "If you don't mind taking on a stranger I will be happy to go around with you. My name is Smart. I think you must have heard of me through the countess and your"—

"Great Scott! Smart? Are—are you the author James Byron Smart, the—the man who"— He checked himself suddenly, but seized me by the hand and as he wrung it vigorously dragged me out of hearing of the men behind the desk.

"I am John Bellamy Smart," said I, a little miffed.

His shrewd, hard old face underwent a marvelous change. The crustiness left it as if by magic. His countenance radiated joy.

"I owe you a debt of gratitude, Mr. Smart, that can never be lifted. My daughter has told me everything. You must have put up with a fearful lot of nonsense during the weeks she was with you. I know her well. She's spoiled, and she's got a temper, although, upon my soul, she seems different nowadays. There is a change in her, by George!"

"She's had her lesson," said I. "Besides I didn't find she had a bad temper."

"And, say, I want to tell you something else before I forget it. I fully appreciate your views on international marriage. Allie told me everything you had to say about it. You must have rubbed it in. But I think it did her good. She'll never marry another foreigner if I can help it, if she never marries. Well, well, I am glad to see you and to shake your hand. I—I wish I could really tell you how I feel toward you, my boy, but I—I don't seem to have the power to express myself. If I"—

I tried to convince him that the pleasure had been all mine and then inquired for Mrs. Titus and the countess.

"They're both here, but the good Lord only knows where. Mrs. Titus goes driving every morning. Roads are fine if you can stick to them. Aline said something last night about riding over to Hassifern this forenoon with Amberdale and young Skelly. Let's see, it's half past 10. Yes, they've gone by this time. Why didn't you write or telegraph Aline? She'll be as mad as a wet hen when she finds you've come without letting her know."

"I thought I should like to take her by surprise," I mumbled uncomfortably.

"And my son Jasper—why, he will explode when he hears you're here. He's gone over to Covington to see a girl off on the train for Louisville. You've never seen such a boy. He is always going to Covington with some girl to see that she gets the right train home. But why are we wasting time here when we might be doing a few holes before lunch? I'll take you on. Of course, you understand I'm a wretched player, but I've got one virtue: I never talk about my game and I never tell funny stories while my opponent is addressing the ball. I'm an old duffer at the game, but I've got more sense than most duffers."

We sauntered down to the club house, where he insisted on buying me a dozen golf balls and engaging a caddy for me by the week. Up to the moment we stepped up to the first tee he talked incessantly of Aline and Rosemary, but the instant the game was on he settled into the grim reserve that characterizes the man who takes any enterprise seriously be it work or play.

I shall not discuss our game further than to say that he played in atrociously bad form, but with a purpose that let me to some degree into the secret of his success in life. If I do say it myself I am a fairly good player. I don't believe I was ever in better humor than on this gay November morn. I even apologized for Mr. Titus' execrable footies. I amiably suggested that he was a little off his game and that he'd soon strike his gait and give me a good beating after the turn. His smile was polite, but ironic, and it was not long before I realized that he knew his own game too well to be affected by cajolery. He just pegged away, always playing the odd or worse, uncomplaining, unresentful, as even tempered as the May wind, and never by any chance winning a hole from me. He was the rarest "duffer" it has ever been my good fortune to meet.

CHAPTER XXVII.

She Proposes.

As a rule, the poorer the player the louder his execrations. Jasper Titus was one of the worst players I've ever seen, but he was the personification of gentility even under the most provoking circumstances. For instance, at the famous "Crater" it was my good fortune to pitch a ball fairly on the green from the tee. His mashie shot landed his ball about twenty feet up the steep hill which guards the green. It rolled halfway back. Without a word of disgust or so much as a scowl he climbed up and blazed away at it again, not once, but fourteen times by actual count. On the seventeenth stroke he triumphantly laid his ball on the green. Most men would have lifted and conceded the hole to me. He played it out.

CHAPTER XXVI.

A Change Garden Spots.

I AWOKE one morning to find a long and—I was about to say interesting—letter from the countess. It was a very commonplace communication I found on the third or fourth reading. The sum and substance of its contents was the information that she was going to Virginia Hot Springs with the family for a month or two and that Lord Amberdale was to join them there. It appeared that her father, being greatly overworked, was in need of a rest, and as the golf links at Hot Springs are especially designed to make it easy for rich men, his doctor had ordered him to that delightful resort. She hoped the rest would put him on his feet again. There was a page or so of drivel about Amberdale and what he expected to do at the New York horse show, a few lines concerning Rosemary, and a brief, almost curt intimation that a glimpse or two of me would not be altogether displeasing to her if I happened to be coming that way.

It may be regarded as a strange coincidence that I instructed Britton that very evening to see that my golf clubs were cleaned up and put into good shape for a little practice on a course near London, where I had been put up by an English author, and who was forever dingdonging at me to come out and let him "put it all over me." I went out and bought a new brassie to replace the one destroyed by the experimenting Rocksworth youth, and before I got through with it had a new putter, a niblick and a spoon, neither of which I needed, for the excellent reason that I already possessed a half dozen of each.

Keyed up to a high pitch of enthusiasm, I played golf for ten days and found my friend to be a fine sportsman. Like all Englishmen, he took a beating gracefully, but gave me to understand that he had been having a good deal of trouble with rheumatism or neuritis in his right elbow. On the last day we played he succeeded in beating me in two downs, and I've never seen neuritis dispersed so quickly as it was in his case. I remember distinctly that he complained bitterly of the pain in his elbow when he started out and that he was as fit as a fiddle at the eighteenth hole. He even went so far as to implore me to stay over till the next sailing of the Mauretania.

But I took to the high seas. Mr. Poopendyke cabled to the Homestead at Hot Springs for suitable accommodations. I cannot remember when I had been so foreboaded as all that, and I wonder what my secretary thought of me. My habit is to procrastinate.

I almost forgot to mention a trifling bit of news that came to me the day before sailing. Elsie Hazzard wrote in great perturbation and at almost unfeeling length to tell me that Count Tarnoway had unearthed the supposedly mythical Rothhoefen treasure chests and was reputed to have found gold and precious jewels worth at least a million dollars. The accumulated products of a century's thievery! The hoard of all the robber barons! Tarnoway's!

Strange to say, I did not writhe nor snarl with disappointment and rage. I took the news with a sang froid that almost killed poor Poopendyke. He never quite got over it.

Nor was I especially disturbed or irritated by the telegram of condolence I received on board ship from Tarnoway himself. He could not resist the temptation to gloat. I shall not repeat the message, for the simple reason that I do not wish to dignify it by putting it into permanent form.

We were two days out when I succeeded in setting my mind at rest in respect to Aline, Countess Tarnoway. I had not thought of it before, but I remembered all of a sudden that I held decided scruples against marrying a divorced woman. Of course that simplified matters. When one has preconceived notions about such matters they afford excellent material to fall back upon, even though he may have disregarded them after a fashion while unselfishly thinking of some one else. As I say, the recollection of this well defined though somewhat remorseless principle of mine had the effect of putting my mind at rest in regard to the countess. Feeling as strongly as I did about marriage with divorcees, she became an absolutely undesirable person so far as matrimony was concerned. I experienced a rather doubtful feeling when I smiled. It was no easy matter to say to myself that Lord Amberdale was welcome to her, but it was very, very difficult to refrain from adding the unamiable words "damn him."

This rigid, puritanical principle of mine, however, did not declare against the outrightousness of falling in love with a divorcee.

Tired-Out Kidneys

Kidney troubles are so frightful common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed efforts, but by awaking the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the Kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Drainage For Wetness and Drought

How shall we obtain the most satisfactory soil moisture condition throughout the year? The great factor in moisture control is drainage natural or artificial. Few farms are sufficiently drained by natural means nearly all require some artificial drainage.

The problem then is, "where shall we place our drains?" How deep shall we put them?" "What size of tile shall we use?" The position of the drains depends largely on the slope of the field; the depth on the kind of soil; the size of tile on the area drained and the fall or grade given the tile.

If you are uncertain about these points or anticipate any difficulties the Ontario Agricultural College will send you a drainage surveyor who will, if necessary, prepare a map of your farm showing the location of your drains, the size of tile to use and the grades and depths of the drains.

The cost to you for these services will be the travelling expenses of the surveyor, and as several surveys are made on one trip the charge is seldom over three dollars for each survey.

Those who have had their farms surveyed and have installed part or all of their drains may have a new plan prepared free of charge if they will return the old plan after making in all changes made in the original system.

On the same terms as those for surveys the College will send a man to give you a start on the installation of your drains if you have had no previous experience. He will show you how to get grade stakes, grade the ditch bottom, make the junctions of main and lateral, lay the tile and assist you in any way required.

If you contemplate draining during 1916 or are planning for 1917 and need assistance write to the Department of Physics, O. A. College, Guelph, or your District Agricultural Office. State your difficulties and request assistance.

TAKES OFF DANDERUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Government Will Probibit Sale of Liquor

Prohibition will be in force in Ontario before the end of the coming summer and remain in force until after the war. On September 15th, if not earlier, every hotel bar will close. The Ontario Government's temperance proposals were announced by Hon. W. J. Hanna in the Legislature Wednesday afternoon. There will be no referendum. Here is a summary of the law as it will be enacted;—

Prohibition will go into effect about September by direct legislation.

All licenses, with a few exceptions will be extended after May 1st until date fixed.

Referendum will be taken after war and a considerable time after return of soldiers.

New Ontario Temperance Act follows Manitoba Act except for incorporation of improvements taken from Ontario License Act.

Wholesale druggists will be licensed to sell in wholesale quantities for scientific and mechanical purposes, upon production of an affidavit as to uses to which liquor will be devoted.

Retail licenses will be issued permitting sale to individuals upon a doctor's prescription, and to a doctor not more than a pint at a time or a veterinary not more than two gallons at a time.

Ontario License Board will be reconstituted with membership of three and charged with administration of new laws.

Bill will not interfere with importation of liquor for private use or keeping it in the home.

Heavy fines ranging to $1000 and sentences up to eight months are provided for infraction of the law.

The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Root Speaks For Republican Party

Mail and Empire

A few years ago Col. Roosevelt declared that Senator Elihu Root was the greatest living American statesman, and that he would take rank with the greatest statesmen in Europe. The speech Senator Root delivered not long ago as temporary chairman of the New York Republican Convention is corroborating evidence that Col. Roosevelt's eulogy was not misplaced or exaggerated. It was the utterance of a great American, and though it has been criticized by Democratic newspapers, and Democratic leaders, it was received with enthusiastic approval by the Republican party generally. It clearly outlined the issues upon which the next Presidential campaign will be fought, and since these issues deal with the world politics to an extent unknown to this generation of Americans, the approaching campaign will be followed with great interest in every part of the world.

Blunders in Mexico

Senator Root condemned the Democratic tariff policy, which had been only saved from utter collapse by the war. When the war was over and the industries created or stimulated by it disappeared or shrank to their normal proportions, a tremendous problem would be created, and this problem would be intensified by the certainty that Europe would seek to make the United States a dumping ground for its own industries. Passing from a brief discussion of business affairs he condemned the Administration's course with regard to Mexico. He pointed out that when Wilson took office there was a Government in Mexico, the Huerta Government, which whatever it's shortcomings, was the only Mexican Government, the only authority to which Mexicans or Americans could look for protection. President Wilson determined to overthrow this Government, and became a party with Carranza and Villa to make Huerta's lease of life a short one.

Chaos to the South

Events of the past few days have given point to Mr. Root's criticism. We have seen the United States forced to send an invading army into Mexico because the Government which it helped to establish had split into fragments, the Carranza fragment being unable to maintain order against the Villa fragment. We may see, too, both fragments joined again against the United States, and possibly involving that country in war. Should this occur it would do difficult indeed to justify the course Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan took with regard to Mexico from the beginning, the object collapse of the policy alliteratively described as "watchful waiting." To Canadians, however, the most interesting part of Mr. Root's address was that which concerned itself with the great war. He did not seek to hide the direction and strength of his sympathies. He said;

Sympathy with Belgium

"To this people the invasion of Belgium brought a shock of amazement and horror. The people of Belgium were peaceable, law-abiding and industrious, self-governing and free. They had no quarrel with anyone on earth. They were attacked by overwhelming military power; their country was devastated by fire and sword; they were slain by tens of thousands; their independence was destroyed and their liberty was subjected to the rule of an invader for no other cause than that they defended their just rights. There was no question of fact; there was not question of law; there was not a plausible pretence of any other cause. The admitted rights of Belgium stood in the way of a mightier nation's purpose, and Belgium was crushed. When the true nature of these events was realized the people of the united States did not hesitate in their feeling or in their judgment. Deepest sympathy with down-trodden Belgium and stern condemnation of the invader were universal. Wherever there was respect for law it revolted against the wrong done Belgium. Wherever there was true passion for liberty it blazed out for Belgium. Wherever there was humanity it mourned for Belgium.

United States Should Act

Senator Root proceeded to say that the sympathy of the American people was not all that they owed Belgium. The American people were entitled not only to feel, but to speak concerning the wrong done a little country. The law which protected Belgium was the American law. It was written in a solemn and formal convention. When that agreement was violated by Germany the agreement was binding not only morally, but strictly and technically, upon all the countries that had agreed that the law should have been observed. The United States was one of those nations. In the opinion of Senator Root though he did not use the exact words, there is no room for doubt that he considered that the duty of United States was to intervene on behalf of Belgium. When he spoke at New York Elihu Root's voice carried further than the voice of any other man save Col Roosevelt that has been uplifted in the United States since the beginning of the war. His voice was in condemnation of Germany, and in defence of the cause that Great Britain and the Allies have taken in the past twenty months.

The Joy of Good Health Is Now Experienced

Nervousness, Dizzy Spells and Sleeplessness Are Now a Thing of the Past.

This is a cheerful letter from Mrs. Peacock, and it should bring joy to the heart of many a reader of this paper. Dizzy spells and sleeplessness are symptoms of exhausted nerves, and are the bugbear of many women, who do not know just what treatment to use.

MRS. PEACOCK.

You can read Mrs. Peacock's letter and take courage, for she has proven that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a complete cure for these troubles. So pleased was she with the results obtained that she wants other women to know about this food cure.

Mrs. Thomas Peacock, 13 Hiawatha street, St. Thomas, Ont., and whose husband is conductor on the Wabash Railway, states :—"I was quite run down in health, was very nervous, did not sleep well, and had frequent dizzy spells. Believing this to be the result of an exhausted nervous system I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that this medicine did me a world of good. It entirely freed me of the symptoms stated above, built up my health generally, so that to-day I feel that I am quite well again."

In a more recent letter Mrs. Peacock writes:—"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good, and I would be pleased to tell everybody so."

In nearly every issue of this paper you will find letters about Dr. Chase's medicines. If this one does not describe your case watch for others or write to us. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Letter Received From Captain, the Rev. C. K. Masters

Chaplain in No. 1 Canadian Casualty Hospital "Some Where in France"

Yesterday and to-day have been two busy days. We "received" yesterday and "evaculated" to-day. The number received was not large but some bad cases. We receive on two days a week, on the other days the casesgo to other Casualty Clearing Stations here. (Ours is the first Can). I wonder if I could give you any idea of our work here. Our day for receiving is from 8.30 a.m. to 8.30 a.m., most of the worst cases come in during the night, They cannot be removed from the trenches till after dark. Soon after 8.30 they begin to arrive, all sorts of cases, some ill, some wounded, and everybody gets busy. They are passed from the Regimental Aid Post where the Batt Surgeon is at work. to the 1st dressing station established by the Field Ambulance, just behind the lines and from there the ambulances brings them to us. Those first dressings must of necessity be very hurried just designed to bring them safely to us. Arrived here the wounds are all carefully re-examined and re-bandaged, necessary operations performed or sickness treated and all made ready for the next stage. After a good nights rest they pass on to the Base Hospital.

The Chaplains Chance

Here the Chaplains have a chance. We travel around among the wounded giving a package of cigarettes here to steady a man for his operation speaking a word of cheer there, or pointing a dying man to the blessed Saviour, I was able to give that last message to two poor fellows last night. There are all sorts and all ages. There is a Scotch laddie just 13, a flesh wound but very painful, he is trying so hard to play the man. It is his second wound the last one almost in the same place. Near him is a little English officer with lumbago, only 18 and only six weeks out. Beside him a man with a head wound, conscious, but suffering. So they come, some only scratched, some mortally wounded, some with only a touch of influenza, some gasping with pneumonia. They all pass through our hands, and we do the best we can for them. This morning we sent out a Brantford man, driven insane by shell shock; who thinks he is going to be shot as a German spy. He will recover in a few days. So you see what a variety we have, and all are brave men. There is little groaning or complaining among them and some of them are in such bitter pain.

The Work of Nurses

The nurses are just splendid. Their work is hard and constant, and they are uniformly kind and cheerful. I have watched them with the patients and they are so gentle with them that it must be like a touch from heaven after the trenches and they are brave too. I have already seen them in circumstances that would try the nerve of a soldier and they do not flinch. One of the chaps started a letter yesterday heading it "Within sound of the guns of the Huns". Incidentally it is up here that we reap the benefit of those long monotonous hours of rolling bandages that so many of our Canadian women, like the Wiarton Women's Patriotic League, are in. It saves many a life that the neat little rolls of bandages are on hand in such abundance. It would fully repay our people for the weariness of the work if they could see the result at this end, and if the people who are shelling out their quarters to buy cigarettes and tobacco could be in the hospital for a while and see the sick men enjoying their bounty, they could have their reward.

Writing Letters Home

There is one department of work we Chaplains at this hospital are developing. We are writing home for the men not able to do so and telling their people about them, I got a letter yesterday in reply to one of mine I had written to the wife telling her of her husband and after a time was able to tell her that he had taken a turn and would recover. In reply she thanked me, and said "You have no idea of the agony of suspense we wives are enduring waiting for news". It is a privilege to be able to lessen that suspense. In spite of all the suffering, the atmosphere of a hospital like this is not so gloomy, but rather cheerful and happy. Talk to any of the wounded men and you will see that they keenly enjoy the comfort after the trenches, they are philosophical over the pain. It is only their "bit" their small sacrifice to hurry on the great victory. If they can go back at it they are eager to get there. If not, then all they have done and suffered has been worth while for home and country. Under it all is the invincible determination to beat the Germans. Our men with all their lightness of heart (and you see it everywhere manifested, even in a hospital) are in dead earnest about that. It is quite interesting to get their point of view.

Play the Game

With all the grim savagery of this war as "made in Germany" our men treat it as a game to be played. The wounds and bruises, the cold, the sickness and discomforts, are just the accidents of the game and not worth groaning over, and our men, even our boys, are certainly playing the game and for all they are worth, with such spirit I cannot believe that we can lose. It is a privilege to take part in such a game, and to be able to minister to such players over here, the men at home who are shirking (I don't mean the men whose duty keeps them back) and keeping safe, seem very small indeed by comparison. Some of these men are rough but they are men, we in our hospital duty feel that the best we have is none too good for them So I give you this little glimpse of our fire here, writing as freely as I may without giving any information of military value, and perhaps you will pass it on to Mr. Logan for the readers of his paper who may be interested.

Charles K. Masters.

The 160th going strong

In the formation of the Bruce War Auxiliary a special resolution was passed in which the people of Bruce County were pledged to do everything in their power to assist in the organization of the 160th Battalion, and, the forecast was, to have the Battalion completed by the middle of April

The 160th is now about 1100 men and we require 250 more recruits in order to complete the Battalion and provide for a Base Company. The Base Company is a Company of reserves to fill the vacancies caused by rejections of any kind

Enlistments are as follows:

Tobermory 26, Lion's Head 50, Cape Croker 49, Wiarton 140, Hepworth 38, Tara 80, Chesley 74, Walkerton 130, Paisley 39, Port Elgin 57, Southampton 81, Tiverton 60, Teeswater 58, Luckuow 57, Ripley 33, Kincardine 97, Mildmay 14.

You can readily see what parts of the County have been doing their duty. A combined effort, if properly handled would get the number of recruits required, and it would take on an average, of less than ten men from each municipality.

Bruce County to-day stands as the most responsive County in the Province, and we are trying to have it completed in a time that will set the record in Canada applying to the rural counties.

Col. Wier states that the entire Battalion, over 1000 men, will be engaged on recruiting duty for the week commencing on Monday, April 3rd

In order to stimulate recruiting and create enthusiasm in this campaign for recruits, it is desired that the Town Hall bell, Church and School bells ring for 5 minutes commencing at 9 o'clock Monday morning, April 3rd, also having factory whistles blow at the same time for the purpose of announcing to the world that Bruce intends to fulfill her pledge to the Empire—"As we have noticed elsewhere 172 have enlisted in Wiarton."—Ed Echo

LIONS HEAD

Miss Martha Sharp was called home last week on account of the serious illness of her grandmother Mrs. Graham of Barrow Bay.

A number of the young gentlemen are getting busy picking out their Spring bonnets now. It sure must be leap year or they would not be so attentive around the millinery parlors

Take your eggs to Whit Moore and get what they are worth.

Mr Geo Sutter, of Pike Bay, was in town last week on business.

Mr Samuel Hayes intends moving shortly to his dwelling over the blacksmith shop.

Pte. Roderick Smith, of Wiarton, who is at home at the bedside of his father, Mr. Malcolm Smith of Stokes Bay, who is seriously ill, was in town on business last week. We are pleased to report that his father is improving somewhat under the care of Dr. Wigle.

Tomatoes 10c a can at Whit Moores.

Miss Tackaberry will show the latest style in spring millinery on Friday and Saturday April 7th and 8th. All are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. Orr, of Toronto was here last week adjusting the insurance on the post-office for the London Globe Liverpool Insurance Co.

The heat of the fire on the 25th of March changed the weather and since then the snow has taken its sudden departure.

Those who have tried Whit Moores black tea in bulk consider it good, those who have not are probably not getting as good.

It looks as if we had war here in Lions Head, last week when the fire originating in the German locality beat the allies on both sides consisting of Irish on the south side and Scotch, Russian and Irish on the North side.

Mr. Adams of Toronto is here this week, adjusting the claims on the insurance policy of Messrs Tackaberry and Tackaberry, S. Klongon, G. McLean, L. Fries, P. Forbes and R. Tackaberry.

We understand that Mr. Klongon Mr. R E. Tackaberry intends to rebuild in the near future also the Misses Norris for the post-office of Lindsay.

Mr. Murdock McLay accompanied by his son John were in town on business on Monday

Messrs Kenneth and Alexander McDonald were in town on Monday morning to get the stage as Alex. left for Port Arthur.

Mr. Alfred Rouse of McCallums Corner left on Monday for Southern points,

Mr, Saul Klongon opened up his stock in H. Stewart's store formerly vacated by Max Stein.

All persons indebted to R. E. W. Tackaberry are requested to call and settle their accounts before April 8th, he also intends to open up again this week but the place is not decided

Mr. Walter. Elliott of Dyers Bay was here on business on Monday, and then left for southern points.

Recruiting is still booming, last week the boys added six more names Herb and Wesley Bridge, William Slocum, Charles and Crystal McArthur and Lorne Butchart.

Mr. Ramond, of Toronto, was here on business, Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Bert Webster made a business trip to Wiarton on Monday last.

Quite a number from here attended the reception of Mr. and Mrs. George McLay at the home of the brides parents Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Graham last Tuesday. In the afternoon a quiet wedding took place when Lizzie second youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs. K. Graham, of Swan Lake was united in the Holy Bond of matrimony to Mr. George McLay son of Mr. and Mrs. K. C. McLay of Lindsay.

Mr. Ezra Glendenning, of Wiarton has accepted a position as butcher with S. Hayes.

Some of the people in this vicinity were thinking that the correspondent must have been in the fire of the last week and was burnt up. Perhaps he had a close call for he lost all his reasoning capacity at once, what he had on his mind which this close council, tactfully roused "some" of your slumbers sluduh on earth, and get out yourself safely! Another reason for not any news appearing was that our worthy stage driver did not put in an appearance here on Monday night to take it to Wiarton in time for last weeks Echo.

The Town Council

All the members were present Monday evening, some business of importance was transacted.

The Chief Constable made his report there were only two arrests during the month and those arrested were soon discharged.

Mr I. Lennox brought an important matter before the council. The drains on his farm are quite deep enough to drain off the water on his own lot, but all the adjacent lots slope that way and consequently the waters from there must flow through his drains. These ditches are not deep enough for so much water and he thinks it is up to the town to deepen them. He pays over $3 per year for a sewer outlet which is of no use to him, and he would like some work done that would be a benefit. The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

Constable Glover appeared to explain an account he had presented for work done for the Childrens Aid Society, but the council were of the opinion that this work belonged to his regular duties. The question of continuing his services was brought up by the Mayor, who asked the opinion of the Council. Coun. Pope thought the town cannot afford to pay for a second man. The Mayor referred to the fact that we have not had a fire for three months, and he thought this was largely due to the fact that we have a night watchman. The other Councillors inclined to this view and the matter was left over for discussion at the first meeting in May.

There will be a by-law prepared making it compulsory upon all citizens to clean their sidewalks when the spring thaw sets in.

The Mayor brought up the question of the transient traders by-law and this created considerable discussion. If the by-law is interpreted literally it is pretty wide sweeping in its application. There is no intention nor desire upon the part of the Councillor to keep out permanent residents, but it was thought that there is no injustice in its application. If a man becomes a permanent citizen his money is returned to him. Accordingly it was decided to enforce the by-law.

Tara

A representative of the Hydro Electric Commission was in Tara last Thursday, and the next duty of the Council will be to canvass the town to ascertain how many of our citizens will install the lights in their homes and business places. The Commission requires this information before they can proceed with the work. In conversation with the representative of the Commission. The leader learned that the cost to Tara per horse power will be $3637. Tara has contracted for 100 horse power.

The Methodist and Presbyterian churches held a Mass Meeting on Sunday evening, in Wain's Hall. The soldiers under Capt Dalzell and Lieut. Martin occupied the front seats, and the hall was filled, although the evening was very disagreeable owing to the rain. Rev. W. S. Daniels had charge of the service. In a short address he strongly condemned so much time and attention being given over to sports, and dancing especially came in for very severe criticism. Rev. R. MacCallum delivered an interesting and descriptive address on "The Tragedy of Belgium" Mr T. C. Allan, postmaster of Wiarton, who is favorably known here, gave a short address and devoted his time principally to the subject of recruiting. Mr. Allan has two sons in khaki and several other near relatives. His address was very much to the point and thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience. Music was supplied by the united choirs of the two churches and the Regimental Band. The collection for the evening was given to the Red Cross Fund.

Chesley

Stanley King, son of Mr and Mrs. John King has completed his fourth year in Toronto University and left this week for overseas service in the Motor Transportation Co. Stanley's auto knowledge will come useful to him in rushing troops to the front.

The armories were tastefully decorated with bunting and flags on Saturday last for the tea given by five enthusiastic young ladies in aid of Red Cross work and they were especially favored with the first spring-like day, which assuredly brightened the occasion. Tea was served at small tables, on which were arranged bouquets of red carnations, and dispensed by Rena Stewart, Jean Johnston, Lilias Maxwell, Josie Stanley, Barbara Wenzel and Laura Lamont who were instrumental in raising over $60 for our wounded heroes. These young ladies wish to thank anyone who helped toward making this tea a success.

The appeal of Thomas Blake, from a conviction for resisting Constable Kidd on the 19th of November last while the latter attempted to seize a case of whiskey which he was carrying under his arm, has been dismissed with costs and the conviction made by magistrate W. D. Bell and C. J. Halliday has been sustained. The case had considerable local interest because of the point which was involved. The decision now handed out establishes that a constable, charged with enforcement of the Liquor License Law, who believes that any man has liquor about him which he is intending to sell or keep for sale, is justified in seizing the liquor and if resisted has the right to arrest the individual. It is a serious thing to resist a constable in the discharge of his duty and the laws of Canada must be respected. People who are not loyal enough to follow the example of His Majesty the King and Lord Kitchener, who are totally abstaining during the war are not likely to receive much sympathy in their efforts to evade the law. It would appear from a letter received from the License Department by Magistrate Bell that the solicitor for the Department, after perusing the evidence taken at the first trial, gave it as his opinion that Constable Kidd would have been justified in arresting Blake when he refused to hand over his liquor.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Keep Children Well

To keep the little ones well the bowels must be kept regular and the stomach sweet. Nine-tenths of childhood ailments are caused by derangements of these organs. Baby's Own Tablets never fail to regulate the stomach and bowels—that is why thousands of mothers would give no other medicine to their little ones. Concerning them Mrs. Chas. A Turner, Marie Joseph, N. S. writes—"We have been using Baby's Own Tablets off and on for the past year and a half and have found nothing to equal them." The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a package from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

Spring ailments are not imaginary. Even the most robust find the winter months most trying to their health Confinement indoors often in overheated and nearly always badly ventilated rooms—in the home, the office, the shop and school—taxes the vitality of even the strongest. The blood becomes thin and watery and is clogged with impurities. Some people have headaches and a feeling of langour. Others are low-spirited and nervous. Still others are troubled with disfiguring pimples and skin eruptions; while some get up in the morning feeling just as tired as when they went to bed. These are all spring symptoms that the blood is out of order and that a medicine is needed. Many people take a purgative medicine in the spring. This is a serious mistake. You cannot cure your self with a medicine that gallops through your system and leaves you weaker still. This is all a purgative does. What you need to give you strength in the spring is a tonic medicine that will enrich the blood and soothe the jangled nerves. And the one always reliable tonic and blood purifier is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills These Pills not only banish spring weakness but guard you against the more serious ailments that follow, such as anemia, nervous debility, indigestion, rheumatism and other diseases due to bad blood. In proof of this Mrs. D. E. Hughes, Hazenmore, Sask., says:—"About a year ago I was badly run down, my nerves were all unstrung, and I could not go upstairs without stopping to rest. As I was a long ways from a doctor I determined to take Dr. Williams Pink Pills and in the course of a few weeks I felt like a new person. As an all round restorative I can heartily recommend this medicine."

If you are ailing this spring you cannot afford, in your own interest, to overlook so valuable a medicine as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

OWEN SOUND

Rev Geo C. Robertson was yesterday inducted by the Presbytery of Owen Sound, as minister of Knox Church, Sydenham, and Woodford. The induction took place at Heath Head. Rev P.T. Pilkey, M. A. of Knox church, Owen Sound, conducted the devotional exercises and preached the sermon, while Rev. G.S. Scott, Kilsyth, addressed the minister. The address to the congregation was delivered by Rev J. B. Fraser, M. D. Annan. Notwithstanding the unfavorable condition of the roads, the fine day brought a very fair turnout to greet their new minister. After the induction ceremony, the ladies served very dainty refreshments which were much enjoyed by all. Rev. Mr. Robertson has been latterly in Prince Edward Island but formerly spent one year in a charge near Wiarton. He commences his pastorate under very favorable auspices, and we extend our heartiest good wishes for a successful ministry.

Last Tuesday morning Mrs W. H. Robbins of 3rd. Ave. East received an official communication from Ottawa apprising her of the fact that her son, Pte. J. W. Robbins of the 39th Battalion is wounded and in a serious condition in a French Hospital at Wimereux. The communication gives the information that the wounds are in the legs and thighs and that they are considered serious. The wounds are the result of a gunshot. Pte Robbins was well known in Owen Sound, and his father and brother are both members of the 147th Batt. From given information that the wounds were incurred it would seem that some serious complications have set in.

BARRIERS DAMAGED.

Bad Weather Has Given German Subs Entry to North Sea.

PARIS, April 3.—(Delayed.)—Owing to the fact that bad weather has damaged the Entente Allies' barriers, causing mines to drift and making the entrance to the channel easier, submarine activity in the North Sea has been more active during the last three weeks than for four months, according to a semi-official communication dealing with the marine situation. The communication says:

"During four months there was no torpedoing in the channel, but in the last three weeks enemy submarines have shown activity in this sea. This activity has succeeded owing to the fact that bad weather damaged the Allies' barriers, caused mines to drift and made entrance to the channel easier. The enemy doubtless possesses a large number of submarines, and can simultaneously attack in the North Sea and in the Mediterranean. Measures have been taken in concert with Great Britain to bar more effectively Pas de Calais and to multiply the trolls.

GERMANS MAKE GAINS

Violent Attacks Result in Advances Near Verdun.

They Have Taken the Remainder of the Village of Vaux and Have Penetrated the Forest to the South-east of Fort Douaumont—Attack Was Made by Division at Four Points at Once.

PARIS, April 3.—As a result of violent onslaughts Friday night both to the east and west of the Meuse the Germans have captured the remainder of the village of Vaux which remained in possession of the French, and have also penetrated a portion of the Caillette wood, lying to the south of Fort Douaumont.

The Germans followed up Saturday night their success in taking the village of Vaux on Friday night with an attack in very large force against the French positions in the Douaumont-Vaux line, centring their efforts against the Bois de la Caillette, south-east of Fort Douaumont. They succeeded in penetrating the wood, but were driven back into the northern part of the wood by a French counter-attack.

The Germans used over a full division (some 25,000 men) in the attack, which was preceded by an exceptionally heavy bombardment by the heaviest German artillery. The attack was made at four points simultaneously.

As soon as the Germans had forced their way into the forest strong French counter-attacks were begun at once, and part of the ground lost was recovered.

The official communique issued by the French War Office last night announced that the French have now entirely withdrawn from the village of Vaux, in which the Germans first gained a footing on March 11, completing their occupation in the attack of Friday night. The French line now extends along the outskirts of the village.

During Friday night the Germans launched a terrific attack on the eastern bank of the Meuse with the portion of the village of Vaux remaining in French hands as the objective. The attack gained for the Germans a foothold in the western part of this village, in the eastern part of which they gained several houses in the assault of March 11. This success gives the Germans practical control of the village which lies to the north-east of the higher ground on which the fort bearing the same name is situated. On the occasion of the earlier German success here the Germans sought to push on toward the fort but were repulsed. The successes were won by the second of two heavy attacks. These attacks covered the sector between the wood to the south of Haudremont and the region of Vaux. The first assault, which was in the nature of a surprise attack by a large force, attacked the village from the north and south at the same time but failed to reach the French lines on either side of the village. A second attack was made immediately. By this attempt the Germans were able to get a foothold in the western part of the village.

Four fresh brigades participated in the attack, which ended in the occupation of the village, says an eyewitness of the battle.

The assault began with a night attack, which is becoming more and more preferred by the Germans. All Friday evening the village and its surroundings were copiously shelled. The attack began from the north at 3 o'clock in the morning by a brigade debouching from trenches on the hillside east of Fort Douaumont and advancing as far as the railroad line in front of the advanced French position, where it was checked by French infantry and a barring fire, which was so intense that the assailants were unable to hold their ground. They retired to their trenches much depleted in numbers.

It was a fresh brigade which made the second attack towards 5 o'clock in the morning. It came from the east with an abundant supply of powerful grenades that demolished the houses occupied by the defenders of the town. Though partly buried under the ruins the French stuck stubbornly to their posts, which they ceded only step by step and inflicted severe losses on the attacking force.

With the houses demolished by grenades and shells, there seemed no reason for maintaining the position and the French were ordered to retire on positions prepared further to the west. The detachment still maintained a galling fire as it went back slowly and in good order, a certain of French shell-fire keeping the Germans from pursuing.

After this partial success the Germans tried to profit from their new position to overwhelm the French position around Douaumont. About two o'clock Saturday afternoon they endeavored to advance along a road bordering a ravine and running up toward the hamlet of Caillette, near Fort Douaumont.

Again it was a fresh division, the third engaged since the evening before, that attacked the French lines of defence, but this time they were unable to advance at any point. The attacking column was stopped at a point where it was exposed to a raking shell fire which decimated it. The survivors gave way to a fourth fresh brigade, which charged courageously, but without success.

The result of the attack, lasting twelve hours, by 40,000 men, was limited to the occupation of the ruins of the village of Vaux.

SEVERAL SHIPS SUNK.

British and Neutral Craft Destroyed by German Submarines.

LONDON, April 3.—The British steamship Ashburton has been sunk by shrapnel shells fired by a German submarine. Five members of the crew have been taken to hospitals. The vessel, according to the Exchange Telegraph Company, was not armed.

The Ashburton sailed from New Zealand Feb. 23 for London, and was last reported as leaving Montevideo, Uruguay, March 1. The vessel was 4,446 tons gross, and was built in 1905 for the Australian Steamship Company of London. She was 382 feet long, 50 feet beam, and 26 feet deep.

Liner Achilles Sunk.

LONDON, April 2.—The British liner Achilles was sunk Friday. Four members of her crew are missing. The captain and sixty-two other persons from the steamer have been landed.

The Achilles was in the trade between Australia and England. She was a vessel of 7,042 tons gross and owned by the Ocean Steamship Co. of Liverpool. She sailed from Sydney, N.S.W., January 19, for London and Liverpool. The last report of the Achilles shows that she left Cape Town, where she had evidently put in on voyage, March 6th.

Norwegian Ship Sunk.

LONDON, April 3.—Lloyd's reports that the Norwegian steamship Peter Hamre was sunk Saturday night while at anchor. One man, the sole survivor of the crew of 15, has been landed at Kentish Knock Lightship. The Peter Hamre had a tonnage of 1,080 gross, and was 234 feet long. She was owned by S. Tonneson & Co. of Bergen, Norway.
